Block SF President, Ben Brown, stated that he was a bit disappointed with the turnout but was glad to see the band win the trophy as they certainly deserved some recognition for their attendance and participation at the football games.

The trophy will be awarded again during basketball season.

Riddled Gridders Clash With San Jose Here Friday

San Francisco's weary gridders will host San Jose's Jaguars Friday in the Ram stadium. The Rams, down to the barest essentials, hope to bolster their record in the coming encounter.

Nature has been the Rams' greatest enemy this season, taking most of the first string through injuries.

Despite these handicaps, the Rams have come up with three stunning victories in four starts and are tied with Foothill for second place. San Jose will be the decider.

San Francisco's underdogs, inexperienced and shorthanded, have fought desperately against the better teams in the conference with more success than might have been expected.

Though ailing, the Rams are in high spirits for the San Jose clash. "We're short on players but long on spirit," said Ram head coach Dutch Elston, "and we don't intend to be stopped by San Jose."

San Francisco and San Jose are pretty evenly matched teams except that the Jaguars still have some of their first string players. The Jags are a tough team that fights doggedly on defense and has a capable offense if it gets a chance to use it.

A steady, plodding team, San Jose is not of championship calibre, but it has perseverance and could upset almost any team in the conference.

With a defense averaging scarcely 200 pounds, the Jags have allowed no sizeable scores to be run up against them, and their split wing T offense has been effective in giving other clubs a run for their money.

San Jose quarterback George Walker combining with end Gary Titchenal and halfback Bill Pollock could cause some trouble for the Ram defense.

The Jaguars play steady ball and are not an on-off club. San Francisco also plays steadily, and so far its record has depended on the on-off days of other clubs.

Booters Devastate New Soccer Conference

Going into the second half of the soccer season, the undefeated Ram soccermen accumulated six points to lead the new Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference.

In soccer two points account for a win, a tied score gives both teams a plus and a minus point, while a loss of a game leaves the team with two minus points and no plus points.

The number of goals scored in a contest has no actual bearing in the championship race, except that it indicates a decisive or slight victory, as the case may be.

The Rams scored 23 goals in three contests and allowed only six goals, which indicates its superiority in the race for the championship.

San Mateo, with a 4-2 point record, poses the only possible threat for the Rams to take the championship in the second half of the season with only three games remaining.

Menlo College has a 2-4 point record, and Diablo Valley College a 0-6 point standing. A miracle has to happen for these two competing teams to have any influence on the race for the championship.

In three "friendly" games, the Rams proved their insurmountability by beating San Francisco State College 4-3, San Quentin 4-1, and more recently a French Navy team, 3-2.

The French team was the only team which gave Ram soccermen a hard nut to crack, but, aware of their reputation, they finally managed to win, despite a 2-0 disadvantage in the first quarter.

Coach Roy Diederichsen said that he is quite satisfied with his team, but added, that since there has not been a real challenge for his soccermen, the actual capacity of his team has not been brought to light.

"I am looking forward to my booters playing some of the four-year colleges to give them harder competition and to permit each player to display his true potential," Diederichsen commented.

Top scorer in the Menlo game, Art Vigil, and outside-right Colixto Cuevas will be lost for the rest of the season.

The loss of these two players is definitely going to hurt the team, but the two vacant spots are already filled with adequate players showing sufficient drive.

With a little more coordination in the back-line and quicker passing in the front-line, the Rams need fear no opponent.

IFC Reorganizes United Student Party, Returns To Active Role In Campus Political Circles

By Herm Kligerman

Reorganization here of the United Student Party by the Inter-Fraternity Council this semester is intended to afford fraternities more prestige and influence on campus, IFC President Joel Cohen announced this week.

The last time USP was active on campus was in the Fall of 1961. It gave way to the Organized Students Party the next semester.

Organized political parties were abolished, as such, one semester later, in the Fall of 1962.

USP reached its peak in campus politics in the Fall of 1959 when its candidates won the top six student government offices over the Individuals, the opposition party at the time.

In the Spring of 1960 the Students Representative Party was organized. This power existed until the Fall of 1962, although it was under attack by several student government officials as allegedly establishing a political "dynasty" on campus.

Dan Collins, Associated Student president at that time, recommended the abolition of political parties in Spring 1962, and the organization of an open nominating convention. He conceded, however, that individual candidates might form political parties if they chose after the convention.

This proposal was approved by Student Council and is still in existence.

This is not the first semester that IFC has officially entered campus politics. Since its inception until the spring of 1956, IFC had put candidates on the ballot in general AS elections. Nominations ceased in 1956 because IFC feared an alleged "kiss of death" label.

However, in the Fall of 1959, the IFC consolidated with the Inter-Sorority Council to form a political party and placed candidates on the election ballot. This party was short-lived, since it proved ineffective.

Cohen remarked that with the IFC's reorganization of the USP this semester, he hopes that fraternity interests will be restored at the college.

IFC will select candidates at a convention held prior to a general nominating convention later in the semester.

The RAMS party, organized last semester by AS President Vince Contreras to "represent the majority of students," is also expected to play a major role in the upcoming AS elections.

Rich Hellesto, IFC representative, brought up the motion to reorganize the USP at a recent IFC meeting. Following discussion, the motion passed 9-0-3.

This is the second move by IFC this semester in an attempt to become more "individualized." Earlier, Student Council approved an amendment permitting IFC's walkout from Council of Organizations.

Although this action is still pending approval by a student vote, IFC and ISC need send only one representative each to COO meetings rather than a representative for each fraternity and sorority.

Joan Brannigan Wins ISC Award For High Grades

Joan Brannigan was presented with the Inter-Sorority Council Scholarship Award at the Associated Women Student fashion show-tea, November 6, on the basis of her 3.6 grade point average.

The trophy, first awarded in Fall 1961, is presented each semester to the freshman woman with the highest grade point average in the first mid-term period.

Although uncommitted to a major field of studies at present, Miss Brannigan is especially interested in the sciences. She is, however, in no rush to settle on one field. "I'd like to get my feet wet before I dive," she commented.

After City College she plans to attend either the University of California at Berkeley or the University of San Francisco.

Miss Brannigan is the first graduate of St. Paul's High School to win the award. In the past, four coeds from George Washington High School and one from Lincoln High School have won the award.

Past recipients include Kathryn A. Kafafian, Karen Kriete, Jan Meilach and Nicolette Balala.

Feminine Fling Is Next AWS Event

The Feminine Fling Awards Party, to be held Friday, January 10, at Smith Hall, is the next scheduled Associated Women Student function according to Rosie Fang, AWS president.

Festivities for this annual event will include a light supper and the introduction of the newly elected presidents of the Associated Women Students, the Recreation Association and the Inter-Sorority Council.

A Leap Year Dance is also being planned.

A conflict surrounds the upcoming Leap Year Dance because it is scheduled for February 28 while the Chinese Club Sweetheart Ball is scheduled for February 29. Since two big social events cannot take place on successive nights, the question is which will be when.

Time Running Out For Ram

Instructor Proposes Moving Statue Inside

For seven years the Redwood Ram has been desecrated by buckets of paint and blow torches.

Now Emmett Smith, photography instructor here, thinks it is time for a change.

The Redwood Ram made its debut at the 1939 World's Fair on Treasure Island as a handicraft exhibit by Dudley Carter, wood sculptor. It was later presented to the college by Timothy Pflueger, designer and architect of the college buildings.

The Ram remained on the west campus until 1956 when it was moved to its present resting place, and the defacement began.

Smith proposes that the many layers of paint be removed and the Ram restored to the original wood, and then placed inside where it will be safe. As an alternative for the paint throwers, Smith suggests, that "a concrete mold be made of the Ram and placed in the Ram's present spot so that it can be painted."

The project would cost money, but Smith hopes that students and faculty members will be enthusiastic and contribute "to save the Ram before it is impossible to save."

THE REDWOOD RAM moves to its present location.

False Alarm Sounds—And Students Weather Storm

Shades of April 1 manifested themselves here last Tuesday, in the form of a false alarm.

The alarm, which sounded at 2:15 p.m., brought students from the warmth of their political science class, out into the blistering wind and rain storm.

Robert Johnson's political science class, which meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1:45 to 3 p.m., responded to the alarm, and huddled together in the alcove of the library, waiting for the all-clear signal.

After a lapse of 20 minutes, and no sound of the signal, confused students, wet and disgruntled, returned to C-257 to resume their political science class.

Classical Guitar Scheduled For C-Hour Program

A classical guitar instructor at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and a City College pianist will appear in the first program of a series of student recitals during College Hour tomorrow in A-133, according to Richard Fenner, music instructor here.

The guitarist, John Reible, who studied in Barcelona, Spain is enrolled in evening courses here. Together with William Kalfas, pianist, Reible will take part in a joint classical recital featuring a set of variations by the three Bs — Beethoven, Bach and Brubeck.

According to Fenner, a similar concert held last semester was a great success. "We had people standing — the choral room was overflowing. This gives us encouragement to continue this year," Fenner stated.

Other students scheduled to participate in future recitals are guitarist Richard Avao, pianist R. J. Williams and baritone Robert Johnston.

"We have many talented and accomplished performers at the college, and anyone interested in performing should get in touch with me in A-128," Fenner added.

Student Interest Sparks Spread Of AGS Study Clinic

Student interest continues to spark Alpha Gamma Sigma's study habit clinic, William Richardson, AGS adviser, announced last week.

Richardson was pleased with the number of students attending the clinic's second meeting and noted, "At least three students were returnees."

The AGS adviser mentioned that he has acquired use of several rooms on the same floor of Science Hall for the study habit clinic in addition to S-214.

In this way, Richardson explained, all students having difficulty in a particular subject may meet in one room, while students having scholastic difficulty in a different subject will meet in another room.

The number of students attending future clinic meetings will determine the need for additional rooms, Richardson added.

Methods to develop good study habits highlighted the discussion at the clinic's second meeting.

Betsy Erkkila, secretary of AGS, said, "The clinic is a very good idea; the first two meetings were concerned mainly with general discussions of study habits; however, after the clinic gets going, concentration will be on individual problems."

AGS member Jim Doudiet hopes to see more students interested in the clinic, while George Helmsdoerfer, mathematics and physical science major, believes, "student interest will determine the future success of the clinic."

Program Of One-Act Plays Goes Into Last Performance Friday And Saturday Nights

By Marsha Latham

Going into final performances Friday and Saturday nights, the three one-act plays, currently sharing one program in the campus theater "seem to have created quite a hit with audiences here," Robert Lasley, drama production manager stated recently.

Antigone, by Jean Anouilh, The Ugly Duckling, by A. A. Milne, and Eugene Ionesco's The Bald Soprano make up the trio and are staged in that order. Tickets are $1 or free to Associated Student cardholders, and curtain is at 8 p.m.

Lasley commented that the plays "have been very well attended" by the faculty and students here, as well as by students from high schools and many other interested persons.

Antigone has a cast of six, including Sandy Lundwall, Larry O'Leno, Jeanne Chieffo, Mike Corrigan, Dale Altvater and John Gilman. Direction is by James Haran, drama and English instructor.

Anouilh's modern version of Sophocles' Antigone had its first performance in Paris in 1944 during the Occupation. Notables Katherine Cornell and Sir Cedric Hardwicke had the leading roles in a New York production, and Vivien Leigh and Sir Lawrence Olivier starred in the Greek tragedy in a London production.

The Ugly Duckling follows with the lighter touch in a comic dilemma of beauty versus brains.

Cast and directed by Delta Psi Omega, National Drama Society, the seven roles are played by Brenda Goldstein, Ken Bachtold, Miss Lundwall, Leon Moniot, Sandra Lee Turner, Altvater and Alonso Gonzalez.

The Bald Soprano, which is under the direction of Lasley, adds another note of humor to complete the evening's entertainment.

Actors in the third production are Andrea Fulton, Bill Shattuck, Lynne Goodrich, Mike Dobrinsky, Cherry Mir and Bachtold.

Lasley commented that while the three plays call for 19 parts, "there are only 16 performers because three ambitious thespians, Bachtold, Altvater and Miss Lundwall, carry dual roles."

Gowns worn by Miss Lundwall and Miss Chieffo in Antigone were created especially for this production by Robert Johnston, a music major who pursues drama costuming as a minor.

Lasley reported that the drama department will soon be engaged in a new production as auditions have been underway for the past week for The Madwoman of Chaillot, by Jean Giraudoux.

Requiring 40 players, it is by far the largest production attempted this semester, he stated, adding that "although numerous try-outs have shown promise, the cast is not set at the moment."

CHERRY MIR, the maid in Ionesco's The Bald Soprano, is shown here telling her own little joke. The play, along with Antigone and The Ugly Duckling, will have its final performances Friday and Saturday nights.

CJCSGA Meet Set At Asilomar

The California Junior College Student Government Association will hold its state convention at the Asilomar convention center near Pacific Grove, November 21 through 23, Vince Contreras, Associated Students president here, announced today.

The program scheduled is similar to that of the Area Conference meeting held here recently, Contreras explained.

A series of workshops will be conducted, and this college will be represented in each by delegates appointed by Contreras.

A President's Workshop will be held and the student president from each college will attend.

"The two-year colleges have been divided according to enrollment for purposes of assignment to all but the President's Workshop," according to Ted Gallagher, student coordinator of workshops, from Cabrillo College.

Delegates from this college who will attend the convention are John Theilen, State Information chairman; Rich Thomas, AS Card Sales chairman; Lynn Goodrich, Campus Affairs coordinator; Al Poletti, sophomore member of the Student Council; Kathy Carsner, Rally Commissioner, and Contreras.

Students Apply For Post Office Jobs

More than 400 men students attended a meeting during College Hour October 30 to file applications for holiday post office jobs, Joseph A. Amori, director of placement, said today.

Positions available are those of drivers, clerk-carriers, air mail handlers, parcel post clerks and sorters. Hourly pay range for these jobs starts at $2.25 for regular shifts and $2.48 for the evening shifts.

The work period extends from December 1 through December 31, Amori said, depending upon the location of the job.

For the first time in several years, he explained, competition for post office jobs in this area is keen. Because of new management procedures and automation, the total number of jobs for the holiday season has decreased from a high of 5000 to an all-time low of 2300.

Interested students who are qualified for any of these positions may report to the college placement center in S-188.

Vote According To Laws In Constitution Would Help Cure 'Shady' Election Procedures

TWO WEEKS AGO, on Wednesday, October 30 and Thursday, October 31, students voted for the ratification of the Associated Student Constitution. Results were alarming. Out of approximately 7000 day-time students currently enrolled here, only 188 votes were cast: 164 voted for the ratification and 24 voted against it.

The election itself was an open election so that every student could vote, but the story behind the voting procedure of this particular election has yet to be known by every student here.

A typical course in campus politics, in which the Associated Student President is the head, proceeds in the following manner: the AS President and the Election Commissioner decide the date, time and place of the election to be held.

Also, how the election is to be regulated: method for voting (by ballot in this particular case) and where to keep the ballot box until the polls close (when as in this case again, the election was scheduled for two consecutive days).

In addition, each voter signs his name in a register. After the polls close, the ballots are tallied and the total compared with the number of names that appear on the register.

Being potential politicians and lobbyists, campaigning is also undertaken in which posters make their appearance, taking the propaganda approach: vote FOR the ratification of the constitution. It is simply said and implies no reading between the lines...

In this election the Election Commissioner tallied 186 ballots and the AS President counted 188 names on the register. But the Election Commissioner is counting the ballots... at home, while the AS President is... in the AS office.

The AS President immediately perceived a difference of two votes and a recount was made; this time the Election Commissioner came up with a different number and the AS President with his original number. Both then decided that the second count was good enough and the constitution was declared ratified.

A first interesting point is that the voting began Wednesday and continued the next day. Where were the ballots and the register kept, by the way? In a locked safe? Or simply in the AS office where anybody on campus can roam through whenever his fancy strikes him?

A second point is that after polls close, witnesses are usually present for the opening of the ballot box and the counting of the ballots to prevent any fraud. At this election, the ballots were counted at the Election Commissioner's home.

A third point is that a register, listing the names of every student who voted, is usually kept under surveillance by witnesses in order that names are not added after the polls close.

The Guardsman is not stating that additional names were inserted in the register after the polls closed and/or that additional ballots were cast in the ballot box. But speculation is possible in such a case: was this election RIGGED?

The practices used in this election are somewhat "shady." It is simply inadmissible that such practices having existed be permitted to continue.

To remedy the situation and hoping that no further cases such as this one develop in the future, The Guardsman proposes—and urges—that the following suggestions be considered by the Associated Students:

It is imperative that this particular election be rescheduled and a new vote taken in the approved method of conducting elections, as stated in Article VI, Sections 1 to 3 inclusive of the "old" AS constitution.

Let us not forget President Louis G. Conlan's address at the recent area conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association: "As long as students act with responsibility, they should be allowed to exercise as much self direction as the law allows. Students should make decisions, live by them and learn by them.

"Well-designed student government programs," the President added eloquently, "provide practical experiences which develop values by which one can nobly live." Need we say more?

Student Abandons Conventional Transportation — Rides A Bike

The bicycle rack in front of Bungalow 6, which currently houses half a dozen bikes, is evidence that not all students are willing to "take the bus and leave the driving..."

One such student is Lynne Miller, an ingenious sophomore, who abandons conventional means of transportation to ride his bicycle.

Miller, who says he does this "for the exercise," is one of the few students who choose this unusual means of transportation.

Asked if he had any other reasons, Miller said, "It beats looking for a parking space or fighting for a seat on the bus during rush hours.

"There is never any parking problem. Just hitch it to the bicycle rack outside Bungalow 6, and there is no danger of getting a ticket from a campus policeman."

Bicycles are sturdy little vehicles that need little care and cost very little to maintain. The colors to choose from are almost unlimited.

Miller advocates that "students give the bicycle idea a second thought, the next time the bus passes them by or they have to park in the pit."

The more you think about it the better it sounds.

HENRY MICHALSKI with his collection of campaign buttons.

Michalski Spends Leisure In Campaign Button Hobby

By Hugh Wilson

Throughout the ages man has collected various objects of one form or another, such as antiques, matchbooks, coins and stamps.

City College student Henry Michalski, is a collector also. Only his collection is the most unusual of all, for he collects presidential campaign buttons.

Michalski, 18, began collecting during the 1956 Republican National Convention held in San Francisco. At that time he obtained 15 buttons from most of the candidates running for that office.

Still undecided as to what to do with his small collection, Michalski put them away, until his interest was re-awakened during the last presidential election of 1960. At that time Life Magazine devoted an entire issue to a collection of politicians, which was on display in Washington.

The display, made up of campaign posters, sheet music and campaign buttons, caught the interest of young Michalski who became determined to begin his own collection of presidential politicians.

Starting then, he visited antique shops, junk yards and foraged around in attics and basements. The result is that his collection numbers more than 800 campaign buttons.

"One of the greatest thrills," Michalski said, "is searching for these buttons. Many of them are quite rare and very hard to find.

"To be a good collector," he added, "you have to be part bloodhound; it takes a great deal of time and effort to trace and find some buttons."

The American Political Items Club, of which Michalski is a member, has helped him in his quest for finding additions to his collection. Composed of professional men, students and collectors, the club helps it members to find hard-to-get items and also acts as a clearing house among members.

"Some of the buttons in my collection cost as much as $10," Michalski stated, "so it is a relief when I can find an item I want in our monthly journal and be able to trade or buy it, rather than have to deal with a private party."

Michalski's collection includes campaign buttons from the time of Presidents Lincoln and Tyler to the present. He estimates that his entire collection, excluding programs, post cards and campaign posters, is worth about $1200.

Perhaps the most unusual item, and one that Michalski values highly, is a campaign button for Eugene V. Debs, 1912 unsuccessful presidential candidate.

Among other items in Michalski's collection is a campaign ribbon from the convention in which President McKinley was nominated.

Michalski hopes eventually to collect every campaign button, from the time of Andrew Jackson to the present.

Vietnamese-Speaking Hyman Meets Mme. Nhu

By Chris Walzig

Vietnam is the hottest subject in the news these days and an American who speaks fluent Vietnamese is, just naturally, a hot subject for newsprint.

Such a person has been uncovered at the college in the person of Bruce Hyman, a 6-5, heavily-bearded, quiet-spoken giant who studied Vietnamese for 52 weeks in an army language school and in turn instructed American G.I.s in that language.

Hyman's army life started quietly enough. He was working for an intelligence agency when the language training was offered to him. After language school he was sent to the East Coast where he also met his wife to be, Pauline.

From the East Coast the army sent him to the Philippines where his work was strictly classified. Then Hyman received his discharge, but it wasn't long before he was recalled during the Berlin Crisis to instruct special forces troops in Vietnamese.

"It was hellish," Hyman reflected. "They gave us four weeks to instruct each group before it was ordered to Vietnam. We just had time to cover the rudiments of the language, then the group would be taken away from us to be replaced by another group.

"What made it tough was reading about some fellow, whom we had gotten to know, being shot while on patrol in Vietnam just a couple of months after he had been sent over."

After his recall, the army retained Hyman for nearly a year, and the former University of California student finally returned to San Francisco. He went to work for Joint Publications Research at the Department of Commerce, translating Vietnamese newspapers, trade journals and the like.

Hyman doesn't have to go to the office on Front street to do his work. Joint Publications mails his work to him and he translates on a contract basis.

"We do most of our work for government agencies like the State Department," he mused, "but for some reason, I've never had to translate any communist material from South Vietnam."

When Madame Ngo Dinh Nhu, the Dragon Lady of Vietnam, arrived in San Francisco for a series of speeches, it followed that Hyman would go and even speak to her "ex-highness."

"Every Vietnamese I've met, from as far back as I remember, has expressed deep-seated hatred for Mrs. Nhu. It's interesting to note that her middle name, Dinh, means 'Flash of lightning, or rage.'

"My wife and I spoke to her before her speech at the Commonwealth Club on October 28, and she was quite surprised when I greeted her in her native tongue."

During her speech, Hyman noted that what she said was a good expression of her personality, and in no way reflected her government's views. Views with which Hyman is readily familiar.

Hyman's major field of study is international relations, but he plans to continue his studies in the Oriental languages.

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

NOW THAT THE municipal elections are over, we are at liberty to divulge our system of picking candidates and deciding how to vote on propositions.

At every election, we are besieged by dozens of candidates scurrying about in search of various offices. According to themselves, they are all the "...logical choice..." for the office. Aside from the usual platform of low-cost housing, better transportation and, in short—everything and anything as long as it is bigger and better—the candidates run basically on the platform of "...I'm a good guy and my opponent is a bum."

His opponent, on the other hand, answers something to the effect that it is better to be an animal than a serpent.

On these happy notes, the voter is expected to go to the polls and pick some sort of menagerie for City Hall.

These candidates tell us that they are, "The most experienced, best qualified, and, above all, men of great integrity."

In addition to this, Charlie Politico is backed by various committees such as, The Committee For More Park Benches, The Committee For Improvement, The Committee Against Higher Taxes and The Committee Of Responsible Citizens.

All of these sound strangely like The Committee For Charlie Politico.

The last, but hardly the least, headache for the voter comes in the form of Propositions and Amendments.

These are a real ball!

In addition to the usual issues to grant a greater wage to some group of city employees or to cut some benefits, we are plagued with propositions which seem to be designed merely to confuse the already mystified resident.

For months before the elections the city's billboards are covered with pleas to cast a ballot for Proposition W, which says that we need shorter grass in the park, or, vote yes on Proposition V, which favors pensions for retired windmill keepers.

The campaigns reach the point where the beleaguered balloter is afraid to walk around a street corner for fear of being snowed under by a deluge of literature, for or against a dozen or so pertinent issues.

In addition to this, the poor fellow is liable to be run down in the street by one of the many touring loud speakers proclaiming the virtues of their cause.

By the time the potential voter gets home at night, his mind is reeling under the impact of a day at the receiving end of political campaigning.

Is he supposed to vote Yes on A B, D, G and H, or is it No on these and Yes on C, E, F and I?

Does Sherlock stand for lower taxes and more growth, or is that Politico?

Who are the Supervisors who promised to build an Angel Island approach to the freeway?

In answer to these problems, we offer this advice. Two or three days prior to the election, go to the barber shop, or the beauty shop, as the case may be.

Take a small pad and pencil and casually ask whoever is working on you their opinion of the election. Proceed to jot down everything said. When you have gathered all these opinions, go home and barricade yourself in your house until the election. Leave the radio off, the telephone off the hook and don't admit anyone until after you have cast your ballot.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

IT ISN'T UNTIL he starts attending college that the young man really starts to appreciate what it means to be a bachelor—the bad points, we mean.

When the unmarried male is not going to college he is usually working at a job, full time, and he can afford to have somebody come in to take over all of the duties that are usually performed by a female in the capacity of a wife or otherwise.

But when he is enrolled in an institution of higher learning such as this, he probably has to survive on the wages of a part-time job and do all of the labors of household existance by himself, unless he's real cagey.

Probably the most unpleasant task of housekeeping for the male is that of dishwashing. This is unless, of course, he has one of those handy-dandy automatic dishwashers that you see advertised when you are riding the Muni to classes in the morning.

And we know he doesn't have a handy-dandy dishwasher and attend dear old City College. Why, the possessive status alone would get him into Stanford with no sweat at all.

So what does the enterprising young male do when it comes to dishwashing without resorting to marriage and disaster?

The local supermarkets have a very good supply of paper plates on hand at very low prices, and, if the bachelor is not particular what he eats off, these solve the problem very nicely.

Of course, if he is going to eat off paper plates he may as well go all the way and use paper cups and wooden knives and forks.

The next unpleasant household task on the list is the making of the bed.

If the young bachelor entertains in his apartment, he of course would like to have his bed made. If he has a little Spartan blood running through his veins, he can probably fix it so he never has to unmake it.

For about $15 at the local Army-Navy store, one can pick up a pretty good war surplus sleeping bag.

Then all the ingenious young man has to do is unroll it on the floor beside the bed when he wishes to retire at night. In the morning he can roll it back up and chuck it into the closet with nobody the wiser.

The next major problem of easing household labors is in washing and ironing. There just seems to be no way of getting out of this type of work without turning into a scrounge.

The usual young man living alone does not always have a washing machine on the premises and he cannot afford to send everything to the local laundry. He must therefore resort to the use of the self-service laundromats that are sprinkled liberally about town but always ten blocks from where he lives.

Ironing time can be cut down by wearing sports coats on the campus and ironing only the front of the shirts (cuffs optional). There is no need to iron underwear; nobody's supposed to see that.

Socks? It would seem that society expects unmatched socks in the complete bachelor, so all a person has to do is throw a bunch of them in the drawer and catch-as-catch-can.

Of course we realize that a lot of male students probably do their housework the regular way, the hard way. For these poor fools, we can only say that we're sorry for them, VERY SORRY.

College Gains IBM Donation

Engineering Adds Machines—Value, $10,000

The International Business Machines Corporation last week donated equipment valued at over $10,000 to the college in ceremonies held on campus.

Presentation of the machines was made by B. W. Sheldon, IBM operation assistant in customer engineering, and S. S. Hoover, IBM accountant representative.

Official recipients of the gift were President Louis G. Conlan, Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education and Joseph A. Amori, director of placement.

The equipment includes a tape drive tester and a variable voltage power supply. Both machines have been assigned to the electronics department and will be used by instructors in the training programs.

IBM Corporation and the college have worked together over a long period of time on various training programs involving students.

A majority of the students have been placed in the San Francisco offices of the company, mostly as customer engineers. The work of these students has been so outstanding, Amori emphasized, that IBM depends upon the college for company recruitment in the engineering and electronic field.

The electronic and electrical departments have already started to give instruction to students in the use of the machines, and, according to Amori, "both faculty and students are more than pleased with this donation."

Models are being sought by the photography department for experience in illustration, portrait and fashion photography and possibly motion picture work, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced recently.

A list of prospective models has been compiled by Smith, and he hopes these coeds will come to see him for more information concerning modeling from 10 to 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays in the photography studio, C-249 and from 2 to 4 p.m. in the photography office, C-126.

Coeds include Constance Anderson, Elaine Barras, Alexis Bebenin, Leona Bergh, Lynn Blaskower, Mary Carter, Antonia Connich, Susan Daugusta, Leilani Dineo, Lynn Ewing, Domenica Flores, Nancy Gaskin, Melinda Glaser, Katherine Grable, Dawn Hartnett, Diana Holtsclaw, Maridolores Hughes.

Susan Jacobs, Lynn Kahan, Madeleine Klein, Louise Kurkjian, Pauline Law, Min Ja Lee, Margaret Lynch, Donna Mendia, June Merrill, S. Moore, Stella Mukulu, Yoko Murakita, Zelma Juanic Packnett, Frances Palmer, Mira Papara, Mary Parker, Jo Lynn Paul, Mermon Pender.

Maritza Ramirez, Kathleen Ray, Linda Renner, Bonnie Roy, Pauline Santos, Diana Shelton, Claudine Shuey, Jane Slattery and Celesta Throndson.

Three Separate Departments To Teach New Art Course

A new art course, taught by instructors from separate departments is now required for students in four fields.

The change is in the advertising art and design department's curriculum and provides for an interdepartmental survey course, William Davis, advertising art adviser, said today.

The course, listed as Art 50, visual arts survey, is required of all first semester students in advertising art and design, graphic arts and photography.

Since designers originate a design, photographers often illustrate the work and graphic arts personnel reproduce the picture, cooperation and understanding must exist between these fields, Davis explained.

Third semester advertising art majors are now given an opportunity for work experience through the course numbered art 10. After completing a prescribed set of courses with a satisfactory average, qualified students receive a minimum standard pay and college credit for the supervised off-campus employment in one of the professional art fields.

Medicine Subject Of Lecture Thursday

Dr. Cleve B. Vaughan, Jr., San Francisco orthopedic surgeon, will discuss medicine as a vocation during College Hour tomorrow in S-100.

Vaughan is a graduate of Stanford Medical School and a member of the San Francisco Medical Society. He will speak to members of the newly-formed Life and Medical Sciences Club, sponsored by instructors Samuel Carpenter and Ronald Hochede.

All interested students are invited to attend the talk.

Soph Ball Slated For December 6

Final preparations are being made for this semester's Sophomore Ball which will be held in the California and Mural rooms of the St. Francis Hotel, December 6, Sophomore Class President Steve Christ stated last week.

The highpoint of the ball, Christ declared, will be the crowning of the King and Queen contest winners. Each couple entering the contest must be sponsored by either a club, fraternity, or sorority, he stated.

Final rules concerning the method of selecting the winners and the distribution of prizes among the three place-winners will be announced by Christ at a later date.

Couples planning to attend the ball will be admitted free provided one of the couple has an Associated Student card. It is not necessary for both members of a couple to be registered here, Christ said.

Music by Walt Tolleson will set the mood for the theme of the dance which is Fascination.

Announcement of time and place for obtaining tickets to the ball is expected next week.

Two Films On Japan Set For Tomorrow

Two films, depicting the beauty of Japan, will be shown during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, announced today.

Kyoto, one of the films, is concerned with the city that is the religious center of Japan.

The second film is The New Silk Road, which shows the ancient trade routes from Europe to Japan.

Campus Police Officer Makes Dramatic Arrest In Hit And Run

By Tom Federoff

As a preview of the possible life he may lead in the future, Keith Woolwine, a student and Campus Police officer here, apprehended and arrested a suspected hit and run driver, November 1.

Woolwine, on his way home from a Halloween celebration about 1:40 a.m., came across an accident at Ocean and Manor avenues near the college.

The driver involved had hit a parked car with his '59 Ford, rammed it onto the sidewalk into a fire hydrant and knocked the plug off the hydrant, causing a deluge of water to flow.

Planning to assist the driver until additional help came, Woolwine got out of his car and started to light an emergency flare to warn passing motorists of the accident.

When Woolwine approached, the driver, a 24-year-old man about 6-6 in height, was attempting to disconnect his horn which had become stuck in the collision and was still sounding.

Upon questioning the driver as to what had happened, Woolwine was told by the youth that because he was tired and drowsy, he had fallen asleep at the wheel and then crashed. Judging from his actions, and the way the driver slurred his speech, Woolwine decided it was fairly obvious that the man had been drinking.

Then suddenly the man got into his car, backed up and drove away with his lights off.

Not being able to read the license number therefore, Woolwine jumped into his own car and gave chase up Ocean avenue. After turning left up Phelan avenue, Woolwine chased the fleeing Ford to a location in front of the college where he blocked the car by pulling in front of it.

(Campus Police officers are deputized by the Chief of the San Francisco Police Department and are authorized to enforce the law on the campus and in the avenues adjacent to it.)

Questioned as to why he had left the scene of the accident, the man replied by asking Woolwine to identify himself. After showing his police credentials, Woolwine was told by the hit and run suspect that he was driving his mother's car and had to get it home before reporting the accident.

Then when asked for his driver's license, the man responded by giving Woolwine a draft card. Woolwine told him again that he wanted his driver's license and nothing else. Responding belligerently, the youth finally produced a tattered old license.

Woolwine then told him that by leaving the scene of the accident he had knowingly committed a crime.

As a precautionary measure before taking the driver to Ingleside police station, Woolwine decided to handcuff him with a pair of cuffs he had been carrying in his car.

After handcuffing the man, Woolwine then drove him to the station where he turned him over to city police.

By the time they had arrived at Ingleside station, the police had already issued an all points bulletin to pick up the hit and run driver but had no identification to go by. Also, the fire department had been notified about the broken hydrant and had sent an emergency crew to shut off the water.

After receiving a "well done" acclamation from the officers at Ingleside station, Woolwine started home once more, certain that the events of the night were more than exciting enough for one Halloween.

Finance Chairman Resigns; Council Appoints Successor

Finance Chairman Judi Beverly officially submitted her resignation from that position at last Tuesday's meeting of Student Council.

The unexpected open post was filled immediately when council approved Eileen Marx's appointment as the new Finance Chairman. She was previously assistant to Miss Beverly who commented that her resignation was due to "personal reasons."

In other action, Mary Anne Ducommun was elected to a vacant seat on council. She has held several high school offices and was a representative to the Youth in Government Day at Sacramento this year.

Three vacancies still remain on council and Associated Student President Vince Contreras stated that additional nominations and elections may be made at next Tuesday's Student Council meeting.

Low freshmen are eligible for the vacant seats provided they have a 2.0 grade average in their first midterm.

Under new business, AS Vice President Phyllis Webb moved to amend the five-day-old revised constitution by changing the number of units required to run for Vice President from 42 to 32.

Her reason, she said, was that "It is impossible under the present constitution for a Vice President during one semester to run for President during another without exceeding 60 units of study and remaining at the college for an additional semester."

Council disagreed with her conclusions, defeating the motion, 2-6-3.

The remainder of the hour was taken up with debate of the proposed Associated Women Student budget for the spring semester. The requested amount was $1571 and the major objection among council was the AWS' Leap Year Dance.

A total of $645 was requested to cover expenses of this function.

Several council members remarked that they thought the requested amount could be spent for more worthwhile purposes.

Still others said that the AWS is deserving of this allocation since AWS is a spirited and well-organized group.

Sophomore Art Gershman, however, moved to amend the original motion by deleting the $645. A vote was taken and the amendment was rejected, 2-7-2.

Freshman Sandy Castelli then moved to reduce expenses of the room and band, which would knock some $150 off the original request and leave the AWS with a total of $1421.

It was 1 p.m. by this time, and council was adjourned without action on this amendment and without approving the AWS request.

Soccer Grows In U.S.

By Peter Huebner

Soccer, the greatest spectator sport in almost every country on the globe, is gradually finding recognition in this land of baseball and football.

All four-year colleges and most two-year colleges and high schools have adopted this game of skill and physical endurance.

Soccer teams here are still predominantly comprised of foreign players, but more and more Americans are participating in it.

The reason why soccer has not been developed, even though it was played on American soil just as early as any other type of competitive game, may be traced to the fact that the average American male has become larger in size than his European or South American counterpart.

And in order to be an effective soccer player, one has to be swift and flexible. A soccer player seldom weighs more than 175 pounds and is rarely taller than 5-10.

In colleges, foreign-born students make up most of the soccer teams. At City College this international game has its special international flavor with eight countries represented on the team.

Soccer has all the prerequisites of competitive sport. It is a game full of continuous action and strategy. The 11 players of a team have to be in top physical condition. A player must have the capacity of a long distance runner and a sprinter.

He must be intelligent, in order to be able to use individual and team strategy, and most of all have the skill to control and direct the ball with his feet and head.

In a soccer game, which lasts 90 minutes and has only a 15-minute interruption, the 22 players of both teams are in continuous individual competition.

In the beginning of this century, the European immigrants formed soccer teams and leagues here. It was their game, and seldom did a person of American birth participate or seem to be interested in watching the game.

Now there are four soccer leagues in San Francisco alone, and each league is composed of eight teams. There are also several youth divisions. The status of a soccer player here is that of an amateur, while in New York, Los Angeles and in some other cities the soccer teams are comprised of semiprofessional players.

Indications are that in the near future a sufficient number of Americans will have acquired the skills and techniques of this sport to have an influence in world competition.

Soccermen Defeat Menlo, 8-3, To Strengthen Hold On League Lead

In a return match here, the Rams beat an improved Menlo College team, 8-3, to secure with a perfect 4-0 record, top spot in the Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference.

First and second quarter action gave no indication of the outcome of the game, even though Peter Huebner and Carlos Cortez brought the Rams ahead with two scores.

Menlo moved up with one goal and gave Ram soccermen a real battle to hold the meager lead, especially when center full-back Andy Nabong injured his ankle and had to leave the field, weakening the back-line.

Promising goalie Ruben Hernandez, who yet lacks sufficient experience to improve his position play, and Tony Losada kept Menlo from materializing several scoring possibilities in the first half.

The third quarter saw Waldon Hom score twice, and Cortez and Huebner add one more goal each.

Menlo, not giving up, came through with its second and third goal, one of them a penalty kick, before Hector Olaya and Huebner connected to secure the final score.

Key players Nabong and Larry Katzeff, the latter who also injured his ankle but kept on playing before he was finally taken out of the game, may be sidelined for at least one week, Diederichsen said after the game.

The next league game will be against Diablo Valley College at 2:30 p.m. today, at Balboa stadium.

Basketball Team Seeks Experience For Coming Season

Basketball coach Sid Phelan today urged all students interested in basketball to try out for the college team, especially if they have playing experience.

"We now have a turnout of about 20 men but hope that more will try out," Phelan stated.

The team will open the season shortly. University of San Francisco's frosh team will probably be the Rams' first home opponent. The Ram team was the only team to defeat the Don frosh last season, and Phelan expects that USF will be out to avenge the loss.

First league opponent of the season will be Monterey Peninsula College, at Monterey on November 30.

"We expect to be long on hustle this season, but short on height," Phelan commented.

Some of the punch of the team will be provided by such players as Rich Henderson, of Sacred Heart fame. Another Sacred Heart grad on the college team is Rich Braun; both men played a great deal on last year's three-A championship team.

Another player expected to aid the team will be Henry King, considered one of the finer basketball players by a number of local sports writers and coaches.

Veterans Ken Scalmanini and Mac Smith will improve Phelan's five.

Art Adams, among the top scorers of the Golden Gate Conference last season will return to again add his talents to the Ram team. However, returning veterans are few, and freshmen will have to fill the vacant spots.

Jerry Chandler, Elmer Youngblood, Dennis Sweeney and Jim Smith are expected to see a fair amount of action in this coming season.

A preseason tournament will be held at Modesto, December 19 through 21, in which Coach Phelan hopes to gain a better knowledge of the power of the team.

"San Jose City College will probably be the strongest team in the conference this season, since they have a fairly large number of returning veterans," Phelan said.

Rams Favored Saturday

Locals Picked To Keep Diablo In Winless Ranks

The Ram gridders journey to Martinez Saturday to face the cellar-dwelling Diablo Valley Vikings on the Alhambra High School field. Kickoff is 1:30 p.m.

The once-green Rams are now red hot and are playing ball that more closely resembles that of a contending team. Despite a group of wounded and bottom-string gridders, the "Cinderella" Rams have climbed to within sight of league-leading Contra Costa.

This injury-ridden Ram team has accepted the bad breaks that have hindered it since the opening of the grid year and cashed in on the off-days of their rivals, climbing to the lofty position of second in the conference.

With a second auxiliary quarterback piloting a team that has diminished in number each week for the last five weeks, the remaining combat-worthy Rams have become experienced and are beginning to play as a team on both offense and defense.

"Having different players in there every week doesn't help them to work as a team," coach Dutch Elston said, "but they've gotten some experience and they're beginning to play better ball."

Diablo Valley has fought hard this season to preserve a perfect record—no wins. The Vikings' best show of the year was against San Mateo in a 22-20 loss. The Diablo defense and offense are well matched. Neither is strong.

Craig Schwartz, former Ram quarterback, with one leg in a cast, contends "We'll romp all over 'em."

The Vikings, who posted a season record of 0-7 last year, have done nothing to blemish their season-long streak this year. Diablo has now lost every game in two years.

Dave Dyer, now second in the conference in passing and individual offense, and end Bob Fredricks, second in receiving, are the bright spots in the Diablo lineup.

RA Wins Badminton, Folk Dancing Contests

Taking first place in folk dancing and badminton and second in volleyball, the college's Recreation Association hosted a sports day last weekend.

Bev Galton was selected the best all-round folk dancer at the competition and thus gave the RA first place.

The RA volleyballers emerged second in their play. Oakland came in first, scoring over this College, College of San Mateo, San Jose City College, Foothill College, Cabrillo College, Monterey Peninsula College and Hartnell College.

Rain cancelled tennis competition, but Louis Chang came through to take a first place in the men's singles badminton tournament. RA President Fran Richardson stated that there was "much more student participation in this year's sports day."

Cross Country Team Faces Tough Competition Friday

With the Northern California Junior College cross country championships this Friday at Visalia, the Ram spiker squad will be hard pressed to equal last season's performance in this meet.

Last season the Rams went to a second-place finish as they were barely edged for the championship by San Jose, 44-50. Golden Gate Conference teams nabbed the first four places in the team competition as Foothill and San Mateo placed third and fourth, respectively, with 99 and 120 points.

Only two harriers returned from last year's second-place Ram team, Ozzie Norris and Gene Plotkin, who were the Rams' 1-2 men. Both paced the Rams in 1962 by placing third and sixth respectively in last year's meet.

As to the Rams' chances this year, harrier mentor Lou Vasquez stated, "We will have a difficult time equaling last season's performance but with veterans Plotkin and Norris and some able support from our freshmen, we should make a respectable showing in this tough meet."

Vasquez also quipped, "All the Golden Gate Conference teams are entered, including team favorites San Mateo and San Jose, while non-conference College of Sequoias and American River will also be contenders for the team title."

There will be many contenders for the individual championship trophy, including the Rams' Norris and Plotkin. Other top runners competing from the Golden Gate Conference will be San Mateo's Jim Huff and Ralph Likens, San Jose's Jim Sullivan and Ken Noel and Oakland's John Lodin and Bob De Celle.

Diablo Valley's Mike Lamendola and Chabot's Floyd Godwin will also be contenders.

H&R Defense Nips Newmans, 27-25

Only three of four scheduled intramural basketball games were played last Tuesday night.

The Newman club was edged by the Hotel and Restaurant, 27-25, with John Wallace accounting for nine points for the winners.

The club league schedule started with the Filipino Club out-bouncing the Lutheran Club, 53-38, with Bernard Piper contributing 19 points to the victory.

In the fraternity league the Alpha Phi Epsilon-Phi Beta Delta game was forfeited because Alpha Phi Epsilon could not produce the required number of players. Zeta Phi Sigma tumbled Beta Tau, 44-29, with the help of 12-point scorer Bill Tobin.

In Wednesday night's Independent competition, two undefeated teams met and the Divine Ones outplayed the Ravens 50-28.

The Apaches also kept their undefeated status by tossing the Panthers, 59-44, as did the Originals who dumped the Five, 69-21.

The Brother's Five won their first game against the Independents, 50-42, and Beavers chewed the Mets, 45-32.

Coaches During The Week — Referees On The Weekend

By Fred Wales

To sports fans many an exciting scoring play has been called back by seemingly blind and untrained officials.

Many instructors here in the health department, and practically everyone in the athletic department, is a member of this often-booed band of sports enthusiasts and are active in all four leagues of officiating.

All of the coaches here are active in the San Francisco Football Officials Association, which covers the local football games on the high school levels and the California Officials Association whose jurisdiction covers the two-year college sports events.

University games on the west coast come under the Pacific Intercollegiate Officiating Bureau of which Lee Eisan, Tom Wilson and Grover Klemmer are members. College President Louis Conlan was the head of this bureau last year but resigned in August.

Eisan had the distinction of refereeing the Shrine East-West game last year and more recently officiated the nationally televised Stanford-Notre Dame contest on October 26.

Wilson carried his duties beyond the Bay Area when he toured the world this summer and officiated at contests in each country he visited.

Klemmer reached the ultimate in officiating when he was appointed last spring by National Football League President Pete Rozell to officiate at professional football games in that league.

So far this season the Ram golf mentor, minus his clubs, has appeared in Cleveland, Dallas and Los Angeles working as an official.

On Fridays Klemmer receives tickets to the game he is to work and information as to where his reservations have been made along with information concerning the game.

In addition to football, these officials are assigned to basketball, baseball, swimming and track contests. And referees are not untrained!

To become officials, the coaches have to attend clinics every week and meetings twice a week where the rules and methods of detecting infractions are taught and discussed.

Following the meetings they are tested and then appointed as referees in the appropriate league.

Two rules the officials always follow, according to Coach Klemmer:

"1. Never call a penalty unless you have seen the entire play, before, during and after contact is made.

"2. Never smile at another official before or after calling a penalty. Be serious at all times when on the field; players and coaches both become irritated when two officials start smiling at one another."

Although it is true that officials are paid for their service, the amount is not that great and most officials do it because they enjoy it and like working with the players and the sport.

Quartet Of One-Act Plays To Open In Campus Theater December 4

Drama Students Produce, Direct All Presentations

The Footlighters, a new drama group of Delta Psi Omega, national drama society, will present four one-act plays starting Wednesday, December 4, in the theatre here.

Two additional showings will be staged December 5 and 6, Ken Bachtold, drama student and spokesman for the group, revealed today.

Composed of drama and music majors, The Footlighters, a troupe of eight students, will cast, costume, direct and stage the quartet on their own initiative and in their spare time.

Opening the program is A Marriage Proposal, by Anton Chekhov, which had a preview performance recently during College Hour. Cast in this farce are Leon Moniot as the farmer and Sandy Lundwall as his daughter. Bachtold plays the irate suitor whose hot head and weak stomach sidetrack him from proposing on more than one occasion.

Next on the program is the melodramatic Horace Comes Home From the Laundry. The author, Vanita Sutton, uses an abandoned baby named Horace to create an atmosphere wherein the forces of good and evil clash.

As Daffodil Hoopenlooper, Miss Lundwall plays the heroine and Larry O'Leno is Edgar Eager, the hero. Villainess Veronica Viper is played by Jeanne Chieffo while Bachtold is Percival Polecat, the villain.

Others in the cast are Lynn Goodrich as the famous opera star, Mme. Tannhauser; Moniot as the firechief; Andrea Fulton as Blossom, the telephone operator and Mike Dobrinski in the role of Algernon, the waiter.

Following this slapstick melodrama is the more sophisticated We Were Dancing, a comedy excerpt from Noel Coward's Tonight At 8:30. As a country club triangle, it portrays an evening when the single Karl and the married Louise meet, dance and fall in love, but the morning light sheds a new aspect on the evening's romance.

O'Leno and Miss Lundwall have the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Charteris while Bachtold plays the lover. Other members of the cast are Miss Chieffo, Miss Goodrich, Dobrinski and Moniot.

Completing the quartet is Tad Mosel's television skit, the satirical Impromptu, which was also presented earlier in the semester and is "included in this group by popular demand," Bachtold said.

Roles in Impromptu are played by Miss Fulton as Winifred, Moniot as Tony, Miss Lundwall as Lora and Bachtold as Ernest.

Costuming for the plays is being handled by Robert Johnston, a music and costuming major.

Contributions of $1 will benefit Aid Retarded Children.

APPEARING IN NOEL COWARD'S We Were Dancing Wednesday, December 4, in the theater, are The Footlighters, (from left) Jeanne Chieffo, Ken Bachtold, Sandy Lundwall and Larry O'Leno. The Footlighters is a newly-formed drama group of Delta Psi Omega, national drama society.

Smith Warns Students 'Keep Hands Off Exhibits'

A warning to all persons to keep their hands off exhibits in the Cloud Hall Gallery was issued last week by photography instructor Emmett Smith, after an incident that occurred the previous week when a photograph on exhibit was forcibly torn off the wall.

The one-man show of photographic work by noted California photographer Karl Romaine, opened here three weeks ago and closed last Friday . . . less one photograph. The scene, depicting a sailboat on the bay, was ripped from the clasps which held it to the wall.

Smith announced that "if photos continue to be removed from the gallery, the area will have to be discontinued as a gallery for exhibits by guest photographers."

The gallery has featured the work of many noted photographers and, on several occasions, photographs have been taken.

Semi-Annual ISC 'Presents' Set For Friday Night

After weeks of pledging and rushing, Inter-Sorority Council will hold its semiannual Presents from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in Smith Hall, ISC President Bea Malone announced last week.

The event is held each semester to introduce the new sorority pledges. The 18 young women, representing the two sororities, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, will be introduced and presented during the intermission by their sorority presidents and will then be presented with a scroll.

Dress for the occasion will be formal, and music will be provided by Sal Vance and his orchestra.

President of Phi Beta Rho is Miss Malone and the sponsor is Norma Carlisle. Theta Tau's president is Joan Twomey and the sponsor is Norine Smith.

Contreras Issues 'State Of The Union'

Associated Student President Vince Contreras began a recent meeting of Student Council with a "State Of The Union" message, saying he felt it was the responsibility of the executive to report his hopes and plans for the semester to the people who elected him.

Contreras began his message by comparing himself, and the responsibility of giving a report, to the message the President of the United States gives to Congress.

Of all the issues in his speech, the most significant proposal was that two student government parties be formed from an arbitrary division of the clubs and groups on campus. Contreras asked the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils and Council of Organization representatives to return to their groups and ask the individual clubs what they thought of the idea.

Another major problem, Contreras said, is the absence of spirit on the part of City College students. To meet this problem he announced that a fund would be started to buy lights for the stadium so more people could attend the football games were they to be held at night.

He also hopes to reorganize the Rally Committee, changing its policy in many ways, especially in the selection of cheerleaders and song girls.

He also told council he thought that there should be greater student participation in college activities, and said "council should lead the other students." He then ordered all council and cabinet members to learn the CCSF yell by the next council meeting.

Contreras said the COO should be studied "To see where it is today, where it will be tomorrow." He said he wished students represented their groups in COO "because they wanted to, not because they have to."

The President also said that he thought the constitution just passed was a "step in the right direction" and "the longest trip begins with a single step." He also said he would like to see opposition candidates in every AS election.

Second Party Returns To Campus Political Scene

SRP To Oppose USP In Coming AS Elections

Reorganization of the Students Representative Party was announced last week by former Student President Bill May who added that the party would be the United Student Party's chief opponent in the coming AS elections.

(SRP's nominating convention was held last night after The Guardsman had gone to press.)

Like the USP, the SRP is an old campus political party which was active two years ago. "Its aim is to bring student government closer to the students," May explained.

"We hope to develop a program which will not only succeed at election time but will actively continue throughout the semester," he added.

May contended that the college has been decreasing in overall recognition of accomplishments and that "things must improve soon around here."

"The number of qualified candidates has dwindled for the simple reason that students have not been informed and have not accepted the obligation of governing themselves here," May continued.

Asked about the comparison between last semester's RAMS party and the SRP, May said he did not consider the RAMS an organization "although both organizations have the same basic principles."

"When the RAMS started out, it was, in essence, a blueprint of SRP," May added. The RAMS, which stood for "Representation and Action for the Majority of Students," was organized last semester by the present AS President, Vince Contreras.

May believes that the USP, with the backing of the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils, was organized "for the simple reason that they find themselves in a position of having a number of qualified persons already participating in student government here."

USP Picks Own Candidates At Caucus Tonight

The United Students Party, comprising representatives from the six fraternities and two sororities on campus, will hold its first nominating convention from 7 to 11 p.m. tonight in Smith Hall, Inter-Fraternity Council President Joel Cohen disclosed today.

"Through a process of elimination the USP will arrive at a selection of candidates that will work for the benefit of the Associated Students of the college," Cohen remarked.

"Our primary purpose is to unify the college, arouse spirit among the students and give the students equal opportunities to voice their opinions in student government affairs," he added.

The IFC originally reorganized the USP two weeks ago and then asked the Inter-Sorority Council to join with them. Bea Malone, ISC president officially announced last week that her organization will become part of USP.

"I firmly believe that the AS needs a shot-in-the-arm to boost the spirit of true college life here, and the USP's goal is to achieve this aim," Cohen emphasized.

Tonight's nominating convention will operate in much the same manner as the previous two open nominating conventions did when there was an absence of organized political parties on campus.

Officers of the IFC will preside over the meeting. Nominations may be made by any individual fraternity or sorority member.

The six fraternities are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Tau, Phi Beta Delta and Zeta Phi Sigma. Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau are the only two sororities at the present time.

The other three were forced to disband because they were not able to meet the membership requirements to stay on campus.

Debate Club Becomes Active Organization On Campus Again

The college Debate Club, revived last semester, is again a functioning organization of the campus, according to Hugh Wilson, Debate Club president.

Last semester, Dorothy Aswaq, a cadet instructor, helped revive the Debate Club, an organization which disbanded in 1956.

The club was not highly organized last semester but did hold informal debates during College Hour.

Presently the club has 12 members with more expected to join. "We hope to increase our membership this semester by a considerable margin," Wilson stated.

As of now the club receives no financial aid from student government or any outside group. "Our present plans are limited because of lack of funds," Wilson said, "but in the future we hope to compete in intercollegiate debates and video-tape some of our better performances."

Stanford University, University of San Francisco and the University of California are being eyed as possible opponents for future debates.

Presently the debates are not intercollegiate but exist among members of the Debate Club itself. Such topics as the value or lack of value of compulsory education are debated.

The club will exist under a new constitution yet to be drawn. One of the main features of the new constitution, when completed, will be that all future officers of the club must have completed some form of debate training.

The National Association of Debaters and the National Forensic League are two national organizations to which the club now belongs. "All collegiate debating clubs must belong to these two organizations in order to be officially recognized," Wilson stated.

Before the Debate Club disbanded in 1956, the club had managed to win many awards for their debating skill. "We hope that the club can extend its fine record under the recently revived organization," Wilson said.

Further information is available in C-219 during College Hours.

Administration Sets Times For '64 Registration

Times for registration next semester were announced last week by counselor Walter McCloud for those who may have programs but no numbers.

Registration numbers will be allocated on the basis of point averages and seniority, except for present first-semester students for whom the basis will be first midterm grades.

Registration times according to numbers are as follows: 4000 students will register the first day, February 3. Those from 1 to 699 start at 8 a.m.; 700-1299 at 8:30; 1300-1899, 9; 1900-2449, 10; 2450-3099, 10:30. In the afternoon registering will continue beginning at 1 o'clock. Numbers 3100-3499 will go through the lines between 1 and 2 p.m.; 3500-3749 at 2; 3750-3999, 2:30.

Students with numbers over 3999 will register February 4: 4000 to 4399 at 8 a.m.; 4400-4549, 8:30; 4550-4749, 9; 4750-5099, 9:30, and 5100 and over 10 a.m.

Students who achieved the highest grade point averages will be the first to register and consequently will have the pick of classes.

He emphasized that all students should keep their appointments with counselors, or if that is impossible inform their counselors before the appointment, thereby retaining the number assigned them.

Student Government Requires More AS Constitution Study, Less Homework On Yelling

ONCE A YEAR, the President of the United States delivers a message to Congress known as "The State of The Union" message. Two weeks ago, City College's own Associated President also made a speech at a Student Council meeting, called The President's address.

Our main problem, he stated, starts with the lack of spirit. In order to remedy this situation, the AS President suggested a detailed plan of reasons, which, he hopes, will bring the spirit back on campus.

FIRST, he suggested that the AS start a fund to purchase lighting equipment for the stadium so that night athletic events can be held. Attendance at these games will then be better, because some students who wish to attend these events cannot because of work conflict.

REORGANIZATION OF RALLY COMMITTEE

SECOND, "in the near future, take a look at our Rally Committee, its program and its policies." In other words, reorganization of this committee is recommended. That also should increase spirit.

THIRD, student participation concerning spirit can be increased if the following suggested measures are put in effect: "first of all, it should start here in this room (Student Council meets in Bungalow 6) starting with you." It is a well-known fact that Student Council should lead the other students, being leaders.

This statement is very philosophic as anyone can see. In order for council members to lead the students, the AS President assigned them homework for the next meeting. The homework in question was to learn and to know the City College of San Francisco yell....

FOURTH, the AS President then announced that if he hears again from a Student Council or a Cabinet member that the spirit is lousy, he is going to ask: "Do you have spirit?" Does this mean that council members cannot express their own personal opinions? Has the AS President forgotten that Article I of the United States Constitution provides for freedom of speech?

• How does the AS president expect to change student participation—otherwise known as APATHY in erudite circles—and campus spirit when Student Council does such ridiculous things as wasting 15 to 20 minutes in voting Happy Birthday to a council member? Or allocating a certain amount of money to purchase charcoal-colored blazers for its members?

COUNCIL MEMBERS TO BE SPOTTED BY BLAZERS

• Is this move made in order for these council members to be recognized by the students? The students will surely appreciate the members walking through the campus with the motto The Truth Shall Make You Free emblazoned on their blazers, especially if one particular member is known to have permitted shady practices to exist in the recent ratification of the AS constitution, for example?

• Does the AS President sincerely expect council members to attend athletic games by making them responsible for the knowledge of the CCSF yell? Does he really think that the members will attend the games?

• Does the AS President expect to increase student participation by suggesting the creation of a fund to buy lights for night games at the college stadium?

• Does the AS President expect that by proposing the Rally Committee reorganization more students will attend rallies, conventions, car parades and the like?

VOTE COMPETITION TO INCREASE?

• Does the AS President expect that by demanding that eight persons instead of four run to fill the freshman vacancies on council, making competition possible, more students are to vote?

Talking about elections, the newly-ratified AS constitution has also been under fire. At just about every Student Council meeting, someone proposes a new amendment to the constitution. First, it was to change the number of completed units for the AS President in order to take office (a new minimum of 45 instead of 42 and a new maximum of 68 instead of 60 may be in force). Then, it was the same with the AS Vice Presidential requirements: minimum of 38 units instead of 42.

CLARIFICATION OF ARTICLE IX

Most council members seemed unaware until the following meeting of the existence of Article IX in the AS Constitution, for not one clarified the methods of amendment.

Article IX states that a proposed amendment may be placed on the ballot either through a petition signed by "ten per cent of the active members of the association and submitted to the Election Committee to be placed on the ballot;" or that "the amendment be presented to the Student Council and accepted by that body by a two-thirds majority vote of its total membership. If accepted, the proposed amendment is to be submitted to the Election Committee to be placed on the ballot." Then, "the proposed amendment will become effective IF ratified by a two-thirds majority of the vote on the amendment."

May Student Council learn their homework for next week, which is to be responsible for the knowledge of the AS constitution...

By Patty Smith

To amateur photographers, taking a picture simply means pressing a button, winding the film and then trotting down to the camera shop with exposed roll in hand. A few days later, the prints are ready.

However, to photography students here, the process of taking a picture is far more complicated and time-consuming.

In the darkened photo studio on the second floor of Cloud Hall, several students can always be found hard at work. Last week one young man was found perfecting his sound synchronization technique, a complicated procedure involving absolute darkness and silence and, in this case . . . an egg!

The picture is taken when a speaker picks up sound and triggers an electronic flash, called the strobe. In this case, the sound is the landing of the egg and the picture is of the egg breaking.

Unfortunately, luck was not with the photographer. Whenever the set-up was perfect, some student would wander in and yell, "Hey, what happened to the lights," thus setting off the flash.

Result? No picture!

At other times the egg wouldn't cooperate! No matter how many times it was dropped, it wouldn't break.

In another corner of the studio, another young man was taking a color shot of a leafy green apple lying on a brilliant blue background. Temptation proved too much and as soon as he finished taking the picture, he eagerly snatched up the apple and bit into it.

This practice of "eating the subject" after shooting it can prove dangerous . . . and unpalatable.

Who would ever guess that the yummy looking turkey a reader sees advertised in glowing color in magazines has only been baked in an oven for five minutes? Is this a cooking miracle? No. The final browning touches are provided by a blow torch. The turkey is completely inedible!

And what about those color ads for baked pork and beans where all the "goodies" are seen happily bubbling on the surface? The same beans won't look that good when cooked at home and placed in a favorite casserole unless . . . the choicest beans and bits of pork are suspended on a wire screen with all the sauce swimming on the bottom of the dish!

Under the direction of Charles Lamp, Bev Pasqualetti and Emmett Smith, photography students here learn all these techniques of successful photography and many more including those of design, color photography, general commercial and industrial photography, motion picture and television production and microscopy and photomicrography.

Students have room and facilities for their work for, in addition to the studio, the first floor of Cloud Hall houses darkrooms and finishing areas containing all equipment necessary for black-and-white and color work.

The required photographic work experience program offers students an opportunity for valuable training through part-time employment off campus. Students work in various photographic fields as color lab technicians, X-ray technicians, photographers and salesmen.

The demand for good photographers is increasing, especially in the field of general commercial and industrial photography. The department here has lists of employers just waiting for students to complete their studies here.

Successful graduates of this two-year program are now busy putting their talent and training to use as television cameramen, press photographers, instructors, lab technicians, free lance photographers, portrait, industrial, commercial, and advertising photographers, and motion picture photographers.

'Alice' Inspires Titles For Architect Student Designs

By Bea Takeuchi

Those unique titles under the little cardboard displays in C-207 may puzzle many. The titles are but lines from Lewis Carroll's poem, Jabberwocky, in Alice In Wonderland. Each display depicts the creator's artistic sense.

Architecture students have extracted certain lines from Carroll's poem, and have used them as titles for their little units.

Each student has expressed his artistic self by designing and making these displays.

They have used everything from Play Doh to feathers. One unit entitled "The Vorpal blade went snicker snack," shows a tin foil knight thrusting his tin foil sword into a Play Doh dragon.

"So rested he by the Tum Tum Tree," shows several life-size mushrooms sheltering a tired knight.

Behind these odd assignments is W. Merle Weidman, a philosophical architecture instructor who has been with the faculty since 1948.

"Students of architecture must have imagination. It is one of the most important attributes of the artistic mind, because without it there can be little creation or originality," he said.

"Our students learn to work along various lines—humanistic, artistic, and technical. One of the key words for this century is understanding. An architect must have it," he added.

Since Weidman is a seasoned traveler, he urges his students to do likewise. "I tell my students to hop a freighter after they finish here. If they took a trip through Europe and saw the different types of architecture, they would get a much better perspective," he emphasized.

"I missed being in the service. I was either too young or too old. With only $100, in 1929, I was able to tour Europe by bicycle. Imagine, in Poland, I had a seven course dinner for only 11 cents!" said Weidman.

Weidman helps keep his students interested in their studies by telling them many stories about his own life. In his office he keeps old newspapers dated June 30, 1925, containing eye-witness accounts of the great Santa Barbara earthquake.

"I was clerking in a grocery store that summer. It was fantastic! I saw telephone poles waving like willows, a hospital wall crack, and its chimney topple down," he related.

"There were about 80 recorded quakes that day. I went down to the beach and saw a frightened woman jumping up and down on the beach. She was trying to signal to her husband, who was swimming." He was unaware of the quake, because he couldn't feel it in the water.

Weidman designed and built his 10-sided home in Millbrae. "The walls are of 1¼" thick Transitop, which is unusual these days," he said proudly.

FORESIGHT, that whimsical weekly column which enjoys high critical acclaim among the writer's relatives, close friends, and their relatives, will not appear this week, because of "reasons of soul."

Said soul being the lower left wisdom tooth of said scribe. As we all know, at least those of us who have been blessed with this malady, wisdom teeth can be a little on the unpleasant side. Unpleasant in this case being quite close to the torments prophesied for those who are ferried across the river Styx.

As you wake up in the morning with a certain pain in your jaw, you wonder how someone could have put a vise around your head without your knowing about it.

The fact that no dentists work on weekends, forces you to take a handful of aspirins and look forward to a miserable 48 hours. The aspirins don't kill the pain, but they are very useful in blurring the vision and reducing the reflexes to only an occasional response.

As soon as the culprit is removed and the columnist can recuperate, the column will be resumed.

Bulletin Board Abounds In Odd Advertising

Even since the bulletin board in Science Hall was first put up in 1940 it has been literally covered with cards advertising a myriad of articles for sale, places to rent, and all sorts of strange offers.

Enterprising students using the notice board at the south end of the Science Hall first floor, have a chance to advertise free and buy anything from an Art Book For the Successful Artist to a 30.06 rifle for the troubled student considering Hara Kari.

There are objects and services to satisfy almost any number of needs. For instance, the aspiring folk singer wanting to get in on the increasing number of Hootenannys, can easily buy a guitar by simply phoning the number on the card, and then haggling with its owner over the exorbitant price.

Ready and waiting for the numerous females hoping to acquire a mate in their brief sojourn into these hallowed halls, is a wedding gown, size 11. However, girls, make sure you've got a superior specimen bagged before you rush down and buy the "only worn once" wedding dress.

Also for sale is a large variety of speed equipment for the would-be dragstrip champions who go bombing up and down Phelan avenue using it for a quarter mile strip.

The sports car enthusiast who would rather go into a four-wheel drift around a corner than go roaring up Phelan avenue, can probably find just the machine to satisfy his whims.

Don't despair, you "professional" students who have finally been tossed out of the house by your parents. Finding a room at a reasonable price is relatively simple if you check the bulletin board. Despite this, there are still drawbacks. You will finally have to go to work, at least part time.

And last but far from least, along with dozens of other strange articles and services, we find for sale those little used, seldom read, building blocks of knowledge known as books. Which, strangely enough, seem to have the longest stay on the bulletin board. Oh well, c'est la vie.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

JUST IN CASE you don't know it, Associated Student President Vince "Boss" Contreras has started a new campaign to get more spirit from students enrolled here.

Vince had better watch out because one phase of his plan has progressed to the stage of insisting that council members learn the official City College yell.

If he succeeds, we'll have a college that is just like any other college.

Meaning, of course, that there are a lot of people on the campus who take pride in the fact, for example, that the average attendance at our home football games is somewhere around 80 persons, including players.

Not many other colleges in the United States can make a statement anywhere near the magnitude of that one.

No other college holds its elections the way we do either. We hope.

THE ONE-MAN RESEARCH department of The Guardsman has come up with what we think is an interesting fact concerned with newspaper ethics.

There is a college newspaper in the town of El Camino, we won't say which one, and it contains a column which goes by the name of Campus Mike.

Included in recent Campus Mike are parts of Hindsight which appear to be copied word for word, with a one-week to one-month time lapse.

We won't even mention the word "plagarism" because we want to give the author of Campus Mike every benefit of the doubt, and there is some doubt too.

Besides, if a person has an extremely twisted mind, he can construe this to mean the beginning of state-wide syndication. Indeed, very humble beginnings.

Of course we could be wrong. This happens about once a year, being wrong, we mean. It could be a coincidence that these two columns contain the same information, word for word, but at different times of the semester. This could happen.

A chimpanzee could also write a Shakespearian sonnet if you left him long enough at a typewriter, but we doubt if the author of Campus Mike is willing to spend the time required to do this.

Let us adopt a policy that is ultra-liberal and let him steal any ideas he wants to, but, my boy, not word for word or anything like that.

OUTSIDE OF THE secrets that El Camino colleges seem to be hiding, there are indications that City College of San Francisco has a couple of its own hidden somewhere.

Oh, it's nothing you could put your finger on, just several mysterious happenings.

For one thing, when you put a dime in the coffee machine in the basement of Science Hall, you get a cup (if you're lucky) that bears slogans that are usually only found in wartime security installations.

Keep That Lip Buttoned and Security Is Everybody's Business greet your eye as you hoist the first brew of the morning, and you begin to wonder if the Birchers haven't infiltrated the vending machine industry.

Job Placement For Holidays Now Available

With the Christmas vacation period only a few weeks away, the college placement office is recruiting workers for a wide variety of jobs in several occupational areas, Joseph A. Amori, placement director, said yesterday.

Although the post office has closed its hiring for the Christmas period, the sales outlets, including department stores, beverage stores and delivery services as well as airline and railroad companies, are looking for part-time workers in these areas.

According to Amori, all businesses will be hiring more students this year than during previous years.

Students with sales experience and a knowledge of all types of merchandise, are in great demand, Amori emphasized, and although there is a wide variety of jobs available, they are open only to the qualified students or those with previous sales experience.

The majority of positions available outside the selling field, are to be found in jobs as delivery men, stock clerks and wrappers.

Women students with sales and cashiering training or sales experience are in great demand in all stores, Amori said.

Pay scales for all types of work during the Christmas season are higher than last year. Experienced workers receive the highest pay. Pay scales range from a low of $1.45 for inexperienced workers to an all-time high of $2.80 per hour for the more experienced students.

Delivery jobs start at $1.50 and go as high as $3.10 per hour.

The placement center will remain open during the entire Christmas vacation period, beginning Monday, December 16. Amori emphasized that students interested in any type of work, either for Christmas or part time, should file their applications in S-188 as soon as possible.

The placement office schedule will be from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. every weekday during the vacation.

KCSF Sets Talent Auditions Today

Auditions for a KCSF Broadcaster's Club talent show will be held at 2 p.m. today in the choral room, A-135, and during College Hour tomorrow in the band room, Robert Murphy, producer of the show, announced this week.

All talented students are invited to participate in the preliminaries, and they should bring essential props and equipment to the auditions, Murphy added.

The talent show, whose theme is Talent Showcase '64, will be televised on the college's closed circuit system during College Hour Thursday, January 9, 1964. It will originate from the arts building theater.

This is the first time that such an endeavor has been attempted, and Murphy is confident that it will be a success.

Channel 13 is the code name for the college's new television system. It replaced Channel 3, once new equipment was installed in the broadcasting department.

Concert Set For C-Hour Tomorrow

MAESTRO MEYER CAHN raises the baton over the concert band and gets ready to face the music during College Hour tomorrow. Cahn will conduct the concert whose feature attraction is scheduled to be former SF Symphony guest Daniel Leblanc. —Guardsman photo by Arnold Eilers.

Former Symphony Member To Play Violin Concerto

Daniel Leblanc, San Francisco Symphony orcrestra guest violinist, is scheduled to be a feature attraction at a concert to be given by the college's band and orchestra during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Meyer M. Cahn, band and orchestra instructor, announced last week.

Leblanc, solo violinist, will play one movement by Mendelssohn, a violin concerto in E Minor.

The orchestra will perform by playing a movement from Beethoven's Symphony Number Eight. It will also perform two other selections, Cahn said.

Members of the band will perform the entertainment for the last part of the program. They will play a scherzo, which is a sportive or lightsome musical movement, from Shostakovich Number Five. They will also play other selections including numbers from the musical comedy, The Most Happy Fellow.

The band is composed of 35 members, and the orchestra of 27 members. They will be conducted by Cahn throughout the concert.

The band recently performed at the International Fair.

Arrangements are being made at present for the band to perform at Balboa High School with the same program as the coming College Hour performance, Cahn added.

Cahn emphasized that anyone may attend the concert. It is open to all students of the college as well as persons not connected with the college.

Another concert is scheduled to be given on January 7 of next year. It will be similar to the coming concert but will be somewhat longer, Cahn also added.

'Constitutional Amendment Political Move'—Contreras

By Lowell Mengel

Associated Student President Vince Contreras announced to an extremely interested Student Council last Thursday that a constitutional amendment changing unit requirements to run for AS President was "a political move for me done with my knowledge but without my consent."

He added that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

The announcement by Contreras ended speculation that he would seek a second term and added new interest in the race for spring semester AS offices.

After council member Mary Ducommun moved to change the unit requirements in the AS constitution from the present minimum of 42 units and a maximum of 60 units, to a new minimum of 45 units, and a maximum of 68 units, Associated Men Student President Bob Roddick objected.

He did not believe council could "change the constitution just so a person can run," and that since "he is thinking of running" he wanted to know who prompted the change.

Contreras replied that the change was being made because new Constitutional Revisions Chairman Joe Miller "doesn't like the way the new constitution reads" regarding the section under discussion.

Debate was then closed, and the new amendment to the constitution was passed, subject to approval by a two-thirds vote of the AS members at an election which Election Commissioner Chris Small said will be "around the 26th or 27th of November."

At the meeting, Contreras also gave a President's Address and assigned to each of the cabinet members a lesson in which each one was to learn the CCSF yell.

At the next meeting of council, members were actually tested on their knowledge of the yell and some cabinet members said they felt the test was "ridiculous" and actually detrimental to improving college spirit.

Other action saw council cut budget after budget in an effort to balance the AS finances after a large deficit incurred this semester.

The KCSF budget, which includes the Campus Carrier and other radio services, had a cut from a request of $561.50 to a new figure of $211.50.

In addition to limiting the communications on campus by cutting the KCSF budget, council cut an entire issue of The Guardsman, cut 500 copies off each of the remaining twelve issues, cut the number of stamps given the paper to exchange copies to other college papers and individuals plus a cut of $15 for frames to preserve honor award certificates the paper has won from the Associated Collegiate Press in 44 semesters of membership in the national newspaper rating organization.

Cabinet member Buzz Kribs termed the cut of the KCSF budget, and The Guardsman budget harmful to the college since the two organizations "are the only means of communications we have here."

Budget Cut Angers Broadcasting Club

Members of KCSF Broadcaster's Club are concerned over Student Council's cutting of their budget. James Morgan, club president, protested at a recent council meeting and was told that council will propose future cuts behind closed doors.

"It's too bad that the students are unaware of what is going on, and that someone can't do anything about council's decisions. A thorough study should be made before each budget is cut to justify the cut," Morgan said.

"In comparison with the budgets submitted by other clubs, ours is one of the smallest. Council won't even approve a mere $100 which is needed to buy current LP records," Morgan added.

"Students will just have to listen to the same old records over and over again, that's all. It's a pity, because we get wonderful LP records for only $1 apiece, when bought in 100-record lots," he explained.

Also cut in the budget slash is $250 for a video tape to record election campaign statements.

Morgan said that he "cannot lobby at all," as can some other groups, and will have to accept council's decision.

Beetz's Sporting World On Exhibit

Baseball players, jockeys and prizefighters are some of the subjects that inspire Carl Beetz, figure drawing instructor here.

Beetz has had his work exhibited in shows throughout the country including requests from the Library of Congress on two occasions. Last Thursday he agreed to an exhibit of some of his work at the college where it will be on display until Saturday, November 24, in the Science Hall showcase diagonally across from the silver pole.

Masse Shot, Open Forum, In the Bleachers, Night Game, Jockey and Valet, Weighing In and The Challenger are but a few works in the showcase for which Beetz has received kudos in many cities.

Winning national acclaim with his lithographs of Damon Runyon characters, Beetz has been heralded as the Bellows Of The Bay by art critic Alfred Frankenstein of the San Francisco Chronicle.

Great skill in the handling of light, dark and half tones is evident in Beetz's technique in the creation of lithographic prints. The vitality of his work lends strength and drama to the motley characters he portrays.

As early as 1942 he was recognized by the critic of the Los Angeles Times as "one of the most truthful artists of the sporting world in America today." This opinion gained momentum, and in 1945 his name appeared in Who's Who in American Art and has been listed there ever since.

In 1949 critic Arthur Millier predicted that Beetz was "another painter for whose work collectors and museums will some day bid." Today one of his lithographs, Open Forum, is a part of the William Gerstle collection of the San Francisco Museum of Art.

Figure drawing has been a crusade with Beetz since his student days. The hours he spent in gymnasiums, ball parks, race tracks and hand-out missions were devoted to sketching—and more sketching.

Long association in such surroundings has left traces of their flavor in his speech and mannerisms, but the true dedication to his art has also endowed him with the skill of a surgeon in the knowledge of anatomy.

No student of his would be so unwise as to remark in his hearing, "Connect the knee bone to the shin bone." The Latin words are patella and tibia, and these terms are applied in daily conversation by Beetz. He considers familiarity with anatomy to be an essential part of figure art.

"Some students think art is a Bohemian affair where talent takes over and genius reigns," he commented, while stressing that important factual knowledge of anatomy precedes taking liberties with human forms.

Occupied with instructing nine art classes at the college doesn't leave much spare time, but Beetz is currently pursuing another facet of art—sports writing.

The walls of his studio at home are lined with unfinished oils of the Andre Lhote influence.

News Photographer Lectures Here Friday

Ray (Scotty) Morris, staff photographer on the San Francisco Examiner, will speak here from 10 a.m. to noon Friday in S-136, photography instructor Emmett Smith announced last week.

Smith commented that Morris, former photography student here, "has an extraordinary amount of initiative." A display of Morris' photos opened Monday in Cloud Hall Gallery and will continue throughout next week.

Morris will talk on News Photography, and all faculty members and students are invited to attend, Smith said.

New Club Established To Strengthen Student Knowledge Of Science

Life and Medical Science Club is a new organization being started this semester at City College at the suggestion of the San Francisco Medical Society.

The club is open to everyone, but it is organized primarily for those interested in biological and medical sciences, Samuel Carpenter, life and medical science instructor here, said.

"The purpose of this club is to stimulate interest in medical science and also to provide interesting topics for students' information and discussions, Bob Landman, temporary co-chairman, emphasized.

Club meetings will be held Thursdays during College Hours in S-309, and movies and speakers concerned with biological exploration, history, current research, opportunities for work as students or carrier opportunities will be featured, Linda Guthertz, second co-chairman said.

Student vote will determine whether the club will be a biological science club, a medical science club or a combined biological and medical sciences club, but there is a possibility that the club will change its name to something more catching, Miss Guthertz explained.

Co-sponsors of the club are Ronald Hochede and Carpenter, science instructors. Election of permanent officers is expected in a future meeting, at which time the club's permanent program will be established. The club was established to increase extracurricular interest in the sciences, Carpenter said.

Spirited Vikings Upset Rams, 24-6

Pass Thefts And Fumbles Assist Injuries In Loss

By Fred Wales

Although neither rain, nor sleet, nor snow, nor hail can stop the Ram gridders, fumbles, interceptions, penalties and injuries can and did last Saturday in Martinez against Diablo Valley, 24-8.

The upset loss evened the Rams record at 3-3 and threw them into a third place tie with Chabot and San Jose only one game behind second place Foothill.

Ball control was the key to the loss. The Rams gave up the ball six times on fumbles or intereceptions.

In the nightmare of a fourth quarter every time they had the ball they either fumbled or had a pass stolen.

The first half was more of the Rams ball game as they out ran the Vikings 126 yards to 45 yards and registered their lone tally.

Late in the first quarter the Rams drove 65 yards to the Diablo Valley eight yard line before giving up the ball.

The defense held and following the Vikings punt the Rams took over on the Diablo Valley 36.

Four plays later, on the 16 yard line, Oliver Mitchel broke around left end and got a block from Bob Hector at the ten and cut between two defenders into the end zone.

However, the 6-0 lead was shortlived as Ron Morelli returned the ensuing kickoff to the Rams 31 yard line. Two Dave Dyer passes later, Dave Shepard ran it in from two yards out.

Dyer then hit Mike Kyle for the two point conversion and an 8-6 lead with 8:12 in the half.

Later in the period, Henry Scott hit Tom Phillips on a short pass up the middle and as Philipps spotted daylight Dick Austin spotted a loose football, fell on it and Diablo took over.

The Vikings went 21 yards in five plays with Butch Rounsiville hitting Bob Fredericks for the final ten yards.

Rounsiville used a quarterback sneak for two more points and a 16-6 half-time lead.

In the third quarter with a fourth and 19 from the 19, Diablo's Dyer hit Fredericks for the TD and Morelli added two points on an 8 yard run for the 24-6 final.

A definite loss to the Rams came in the third quarter when defensive tackle Charlie O'Brien injured his right knee and was forced to leave the game. It is feared the 350-pound lineman will be lost for the remainder of the season.

The team's leading rusher, Pat Lewis, sat out the game with a bad ankle and fullback Joe Sobeck accompanied him with a crushed hand.

Jim Carter proved the only bright spot for the Rams as he came off the bench to rack up 72 yards on six carries.

Defensively, Mitchel and King each grabbed Viking aerials to stop scoring drives.

Booters Whip Vikings, 7-1, Face San Mateo For Title

By Peter Huebner

Ram soccermen downed Diablo Valley College, 7-1, in preparation for the final game against second-place San Mateo, at 1 p.m., Saturday, there for the first Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference championship.

San Mateo previously beat Diablo Valley College, 8-2, and poses the only threat for the Ram booters to preserve a perfect record, now standing at 5-0 in league competition and 9-0 overall.

Only a tie against San Mateo is needed for the Rams to finish the season in first place and thus become the first champion of the Northern California Junior Soccer Conference.

Should San Mateo beat the Rams, both teams will be tied for first place, and since no playoff in a case like this is scheduled, championship glories go to both teams.

As to the Diablo Valley College game, the Ram booters did not score as many goals as in their first round 10-0 victory, but showed a much better performance against a more enthusiastically playing Diablo team.

In the first quarter, outside left Carlos Cortez "as usual," scored the first goal, but it was not until the second quarter that the Ram team settled and took command of the game.

Alex Volikowski, who later became top scorer of the day, opened this quarter's scoring feast with a well-placed shot, Peter Huebner, "fiercely playing" substitute Ray Muscat and Cortez followed with one goal apiece.

In the last quarter Volikowski scored his second and third goals, before Diablo scored its sole goal. Substitute Sal Rodriguez played a good game as did Mike Beltran. Tony Losada relieved goalie Ruben Hernandez in the goal to give the latter a chance for a workout on the field.

After the game coach Roy Diederichsen commented that his team is well prepared for the important San Mateo game and San Mateo's key players are singled out and will be kept in close check.

In the first encounter the San Mateans gave the Rams a real battle, as they tied the score three times, before the San Francisco team finally, in the last 15 minutes of the game, showed extreme hustle in order to secure a 6-4 victory.

"We have learned out of this experience not to take San Mateo too lightly," Diederichsen said, "and I will have my players go all out right from the start of the game, so that our almost sure championship will not suffer last minute jeopardy."

In a practice game last week, the Rams beat San Francisco State College, 3-1, as Calixto Cuevas, Waldon Hom and Larry Katreff seored one goal apiece.

Spikers Capture Fourth Place In Conference Meet

Equalling their conference dual meet standing, the Ram harriers strode to a fourth place finish in the Golden Gate Conference cross-country championship meet at Stanford November 6.

Team scores found dual meet champion San Mateo the winner with 61 points followed by San Jose with 66, Oakland 81, San Francisco 98, Chabot 121, Contra Costa 144, Foothill 162 and Diablo Valley 178.

Pacing the Rams were Gene Plotkin and Ozzie Norris as they placed seventh and tenth respectively, with times of 16:52 and 17:08. Norris finished with the same time and place as he did last year. They were followed closely by Rich Klemmer, ex-Lincoln high ace, who finished 13th in 17:18.

Fourth and fifth men for the Rams, Dan Christian and Mike Conroy, placed 33rd and 35th respectively with sixth man Dan Murphy finishing in 38th spot.

Individual meet champion, Oakland Thunderbird John Lodin, crossed the finish line in 16:26.8 to set a new Stanford course and meet record. Defending meet champion, Jim Huff of San Mateo, placed second in 16:32 to pace the team champions.

San Mateo's Tony Casillas placed third, Jim Sullivan of San Jose fourth and Bill Finstad of Foothill fifth to round out the top five finishers.

Coach Lou Vasquez stated, "We did well to equal last season's record in this meet. Plotkin and Norris are better this year because of the valuable experience they gained last year."

Vasquez also quipped, "Our freshmen have come along quite well as our fourth place finish equaled last year's record in this meet when we had a veteran team loaded with sophomores."

The Rams took fourth place last year with 78 points, yet retained the same team place this year although scoring 98 points.

King To Fill Out Phelan's Top Five

Coach Sid Phelan stated yesterday that starting positions on the squad are still up for grabs.

"We have a number of good athletes but I cannot make a definite judgment until I see all the men in action," he remarked.

Some of the men who will turn out for basketball are still involved in fall athletics, and thus Phelan has not yet seen his basketballers as a complete group.

"We hope such players as Henry King will add further talent to the squad after the switch from football to basketball has been completed," Phelan said.

The Golden Gate Conference is expected to be one of the more powerful two-year college conferences, according to Phelan, and San Jose City College is considered the team with the greatest potential to capture this year's crown.

The first definite home encounter for the Rams will be December 17 against Vallejo College, member of the Golden Valley Conference.

Second Place Up For Grabs In Ram Tilt With Owls Friday

San Francisco's Rams are slated for action Friday as they host the Foothill College Owls in their final outing of the 1963 Golden Gate Conference grid season. The game will begin at 2:30 p.m. in the college stadium.

The red-hot Owls had won four in a row prior to their clash with league-leading Contra Costa. Their only loss of the year was their season opener which they dropped, 23-15, to scrappy San Jose.

The outcome of Friday's game could determine the final holder of second place in the conference. The Rams have been battling Foothill for second spot throughout the season.

The Owls have a capable defense which had allowed only 39 points to opposing teams before they met Oakland. Chabot was the only team allowing fewer to that date—37.

San Francisco's defense has not been as consistent as Foothill's though through the first five games the Rams have allowed only 47 opposing points, 23 of which were dished out by Contra Costa.

As of last week, the Owls had five men in the league top ten offensive statistics.

Halfback John Travis, second only to Chabot quarterback Gerry Fisher for total offense, is the Owl's most potent threat, both on the ground and receiving passes from George Wagner, second quarterback in the conference.

Almost equally dangerous are fullback Leroy Foster, seventh in the conference last week, halfback Paul McCormick, sixth in the league, and fullback Frank Lyneh, tenth in the league.

Wagner hits with around 50 per cent of his passes, better than most quarterbacks in the conference and had piloted his club to 129 total points up to the Oakland game.

In the way of offensive power, the Rams now have Henry Kinz, end, Joe Sobek, fullback, and halfbacks Pat Lewis and Oliver Mitchell, who up to last week held down 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st in the conference for total offense.

Foothill is slightly favored in Friday's contest as San Francisco's 3-3 record to last week shows only 50 total points, an average of eight to the Owls' 21 points per game.

Ram head coach Dutch Elston disclosed that the Ram offensive efforts may be hampered by the loss of halfback Charlie Stewart who has a blood clot on his leg, and tackle Charlie O'Brien, out with an ankle injury.

Loss of O'Brien has caused some question as to who will fill his spot as only three other tackles are available. Lewis is also recovering from an ankle injury, and his action may be limited.

Elston emphasized, "We can beat Foothill as we can beat any other team in the league, if we stay in there."

Alpha Kappa Rho Only Undefeated Intramural Team

Fraternity league action in the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural basketball competition found Alpha Kappa Rho the only undefeated team of that league as of last Tuesday night.

Zeta Phi Sigma hoopsters were added to Alpha Kappa Rho's victims when they were smashed, 40-25. Sharp-shooter Tom London scored a total of 15 points for the winners, while Zeta Phi Sigma's Bill Tobin bounced in 13 points.

Alpha Phi Epsilon lost in a forfeit to Beta Tau, 2-0. This was the second game Alpha Phi Epsilon lost by forfeiting the game because of an insufficient number of players present.

In the club league, the undefeated Hotel and Restaurant downed the Lutheran club, 44-23. Mark White totaled 14 points for the Hotel and Restaurant. Phil Wuerstle made an effort to win, accounting for 17 Lutheran Club points.

Newman Club players trounced the Hawaiians, 45-35, registering their second win. Mike Jacobson helped the Newman Club by sinking 15 points. John Deniz was high point man for the Hawaiians, making 16 points.

In the Independent league last Wednesday night two of the three undefeated teams matched skill. The Divine Ones remained undefeated by scalping the Apaches, 38-21. Ely Horn totaled 12 points for the winners.

The undefeated Originals kept their title by beating the Beavers, 40-31. Ed Mack and Charles Luke shared the title of high-point man for the Originals by making 11 points each. The Beavers' Chris Smith scored 14 points.

The Brothers Five topped the Five, 48-24, with the help of Bill March's 18 points. Six points were scored by both Alex Ruse and Dan Schaffer of the Five.

The Panthers won their first game by way of a forfeit because of the Independents' insufficient number of players. The Ravens winged in a win by out-scoring the Mets, 47-27. Russ Rege hit 13 points.

Local Gridders Win Battles But Lose War By 'Toe' To Jaguars

In an example of winning the battles but losing the war, the Ramgridders were edged by a toe, 8-6, in the San Jose contest two Fridays past at the Ram stadium.

Although the Ram defense kept the Jaguars from crossing the goal line, the offense couldn't come up with the right play to take advantage of its opportunities.

San Jose took an early 3-0 lead on a 9-yard field goal by Bill Pollack as 4:47 remained in the half. With two minutes left in the half, Henry Scott followed up two misses with a 48-yard aerial to Henry King. King used his basketball ability to snag the pass alley-oop style in between two defenders.

On the next play, Vern Bradford bolted 17 yards up the middle for the score as little red hankies floated in the breeze.

The Rams had their fifth seore of the season called back and resumed again at the 31 yard line.

However, four plays later, Scott went around right end on a keeper play for 16 yards to the San Jose 1-yard line only to have the gun sound the end of the half.

The Rams finally did seore in the fourth period on a drive that went 64-yards in six plays.

Pat Lewis initiated the drive by blasting 32-yards up the middle before being caught from behind on the San Jose 32-yard line. Four plays later Bradford jolted up the center for 19 yards and the TD.

With 3:41 in the contest and the Rams up 6-3, a Jaguar punt rolled dead on the Ram one yard line.

Four plays later Doug Smith stood in the end zone, and San Jose was awarded an intentional safety and two points with 2:11 in the game.

The safety was awarded in an attempt to take up time and give Punter Smith a chance to kick from the 20 instead of the end zone.

Unfortunately the Rams had their punt returned to the Ram 38-yard line where San Jose took over.

Following an Al Maggiore pass to Pollock for 29 yards, the Jaguars waited until fourth down, Pollock kicked another nine-yard field goal and there went the old ball game.

The loss was a tough one for the Rams as the catching of King, the running of Lewis and Bradford and a juggling one-handed intereception by Oliver Mitchel all went for naught.

College Reaction To President's Death

The sudden interruption of classes by the first KCSF announcement that President John F. Kennedy had been shot Friday morning while in Dallas, Texas, brought the Campus to a virtual standstill.

Further developments succeeded at a rapidly increasing rate, as the news bulletins flashed from Dallas and the death of the President was made official. All campus activities were immediately cancelled.

Theilen, Roddick Vie For AS Presidency

SRP Nominates Goodrich To Vice Presidential Spot

By Herm Kligerman

John Theilen received a vote of confidence from the Students Representative Party at its convention last Tuesday night to carry the party's banner in next month's Associated Student elections as its presidential candidate.

Theilen, this semester's State Information chairman and a runner-up in last semester's presidential race, was nominated by the Sophomore Class and seconded by the Associated Men Students.

JOHN THEILEN, State Information chairman, who was nominated for next semester's AS Presidency at the SRP convention, November 19.

However, it was not that easy. Phyllis Webb, AS vice president this semester, also received a nomination for the spring presidency. After nomination, and acceptance speeches, a roll call vote was taken, and 15 of the 16 clubs present favored Theilen as their candidate.

Earlier, Dean of Women Mary Golding commented that "more women should be elevated into public offices so that they may become better known." In his opening remarks, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman advised SRP "to chart a good course with your choice of candidates."

The convention began at 7:30 p.m. with AS President Vince Contreras giving the welcoming address. In a style typical of the entire convention, he immediately opened nominations for chairman of the evening.

Steve Christ and Joel Miller were nominated, with the former winning out, 9-4, in a roll-call vote.

Each represented club was entitled to one vote in each election and abstentions were allowed.

For the AS Vice Presidency, SRP nominated Lynn Goodrich. As the sole candidate, Miss Goodrich was approved by acclamation upon a motion by the Organized Independents #1, and a second from the Freshman Class.

In another uncontested primary, Roger Kauffman gained the nod from SRP delegates for the office of Associated Men Students President.

Two candidates, Carol Parnow and Wardene Oliver, were nominated for Associated Women Student President. A roll-call vote saw Miss Oliver winning the nomination, 10-8.

The most spirited race of the night pitted Gary Ettin and Miller in a race to become Sophomore Presidential nominee. During the caucus preceding the vote, Ettin and his "followers" paraded around the room with campaign placards.

Ettin squeezed out a victory in the roll-call vote, 9-5, with three abstentions.

Larry Casalegno, uncontested for the Freshman Class Presidency, received SRP's support by acclamation.

SRP then nominated seven students to fill sophomore seats on Student Council next semester. Recipients of the highest number of votes were Jim Vance, Nancy Weigand, Sandy Castelli, Mary Ann Ducommun, Carol Wong, Fran Richardson and Miller.

Eleven students were originally nominated to fill the seven freshman seats on council, but before the vote could be taken the field was narrowed to the necessary seven.

Nominees included Terry Cloney, Eileen Marx, Loralee Lando, Barbara Kontes, Charlotte Wong, Larry O'Leno and Sue Stanghelini.

The convention then focused its attention on SRP's platform. Discussion arose on each of the eight stated points, and Theilen reminded the delegates that the platform "is only tentative and is subject to change."

Highlights included the "continuing evaluation of the AS Constitution," "increasing personal pride at the college by stimulating college spirit with well-planned activities," and to "initiate a training seminar for students interested in participating in student government."

SRP also recommended to Student Council that a standing committee be formed to encourage and boost student participation in activities and that the top four elected AS officers, below President and Vice President, be given a vote on council.

King, Queen Reign At Last Semiannual Soph Ball, Dec. 6

What will be the final Sophomore Ball of any fall semester because of a recent Student Council ruling making it an annual spring event, is set Friday, December 6, in the California and Mural Rooms of the St. Francis Hotel, Class President Steve Christ stated today.

Highlight of the 9 p.m. to midnight dance will be the introduction of the King and Queen. The couples aspiring to win the contest have already turned in their petitions to Christ. Each couple entering the race for King and Queen is sponsored by either a club, fraternity or sorority.

Selection of the winners will be based on the number of votes each couple receives, and Christ explained that votes will cost a penny a piece, and money received will be donated to the Sophomore Class Scholarship Fund.

King and Queen voting begins next Monday with polls set up at the Silver Pole in Science Hall. Contestants will have their pictures attached to vote receptacles.

The winners of the contest will be given trophies, roses and robes. The trophies are being donated by Theta Tau, and the roses for the Queen will be donated by Beta Tau.

The robes are traditional with all Sophomore balls. Runners-up will also be given roses.

Couples planning to attend the ball will be admitted free provided one of the couple has an Associated Student card. It is not necessary for both members of a couple to be registered here, Christ said.

Tickets will be made available starting next Monday at the Silver Pole. On the first three days next week, tickets will be for Sophomores only while other students interested will be able to obtain tickets Thursday and Friday.

Because the number of bids is limited to 150, Christ urged students to get their bids in early.

Newly Revised AS Constitution Sees Amendment Vote

Another special election, this time to amend the revised Associated Student's Constitution, began on campus yesterday and will end at 2 p.m. today.

Up for approval is a change in the unit requirements for a candidate to run for AS President. It was moved, seconded and passed during a recent Student Council meeting that the requirements provide that a candidate will have completed at least 45 but not more than 68 units prior to assuming office.

The present stipulation sets 42 as the minimum and 60 as the maximum.

Council sanctioned this new "alteration" since the new Constitutional Revisions Committee Chairman Joel Miller was quoted as "not liking the way the new constitution reads."

Objections were evident, but Chris Small, Election Commissioner, scheduled the amendment election after council approved it by a vote.

The proposed amendment needs a two-thirds majority of those students voting for ratification.

Miss Small stated that "any interested student with a registration card" is eligible to cast a ballot.

Polls are set up near the Silver Pole in Science Hall and in the fountain section of the cafeteria.

Santa Contest To Spark COO Annual Fund Drive Here

Council of Organizations will sponsor a Santa Claus contest December 5 through 12 as part of its Christmas fund drive to raise money for the underprivileged, Buzz Kribs, COO president, announced today.

"Each contestant in the Santa Claus contest will have a jar with his picture on it placed at the Silver Pole," he stated. "Students voting for their favorite Santa will place a penny for each vote in the contestant's jar."

There is no limit to the number of votes a student may cast, Kribs said, and money collected from the contest will go into the general Christmas drive fund.

The contestant with the largest number of pennies will be proclaimed Santa Claus and will be presented a trophy. Students wishing to enter the contest must be sponsored by a campus organization and may obtain details from Kribs.

The Santa Claus contest will be the highlight of the week-long Christmas fund drive from December 5 to December 12 which is an annual undertaking of the COO. All funds to be collected will be given to a charitable organization or directly to needy families.

COO will announce the winners of the contest at the second of the two rallies scheduled before Christmas vacation.

Contestants will be introduced at the first rally, Thursday, December 5, featuring a folk singer and other entertainment. The second rally, Thursday, December 12, will be highlighted by the announcement of the Santa Claus contest winner and the amount of money the drive collected and to whom the money will be given. A car parade is scheduled, with the winning entry receiving a trophy.

"I expect the two rallies and the car parade to be much more successful than the last ones," Kribs stated, adding "the COO is much more organized and is receiving a great deal of support from its members."

Reichert Runs For Second Position In USP Campaign

By Lowell Mengel

To the surprise of very few students actively connected with Student Council, Associated Men Students President Bob Roddick was nominated last Wednesday night for the Spring AS Presidency by the delegates to the newly organized United Students Party's convention.

Roddick ran unopposed for the nomination and received the full support of all seven groups represented at the Smith Hall convention.

In his acceptance speech, Roddick said some of his aims would be getting votes for the "top four" AS officers below president and vice president at council meetings. These officers, in addition to the AS President and AS Vice President (who already has a vote) are Associated Men Student and Associated Women Student Presidents, and Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents.

He also wants an appeals board where students can go if they are not happy with a council vote, plus reorganization of the Rally Committee.

For Vice President, the convention nominated another unopposed candidate, Cecil Reichert, who was then accepted by acclamation.

The convention nominated Lou Galliani for AMS president unanimously. In his acceptance speech, Galliani said he too hoped to get votes for the "top four."

With their new record of complete lack of competition, at this point in the convention the group nominated Joan Twomey for AWS President with still another unanimous vote.

After Miss Twomey was nominated by Beta Tau, representative Buzz Kribs criticized the convention for not having competition in any of the races for nominations.

Despite Kribs' criticism, the convention ignored him in the nominations for Sophomore President and nominated Dennis Whooley without any opposition from the floor.

The first contest of the evening was for the Freshman Presidential spot. Kribs nominated Linda Hartshorn, while Alpha Kappa Rho nominated Gene Riley.

With each fraternity and sorority using its two votes, Riley won, 10 to 4. In the nominating speeches, it was pointed out that Riley had extensive experience, being a past Teen Club president.

With the "top six" officers nominated, convention co-chairmen Bea Malone and Joel Cohen moved the meeting into nominations for Student Council seats.

Seven candidates were to be nominated for sophomore seats on council; 14 were nominated, and the winners were Miss Malone, Robert Steffens, Pearl Knoller, Larry Laber, Jerry Harris, Keith Woolwine and Darlene Richards.

For freshman seats on council there were 18 nominations, and a run-off for places number six and seven was needed.

Winners on the first ballot were Carol Harover, Chuck Largaspada, Mary Maurer, Mike Selsnik, and Bill Tobin.

In the run-off for the remaining two nominations, Mary Jane Super and Maurice Chavez edged out Paul Elliott and Maurya McKendrick by one vote each.

Rich Hellesto, Inter-Fraternity Council representative, opened the convention, saying "spirit was at a low ebb" and the fraternities and sororities "needed control" to correct this and other problems.

The USP platform promises there will be no cuts in allocations from council without a representative of the group concerned being present and that a more politically sound constitution would be developed.

The party would also "stimulate spirit with well-planned activities" encourage freshman and faculty interest in college activities, clean up the campus and seek to ease the congestion in Smith Hall.

BOB RODDICK, Associated Men Students president, who was nominated for next semester's AS Presidency at the USP convention, November 20.

Thanksgiving's Spirit

By Chris Welzig

Thanksgiving is a decidedly religious holiday, one to which a deep religious significance is attached by millions of Americans who, in churches throughout the country, will celebrate the occasion on their knees before going to the dining table to celebrate.

Yet, Thanksgiving has a special patriotic appeal to all but a few Americans, an appeal which springs from a deep faith in the youngest of the truly great nations.

Americans are inherently lackadaisical during a period of normality, but a binding spirit, which in a time of crisis can cause an outburst of fierce nationalism, is equally inherent in all but a few Americans.

Americans are the first persons to ridicule their government and all it stands for, but they are also the first to take attacks from outsiders as personal insults and rise to defend their country, physically or verbally, against any and all.

This binding spirit reflects itself in the forthcoming Thanksgiving holiday. Our forefathers, celebrating their good fortune near the shores of Plymouth Bay, inspired a holiday which is both religious and patriotic in nature.

The holiday in 1963 will be celebrated by millions of Americans who are enjoying the greatest prosperity the world has ever seen. Americans should truly give thanks. They are eating better and enjoying more conveniences than ever before.

Only 30 years ago, in 1933, many Americans celebrated Thanksgiving in bread lines in the metropolitan cities. The Depression had crushed the American economy and, indeed, Thanksgiving was a barren affair.

And so, the humility and temperance expressed at the first Thanksgiving are needed to guide the thoughts and actions of Americans today.

Columbia Professor Tells ACP College Press Should Be Free

ASSOCIATED COLLEGIATE PRESS: Professor Melvin Mencher of the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia University says that colleges and universities are "morally obligated" to guarantee full freedom of expression to the college press.

Professor Mencher addressed student newspaper reporters at the annual convention of the Associated Collegiate Press in New York City.

He listed three "basic truths" which he cited as ignored by those discussing freedom of student expression:

1. Most college publications are not free. Despite administrators who contend otherwise, most college papers "are subject to restraints prior to publication." Administrations limit areas into which the college press can go.

2. Most administrators do not want full freedom of student expression. "These people are dedicated and hard working, but they are concerned with placating legislatures and donors. The student press is interested in issues, not edifices."

3. The argument that freedom of the press depends on responsibility is "spurious." There is no "definition of freedom of expression which makes freedom dependent on responsible behavior."

Actually, he said, the student press acts responsibly but looks into issues which the university might not want examined:

"The point administrators make is that they seek restraints on the campus press to protect the dormitory cook from being libelled and to prevent some disappointed student actor from making broad hints in a play review about the personal life of the head of the drama department. They say, that is, that they are concerned about good taste and libel.

"This simply is not so. Those who want to limit the student press do so for far better reasons, and they demean themselves when they talk such nonsense about the so-called irresponsibility of the student press. They really want to keep students from examination of some political and social issues that might embarrass the university," he said.

Professor Mencher said that the college's moral obligation to the student press is the same as its obligation to faculty members' freedom of expression and the sanctity of the classroom.

"The university recognizes that one of its major functions is to encourage the expression of ideas and the testing of theories," he said. This recognition, he contended, should be applied to the student press.

Footlighters In The Spotlight

THE FOOTLIGHTERS, a new drama group of Delta Psi Omega, national honorary drama society, has emerged on campus in order that additional productions may be brought to students here.

The group is composed of eight students majoring in drama and music. The immediate goal of the group is to be on its own, and this goal can be seen in action in a quartet of one-act plays, which is to be presented beginning Wednesday, December 4, in the theater.

These eight imaginative students have already shown their potential as actors this semester. Working for the drama department, they have appeared in numerous plays, such as Antigone, The Ugly Duckling, The Bald Soprano and Impromptu.

Contrary to the usual "Good Luck" wish to any new organization, The Guardsman hopes, in the theater tradition, the group will break a leg.

Straaaaaaaight Arrow!

'Hope to Make the 30-Yard Line' Is Wish Of Beginning Archers As Target Distance Offers Challenge

PREPARING FOR the hunting season, archery student takes careful aim while visions of bear and deer dance in his head!

In most classes, as a student improves in skill and knowledge, he moves forward in the class. Not in archery. There, he moves backward.

After the first few days of classroom instruction, the students pick up their bows, arrows and quivers and line up on the football field 15 yards away from the colorful target. As they draw their bows for the first time and aim, each one dreams of hitting the bull's-eye every time.

It's an optimistic idea but not a very practical one! Arrows fly wide of the mark and there are many groans of dismay.

In the center of the target there is a brilliant gold circle, not too small but not nearly large enough for many of the novices. An arrow shot into this circle will score the highest--nine points.

Circling the gold, there is a band of red worth seven points, then a band of blue worth five points, a band of black worth three points and finally, a band of white worth only ONE small point.

Arrows hitting the petticoat on the outer edge of the target or on the hay bale receive no score, which is a disappointing but all too true a fact.

However, there is one bright spot for the novice archer. If an arrow hits the target but rebounds off it, or passes completely through the hay bale, the score is seven points, no matter where the arrow hits.

Gradually, the aim of the students improves, the workmen are no longer afraid of setting foot on the field, and students look forward to the posting of new target assignments in the hopes that they will be moved back to 20 yards.

Sure enough, many of the aspiring archers are moved back and, though it is harder to hit the target from that distance, it is also more of a challenge.

As the students' scores grow higher, they are moved further back and the fun begins again.

For the near-sighted student, being placed on the 30-yard line poses many a problem. Not only is it harder to hit the target from that distance, the poor student can't even see the target and does not know how he is doing until he goes up to pull out his arrows!

Once again the arrows fly wild and wise people stay away from the archery field until the aim improves once again. Arrows sometime have a way of landing on the target next to the one the student is aiming for!

Even with all the problems of the cold wind, not being able to see the target and breaking arrows on the cement retaining wall behind the hay bales, everyone enjoys the class and gradually improves in skill.

Right now some of the more capable archers are thinking of taking bow and arrows with them on hunting trips rather than the conventional rifle.

Ram Ski Club Draws Many New Members

The white, icy snow almost blinded the coed as she cast a cautious glance down the long, steep, dangerous mountain that was commonly referred to as the bunny slope.

Finally she decided to shove off. With her skis pointed in the right direction, she moved with the white ground rushing below her feet and the skis carrying her effortlessly over the frozen wonderland.

This thrill, this new experience is common to many other new skiers in the Ram Ski Club, Mac Kundzins, club president, stated.

Unlike many ski associations, more than half of the members are inexperienced skiiers, just learning.

The main objectives of the club, Rundzins explained, are to create interest and safety in skiing, initiate ski trips and improve skiing abilities.

Each weekend, members drive to slopes all over Northern California. Skiers can pick the places they are interested in and, because transportation costs are shared expenses are cut.

During the semester break, a five-day trip to the Olympic Village at Squaw Valley is planned. Cost is $48, with room, board, bus transportation, lift reduction, free skate rental, discount ski lessons and free swimming in a heated pool included in the price.

Since starting as a small group last semester, the club has grown to an SRO crowd at the meetings, where guest speakers and ski movies are usually featured, Kundzins said.

The next meeting will be Thursday, December 5, during College Hour.

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

THE President is slain.

Last Friday afternoon, the bullet of an assassin ended the life of our 35th President. The free world had lost its leader. The young man who had assumed the mantle of responsibility of the highest office in our land and who devoted his life to the cause of world peace, was no more.

The President is slain.

The man, whose book, Profiles In Courage, won a Pulitzer Prize in 1957, was possessed of the brilliant mind and intellect of a man of letters. Nevertheless he took the time and effort to emphasize the importance of physical well-being. This man, who was the image of youth and stamina, now lies dead in Arlington National Cemetery along with the other martyred heroes of our Republic.

The President is slain.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy was also a family man. This man, who assumed the awesome responsibility of the Presidency, somehow managed to find time to be with his wife and two children. Regardless of the pressures of his office, the President always displayed the qualities of a devoted husband and loving father. Now, by a maniacal act, the first family of the land has been transformed into a grieving widow and orphaned children.

The President is slain.

The saddest figure of this entire catastrophe is indeed Mrs. Kennedy. This woman, who brought with her to the White House, beauty, charm and grace, has since become the personification of the American Lady. She, who added so much to the position into which she was thrust, received in turn nothing but grief and tragedy from it.

The courage and moral strength which she has shown throughout the past horrible days adds a new dimension of respect and sorrow to our hearts. She shall always be, in our minds, the First Lady.

The President is slain.

When the news reached us on campus, it was received with disbelief. Some thought it nothing more than a poor joke. When finally we were forced to believe the news, not to accept it but to believe it, silence born of grief, helplessness and anger prevailed everywhere. We felt we should not stay here. We felt we must go somewhere. But where?

The President is slain.

Soon, from all over the world, the reactions started to reach us. Words poured in. Words like: shocking, dreadful, incalculable tragedy, catastrophe, wicked and senseless act, hideous crime, penetrated the haze of disbelief that permeated the air.

The words we could not find were being forced upon us.

The President is slain.

In Dallas the man who was accused of this heinous crime is himself dead of a gunshot wound. In death, Lee Harvey Oswald accomplished more than he was accused of doing in life. Jack Ruby, the man accused of killing Oswald, delivered a terrible blow to the principles for which the office of the man he avenged stood.

The President is slain.

This week, which was to be a week of happiness and thanksgiving, has been transformed into a week of sorrow and mourning. Thursday is the day traditionally set aside for Americans to give thanks and to celebrate and enjoy the blessings of our free society.

Or should we?

The President is slain.

Dental Students Learn The Art Of Building Teeth

Technician Is Both Mechanic and Artist

By Patricia Dutter

Mechanical ability and manual dexterity enable dental technology students to turn their learning into earning upon completion of their two-year dental technology curriculum here.

And that curriculum is designed to train students for the field of dental work not performed directly on patients. It includes making full and partial dentures, gold inlays, crowns and bridges.

Furthermore, the dental technician who makes the teeth to replace those damaged or lost, is also in a sense an artist.

Frank Szehner, director of the college's training program, describes the technician as "a creator of a masterpiece that is not only aesthetically pleasing but functional as well. To create his masterpiece, the dental technician must possess a high degree of mechanical ability and manual dexterity."

Mechanical ability involves the coordination of inner attitudes to achieve a creative end, while manual dexterity calls for manipulation of the tools used in the technician's trade.

Manual dexterity, Szehner explained, is important because "laboratory equipment must be handled intelligently and safely for the technician to accomplish his work."

The dental technician works only from the authority invested in him by the dentist. Here the combination of mechanical ability and manual dexterity is essential if the technician is to meet the dentist's rigid standards.

The technician's work starts when the dentist furnishes him with a written prescription and a wax impression of the patient's teeth. The technician is then on his own.

Since the finished product replaces nature, the denture must match the patient's original set of teeth.

Besides mechanical ability and manual dexterity, the dental technician is also adept at bi-manual coordination.

This coordination Szehner explains as "the coordination between the eye and the hand." Its importance is primarily to aid the technician in acquiring "a sense for proportion, along with a keen discrimination between colors and shades."

Proportion enters the picture in denoting the size of the teeth, while color discrimination is essential to the proper blending of the shades of the teeth.

The success of a dental technician is largely dependent upon his temperament and personality. The work is painstaking and tedious, says Szehner, and a technician must possess an even temperament if he hopes for success.

"The formation of work habits necessary to success and advancement in the dental laboratory field is the main objective," Szehner said.

Szehner hopes that someday the "dental technician will achieve the same status in dentistry, as the pharmacist enjoys in medicine."

Footlighters Offer Benefit Performance

Profits From Four Plays Go To Retarded Children Group

Quartet, four one-act plays, will be presented Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, December 4, 5 and 6, in the campus theater by The Footlighters, new repertory group of Delta Psi Omega, national honorary drama society. Curtain will be at 8 p.m.

Ken Bachtold, spokesman for the group, in making this announcement emphasized that The Footlighters will present the plays as a benefit with proceeds going to San Francisco's Aid Retarded Children, Inc.

The four one-acts include The Marriage Proposal, a farce by Anton Chekhov, depicting the plight of a hot-headed but weak-hearted suitor, played by Bachtold, and his attempts at proposing to the 25-year-old spinster, played by Sandy Lundwall.

The melodramatic Horace Comes Home From The Laundry, by Vanita Sutton, tells the tale of an abandoned baby who is discovered in the laundry by the innocent young heroine, Daffodil Hoopenlooper, played by Miss Lundwall. Bachtold plays the role of the villain, Percival Polecat.

Others included in the cast are Jeanne Chieffo as Veronica Viper, the villainess; Larry O'Leno as Edgar Eager, the hero; Lynn Goodrich as Mme. Tremulo Tannhauser, the opera star; Moniot as the Fire Chief, Andrea Fulton as Blossom, the phone operator, and Mike Dobrinski as Algernon, the waiter.

Impromptu, a drama by Tad Mosel, was written while the author was a student at Yale. Four actors, played by Miss Lundwall, Miss Fulton, Bachtold and Moniot find themselves on a bare stage with instructions to improvise a play.

The comedy excerpt, We Were Dancing, from Noel Coward's Tonight At 8:30, depicts a country club triangle where the married Louise falls madly in love with the single Karl. Appearing in the play are Miss Lundwall, Miss Chieffo, Miss Goodrich, O'Leno, Bachtold, Moniot and Dobrinski.

SANDY LUNDWALL PROTECTS Larry O'Leno and baby Horace from the evil finger of Ken Bachtold in the one-act drama entitled Horace Comes Home From The Laundry, written by Vanita Sutton. "Horace" and three other one-act plays will start next Wednesday in the college theater.

Hindsight

WHEN students are in dire need of information for such things as a column, they usually return to a volume which is put out in paperback every year and turns out to be a combination Almanac, atlas and yearbook.

By turning the pages to a section entitled, States Of The Union, we can find out all sorts of things about California that almost nobody would have guessed.

Now everybody knows that the state of California is called the Golden State and that the state flower is the California golden poppy.

But who out there in this vast audience can tell us what the state insect of this fair state is?

The California Dog-faced Butterfly? You know something? You're right.

Everybody also knows that the state motto is Eureka! But how about the official state song?

Well, for all of those cynics out there, it just happens to be, California, I Love You. We have yet to find anybody who knows the words, and it's just a rumor that the tune is the same as He's a Ramblin' Wreck From Georgia Tech.

Thumbing on through the pages of this information manual, we come to a section entitled, Celebrated Persons, and here are the real names of our favorite movie stars.

Hollywood producers must not have cared for Annemarie Italiano, so they gave the role to Anne Bancroft — the same person.

Although Liz may not realize it, she's been running with Richard Jenkins all of this time, rather than Burton.

We also wonder why Issur Danielovitch didn't try to make it with his own name rather than change it to something so cheezy as Kirk Douglas.

Toward the middle of the book is a section called Aviation, and here we discover that the first aerial combat took place in August of 1914 -- with pistols and negative results.

This must be the reason World War I was called the last "gentleman's" war. Pistols at 20 miles and all of that.

While on the subject of war, we find under a section called, Principal Bills And Treaties Since 1901, that the Kellogg-Briand Pact of 1927 outlawed armed conflict between two nations.

This means that World War II was fought illegally, and it should be recalled.

Oh yes, there are all kinds of little tid bits you can dig up in this kind of a book.

Journalism students learn that Alaska is not the place to go looking for a job after graduation. The cool state has no morning newspapers, only six evening papers, and one Sunday edition.

It sort of looks as though there is not much happening amongst the polar bears.

Block SF Banquet Scheduled Dec. 2

Date of the Block SF Society's semi-annual awards banquet is Monday, December 2, society sponsor Arl 'Dutch' Elston announced last week.

Possible guest speaker at the banquet is Abe Woodson, John Ralston or George "Pappy" Waldorf, although the final choice has not yet been confirmed.

Woodson is well known for his sparkling performances with the San Francisco 49ers' defensive backfield and his success as a kickoff return artist.

Ralston is the new Stanford mentor successor to Cactus Jack Curtice as the gridiron boss down on the farm.

Waldorf is practically synonymous with football, since he coached the University of California Bears to three Rose Bowl appearances and has almost become a legend in the Bay Area.

Participants in football, soccer and cross country will be receiving blocks, and the winner of the most valuable player award in each sport will be announced.

Society President Ben Brown will be the banquet's master of ceremonies and will introduce the speakers and respective coaches.

Classes, Guardsman Halt For Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving Day, an annual public holiday in the United States, will be observed tomorrow on the campus.

No classes will be held tomorrow or Friday in observance of the holiday. Classes will resume Monday, December 2.

Because of the two days off for the holiday, The Guardsman will not be published next week.

The December 11 publication will be the last issue of the year, because of the Christmas vacation, which lasts from December 16 through 27. Monday, December 30 and Tuesday, December 31, are regular class days.

The two remaining issues of The Guardsman will be published January 8 and 15.

Contreras Attends Confab; Phyllis Webb Runs Council; Baseball Team Budget Passes

By Lowell Mengel

Phyllis Webb, this semester's Associated Student vice-president, became President-for-a-Day at Student Council last Thursday while the regular AS President, Vince Contreras, was in Asilomar attending a state-wide student government conference.

Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman and Dean of Women Mary Golding were in attendance at last Thursday's meeting to sub for Sherm Elworthy, student activities adviser, who also attended the convention.

With Miss Webb at the reigns council passed the spring baseball budget which was held over from the previous council meeting. Following discussion, Coach Ernest Domeseus was allocated $2737.29 to spend on his baseball team.

The vote was 9-0-0.

The sum, however, was cut by $203.90 from the original request. Part of the deletion included cleaning of team uniforms, but Domescus explained that he would ask his wife to clean the uniforms next semester at no cost to the team.

Council also granted $104 to Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, to send four representatives to a state convention in Santa Maria.

Members also allocated $947.82 to the swimming team and $733.50 to the Rally Committee. Earlier, amid discussion, it was brought out by several council members, and the Dean of Men, that the Rally Committee is actually nonexistent at present.

At Tuesday's meeting at which Contreras presided, a motion to hold the Freshman Ball in the fall semester and the Sophomore Ball in the spring was quickly approved by council, 7-0-3.

Associated Men Student President Bob Reddick asked council to approve his appointment of Robert Stephens as activities representative for AMS and Tom Hepler as intramural basketball representative. Council approved his appointments unanimously.

Steve Christ, Sophomore Class president, also asked council to approve his selection of former Finance Chairman Judi Beverly as the new treasurer of his class. Council also accepted this appointment unanimously.

AS Expenditures Cause Budget Cut

The Associated Students must cut the Spring, 1964, budget to make up for over-expenditures this semester, Eileen Marx, finance chairman, said today.

Last semester the AS allocated $44,000 to various organizations. This semester they found that they had spent $4000 over the budget.

The AS must therefore cut the budget for next--spring because of the additional $4000 spent this semester. As a result, AS can allocate only $36,000 for next semester to make up the deficit.

Organizations will suffer a loss of between 10 and 15 per cent of their requests. The AS did not cut as much last semester as the severe cutting they are doing now, Miss Marx said.

The cut will be made of luxuries of the various organizations, with which they can do without, and of excesses that aren't necessities, Miss Marx said.

Next semester's organizations will suffer, but the lost money must be made up, Miss Marx emphasized.

Ideas Fill AMS Suggestion Boxes

Suggestions ranging from decorating the information booth in Science Hall to installation of lights in the college stadium have filled the Associated Men Student suggestion box recently, Ray Chezik, AMS vice president, stated today.

The AMS has situated boxes across from the silver pole in Science Hall and at the entrance to the library. Students are welcome to submit constructive suggestions and/or comment on the college activities, in general, Chezik added.

Other suggestions recently received were to reschedule home football games to later in the day and to set up a general display case to exhibit the many trophies the college has earned throughout its existence.

Chezik considered these suggestions very "worthwhile," but said that some students put suggestions in the box "purely for amusement and with no definite purpose behind them."

All worthwhile suggestions are forwarded to Student Activities Adviser Sherm Elworthy, who, after initial investigation, may forward them to Council Of Organizations for further action.

The two boxes are checked weekly in order to add greater effectiveness to the project, Chezik explained.

H&R Serves Turkey

The annual Thanksgiving luncheon will be served in the cafeteria today during the lunch hour by the hotel and restaurant department, Lawrence B. Wong, instructor, announced last week.

Executive chef Pierre Coste, formerly chef at the Mark Hopkins and St. Francis Hotels, and 60 students and four instructors have prepared this traditional repast of 20, 25-pound turkeys.

The meal, for only 65 cents, will include roast turkey, cranberry sauce, candied sweet potatoes, or mashed potatoes, peas and pearl onions, a tossed salad and pumpkin pie.

During the regular lunch hour, from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., as many as 2000 students and faculty members are expected to be served by cafeteria manager John Dunn and his staff.

A new instructor, Tony Acherman, formerly a chef at the Olympic Club, will have his first experience at preparing a Thanksgiving dinner for the college.

There will be no change in the regular cafeteria schedule or serving procedure.

This will be the biggest lunchtime meal that the hotel and restaurant department serves during the college year, and it requires extra work and long preparation. Chef Coste and his helpers have worked since early this morning to be in readiness for the large crowd that is expected.

More than 1000 turkey dinners are expected to be served besides the regular lunch-time servings.

Agent Seeks Talent For International Folk Singing Show

Plans are currently being made for the first annual Hootenanny International to be held next summer in the Ozark Mountains area of Missouri, Joel Miller, agent here for the Hootenanny, explained last week.

The Hootenanny International, organized by a group of people in Overland Park, Kansas, will be open to both men and women college students.

Miller said that the Hootenanny organization sent letters to colleges throughout the United States requesting them to select a student who would be interested in acting as an agent for his college, by organizing Hootenanny plans on campus.

Upon receipt of the letter, Associated Student President Vince Contreras sought volunteers for the job. Miller agreed to act as agent for the college. He sent in his questionnaire to the Hootenanny organization and shortly after was accepted by the sponsors of the group.

The purpose of the Hootenanny's three separate, three-week sessions, "is to bring college students closer together," Miller said.

He added, "students representing colleges from Europe, South America and Canada are scheduled to attend."

The three-week session fee of $265 will cover the students room and board, Miller declared.

A variety of activities ranging from educational to athletic events is also on the schedule.

Instructors from several colleges will attend the Hootenanny sessions and give instruction in some college courses that the majority of students do not have time to study during the regular college year.

Insterested instructors here are invited to consult Miller in S-134 for full details. "Instructors will be salaried," Miller added.

Students interested in becoming subagents, helping Miller line up personalities for the Hootenanny International, may leave name, address and telephone number in S-134.

Employers' Need For Christmas Help Uncertain

The need for Christmas workers will be determined by the personnel managers after the Thanksgiving holidays, Joseph A. Amori, director of placement here stated last week.

This year, workers as well as the department stores, will suffer a handicap caused by the elimination of five sales days from the holiday schedule, Amori said, and as a result forecasts indicate a somewhat smaller volume of business for this year.

The hiring of most key personnel staffs has been nearly completed, Amori stated, and because of the five day sales loss, most business merchants are under-hiring. The attitude this year is one of letting the pre-holiday rush decide hiring procedure for the remainder of the season.

For the most part, the majority of Christmas workers has been hired since hiring started early in October. The majority of workers who are being or have been hired has been from among students with experience in sales and other related fields.

Though there are some positions still available in a variety of business opportunities, these have not been filled because of irregular class schedules of many applicants, Amori stated.

In addition to this, late afternoon and evening classes have eliminated a great many applicants from the field of Christmas work.

Students wishing part time Christmas jobs may still file their applications with the placement center at S-188, and Amori emphasized that some new employee requests are expected from employers for qualified personnel.

The center is open every weekday from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. as new job orders come in daily.

The reservoirs across the street from the college were once the home of a dog racing track. The dogs chased live rabbits around the track and were housed behind the present site of Proseks.

Death Of Kennedy Jolts Campus

Administration Cancels Classes, Social Activities

By Herm Kligerman

Last Friday's world-shattering occurence—the assassination of the President of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy—not only had international significance but local significance as evidenced by events on campus.

KCSF, the college's radio station, interrupted all scheduled classes at 10:54 a.m. last Friday with the broadcast that President Kennedy had been shot during a motorcade through Dallas, Texas.

Further information revealed that Texas Governor John Connally had also been wounded.

At approximately 11:15 a.m. KCSF returned to the air and stated that an unofficial communique from the Texas hospital revealed that President Kennedy's wound had proved fatal. He allegedly was shot in the head with an Italian-made 6.5 mm Carcano rifle.

The effect at City College was immediate and widespread. Administration officials met with College President Louis G. Conlan.

The official proclamation from President Conlan reads as follows: "The tragic death of the President of the United States was devastating to City College faculty and students alike.

"For this reason and out of respect for the President and his family all college exercises, including classes, were cancelled on Friday afternoon."

President Conlan informed faculty and administrators to spread the word to all students on campus that all classes had been cancelled and all activities called off.

Students who had attended 11 o'clock classes were informed by most of their instructors of the incident and told that classes were cancelled.

Most instructors seemed too concerned to conduct any type of class. They joined students in listening to the radio broadcasts and contemplating the seriousness of the event.

Dr. Conlan's official dismissal of all classes was said to be one of the first such moves in San Francisco schools. Eventually, all schools and colleges followed suit and dismissed students.

At the outset hundreds of students mingled around the library entrance in Cloud Hall listening to latest radio reports. The cafeteria was jammed to capacity. Silence prevailed and a few tears could be distinguished once students realized the full impact of the incident.

In less than an hour, the campus was virtually deserted. Students walked slowly, spoke in a low voice and abided with all orders in a dignified manner.

At 1 p.m. only those officials with a definite purpose on campus remained. Even these persons worked slowly and in silence.

Most students headed for cars, buses — home, generally — to listen to further reports. All realized what had happened: Many were speculating on what would happen in the future.

A memorial assembly of students was scheduled for yesterday in the college's football field. All 11 o'clock classes were cancelled so that all students could attend this assembly.

Speakers included Dr. Conlan, Associated Student President Vince Contreras and AS Vice President Phyllis Webb. Clergymen from the major religions were also present.

An announcement was made that a scholarship as a memorial to President Kennedy had been established by the students at City College.

Campus Joins The Nation In Mourning Tragic Act

PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY IS DEAD.

The news reached the campus at 11:15 a.m. Friday, plunging the campus into astonished bewilderment.

The news of our beloved President's death has sunk the nation and the whole world into deep mourning.

On the campus, the effect was of wide consternation. No panic resulted from the announcement. The flag in the courtyard was lowered to half-mast and the classes were immediately suspended.

The cafeteria suddenly became silent and the courtyard became filled with quietly-speaking students and faculty members alike, deeply shocked by the news.

John F. Kennedy, our 35th President was a man of highly regarded integrity and a very special man. He has been viewed as a legendary figure and an accompliished leader.

The President's death brings the American people to a deeply chagrined and sorrowful state.

In this tragic moment, the college takes time out to join the nation and the whole world in mourning President Kennedy and offering sincere condolences to his wife, their children and the rest of the Kennedy family.

All Sports Events Suspended At News Of Assassination

By Fred Wales

Expecting a deciding football game and a championship soccer contest, a shocked campus sports world joined the nation in suspending all activities at the word of the death of the President of the United States, John F. Kennedy.

All football games and other athletic contests were suspended and all discussion as to their rescheduling was put off.

Both coaches and athletes were unable to comprehend football let alone play the sport.

Known for his interest in sports in general and football in particular, the late President was instrumental in the recent drive for physical fitness and is responsible for the revival of physical education on both the college and high school level.

His favoritism toward football has often been chided, but his family touch football games were examples of an American sport played by a truly American family.

As to the football game if it were to be re-scheduled it would be at the Ram Stadium on either this Friday or Saturday.

Ram coach Dutch Elston, considering the difficulties of his players and the opposing team, voiced the opinion that if it were all right with Foothill the game would be cancelled and the season would be terminated.

The reasons for the cancellation would be that neither coach would see his players until yesterday and since Thursday is Thanksgiving the teams would have two days of practice before the game.

Midterms would also enter into the decision as would the numerous Ram injuries and the beginning of basketball season.

As it stands the season has run a week late already due to the week off the Conference enjoyed prior to the season's openers.

Golden Gate Conference Commissioner Louis Batmale announced to the coaches that the decision to play the games would be up to the schools themselves and as far as the conference was concerned they would only intervene in cases of controversy.

Presently the Rams are in sole possession of third place with an even 3-3 record one game behind Foothill and Chabot 4-2 and three games behind League Champion Contra Costa 6-0.

Should all schools decide to make up their games the schedules would find: Foothill at San Francisco, Chabot at Contra Costa, Oakland at San Mateo, and Diablo Valley at San Jose.

The dates and times of all contests would be decided between the schools participating.

The soccer game falls into other obstacles as the game would decide whether the Rams would rule as sole champions or share honors with San Mateo.

Although the Rams have clinched the title with their spotless 5-0 record, San Mateo with a 4-1 mark will most likely want a shot at a tie with the Rams and will ask for a rescheduling.

Both schools will have to get together in order to decide on the date of the rescheduling but most likely it will be played either today or this weekend at Hillsdale High school.

All rescheduled University games will be played Saturday.

Spikers Finish In Eighth Place At NorCal Meet

By John Arberry

Paced by Gene Plotkin's fourth-place finish, the Ram spiker squad captured eighth place in a large field of 20 teams at the Northern California Junior College three mile championship meet at Visalia, November 15.

Despite a wet and muddy course Plotkin, an ex-Balboa High School spiker, passed runners at a fast rate in the last mile to grab fourth place in the championship meet with a time of 16:38. Plotkin paced all Golden Gate Conference harriers as only three runners passed the finish line before him in the large field of 114 finishers.

Team scores saw San Jose's Jaguars, the defending champion, the winner, with a low total of 53 points. San Mateo followed with 78 for a 1-2 finish in the conference.

They were followed by College of Sequoias with 111, Oakland 126, American River 134, Fresno 145, Sacramento 145, San Francisco 212, Contra Costa 271.

Also performing well for the Rams was freshman Rich Klemmer, ex-Lincoln High harrier, who placed 23rd. Dan Christian, Ozzie Norris and Mike Conroy finished 62nd, 63rd and 65th, respectively, as the Rams' top five placers.

Individual meet champion was Terry Record of Sacramento with a time of 16:28.6. Bob Crispin of Monterey Peninsula College finished second, and Jiminez of College of Sequoias was third.

Following Piotkin in fifth place was Vredenburg of San Jose, Bob DeCelle of Oakland sixth, Jim Huff of San Mateo seventh, with Jim Sullivan, San Jose: Floyd Godwin, Chabot and Ken Noel, San Jose placing ninth, tenth and twelfth, respectively.

Commenting on the season as a whole, coach Lou Vasquez stated, "Piotkin performed extremely well in the Northern California championships, and Ozzie Norris would have placed well also had he not suffered a back injury that hampered him."

Vasquez added, "These two paced us throughout the season, and the freshmen came along well too, especially Rich Klemmer as his performances in the conference and Northern California meets show."

Vasquez also quipped, "We had a pretty good season considering we lost seven of our top nine men from last year's team and that we had a predominantly freshman team this year."

Newman Hoopsters Maul Guardsman In Intra League

In Associated Men Student intramural independent league action last week, the Newman Club bounced back to shatter The Guardsman 59-29, after having been defeated two weeks ago by the Hotel and Restaurant Club, 27-25.

Joe Dalpogetti mounted 22 points for the Newman Club, and Bob Seigan of The Guardsman tanked 14.

The Filipino Club slashed the Hawaiians, 47-27, as Bernie Piper was again high-point man with 18 points.

The undefeated fraternity league club, Alpha Kappa Rho, won its fourth game by trouneing Phi Beta Delta, 46-18.

Alpha Kappa Rho's high scorer, Tom Londo, hit 20 points with Ray Chezik not far behind with 14. Duane Underwood made a good try as he dropped in 10 points for Phi Beta Delta.

Zeta Phi Sigma stung Alpha Sigma Delta, 34-25, as the top scorer title was shared by Larry Laber and Bill Tobin, both making 10 points. Terry Hurly helped with his 8.

Two Independent League teams, the Divine Ones and the Originals, remain undefeated after the Divine Ones smeared the Independents, 82-23. Wharton Brown with 19, Ely Horn with 15 and Bob Hector with 14 points were top scorers for the Divine Ones.

The Originals dropped the Ravens, 53-44, as sharp-shooting Charles Luke hit 20 points and Del Bennett 17. Russ Rege sank 20 points for the Ravens, and Larry Curran followed him with 16.

The Apaches lost to the Mets in a forfeit, leaving the score, 0-2, Mets' favor. The Brothers Five also won by forfeit when the Panthers failed to muster the required number of players.

The Beavers downed the Five, 73-25, and Beaver Chris Smith hit for 31 points.

Presently holding the title of high-point man in the three intramural leagues is Del Bennett of Independent league's Originals, with 94 points.

Tom London of Alpha Kappa Rho representing the Fraternity League totaled 65 points.

The Newman Club's Joe Dalpogetti totaled 60 points, classifying him as the highest scorer of the Club League.

Lights Won't Solve Athletes' Problems

By Fred Wales

RECENTLY a proposal was made at Student Council to start a fund for the addition of lights to the college stadium. The purpose of these lights would be to build attendance at football games and increase spirit at the college.

It is a credit to Student Council that at last student leaders have become aware of the greatest problems facing athletes and sports on campus — attendance and facilities.

However, in an attempt to push the lights issue, council is overlooking other more noteworthy and practical methods to fulfill its purpose.

Although home attendance is sparse, out-of-town attendance at games is virtually nonexistent.

By providing an extra bus for spectators, this problem might be solved readily. Such provision has been made in the past.

Presently, the football bus accommodates 38 players, including managers, coaches and cameramen.

Provision for another bus would make it possible for more players to be brought to off-campus games, and spectators who otherwise couldn't attend the games for lack of transportation, could fill the remaining seats.

A bus could also be chartered for basketball and baseball games as well as track meets.

Students taking the bus could be charged for the ride with the balance provided from the bus fund.

Installation of lights here, however, would prove a problem.

To provide strong enough lighting for football games, four towers would be needed, two on each side of the field. Their height from the field should be approximately 80 feet, and their distance from the edge of the field between 100 and 150 feet.

Erection of the towers on the west side of the field would be relatively easy, but placing them on the east side would mean putting the bases either on the side of the 60-degree slope near the gymnasium or in the road running alongside the gymnasium.

As far as the price of the lights go, their installation and upkeep would amount to a pretty penny.

After trimming the budgets of spring sports and the number of Guardsman copies from 3000 to 2500, council, it would appear, could better utilize the funds elsewhere.

Cuts in the sports budget take away practice games and meets from spring sports which would naturally aid the teams' performances.

Cutting the number of papers issued each week is saving the council a massive $180. Since the paper is the only means by which students are able to learn how their teams are performing, it surely would be considered a builder of interest in campus sports and activities.

Another possible project for funds could be the conversion of the college's present track to an all-weather track in order to allow the team to compete at home at least once during the rainy season.

A bit more expensive, but just as essential, is a pool for the swimming team, and from there, the start of a water polo team, water polo classes, synchronized swimming for coeds.

Gymnastic equipment would also strengthen and broaden the college sports programs.

If council members would still be interested in night games, may they be reminded that Kezar Stadium is well equipped with lights, and if petitioned for, the stadium could be available.

Cagers Open Season At Monterey

Monterey Peninsula College's basketball five are viewed as strong and powerful, and their clash with the Rams, in a non-conference game Saturday, November 30, may indicate how much strength and power the Rams themselves possess.

"Monterey has always been a traditionally strong college in basketball, and has fared well in the Coast Conference," Ram coach Sid Phelan said last week.

The Rams' starting five for the clash with Monterey has not as yet been listed in full; however, Art Adams will be playing in one of the forward spots.

Jerry Chandler will hold the center position, Elmer Youngblood is an almost certain starter at the other forward spot, according to Phelan.

"Chandler has shown remarkable and constant improvement at the center position during practice and should see a great deal of action in the coming season," Phelan commented.

Dennis Sweeney is coming along well, according to Phelan, and has a strong chance of earning a starting assignment against Monterey.

Strong contenders for the open guard spot are Mac Smith and Ken Scalmanini, both are experienced, returning vets.

Others seeking the assignment of first string guard, and who will probably see a fair amount of action in any case, are Rich Henderson, Dennis Walker, Jim Smith, Braden Chapel, Rich McRitchie and Roger Silver.

Following the Monterey game, the Rams face the Stanford Braves on December 2, Stockton College, December 3, San Jose State Frosh, December 7, and Saint Mary Frosh, December 9.

The Rams' first home game will be against Vallejo on December 17.

AS Presidential Candidates Voice Disagreements

By Herm Kligerman

Sharp disagreement over the issue of a proposed student appeals board for next semester was apparent last week in interviews with Bob Roddick and John Theilen, candidates for the spring Associated Student Presidency here.

The appeals board, entered as part of the United Students Party's platform, would give students an opportunity to protest any Student Council action which they felt was unfair or not beneficial to the entire student body.

Roddick, USP's candidate, supports the formation of such a board "since it will provide a check and balance on council decisions." Roddick's present plans call for the appointment of six voting members to the board, each representing a major college group or faction.

The six would also include a member of student government, he explained.

Student Representative Party candidate, Theilen, however, believes that an appeals board would just "be a waste of valuable time." He suggested that council eliminate misunderstandings before they occur by thoroughly discussing each matter before taking action on it.

"We shouldn't have to establish a board to re-evaluate all our decisions," he remarked.

Another issue, meeting with disagreement between the two hopefuls, concerned giving the Associated Men Student, Associated Women Student, Freshman Class and Sophomore Class Presidents a vote in Student Council.

"I favor such a move," Roddick commented, "because the "Big Four" (as the four presidents are referred to) are important student leaders and directly represent the student body." Roddick is the present AMS President.

Theilen, speaking as a former AMS President, stated it would be more feasible if the "Big Four" would work more closely with council members than be accorded individual votes.

"If such an amendment were to be approved, it would eliminate any ties that may exist between class presidents and their respective representatives on council," Theilen added.

Presently, the "Big Four" can only participate in general discussions at council meetings. Voting members on council have final say-so on all business.

Installation of lights in the college stadium "might help" to improve game attendance, according to Roddick, but, "I think we should concentrate on getting genuine college spirit first. How are we going to get attendance at night games if we can't get it during the day?"

He suggested better rallies as a possible answer. "Rallies are our main source of spirit."

Theilen, whose party has gone on record in support of installation of lights, stated that "night games would attract more spectators because many students work in the afternoon." He added that more enthusiasm would be aroused since the college could also host more activities if the stadium were equipped with proper lighting.

Commenting on this semester's AS administration, Roddick accused it of "catering to a few." He also believes that council did not adequately consult parties involved in financial actions before the individual budgets were passed.

"This will not be the case if I am elected," Roddick emphasized. "All parties will be consulted beforehand and asked to be present at the council meeting when their budget is scheduled to be approved."

Theilen was more temperate in his answer, saying, "I believe we can profit from the mistakes of this semester. I don't want to criticize what has happened; it's all in the past now."

Regarding the oft-revised and much discussed AS Constitution, Roddick said, "The By-Laws must be added next semester because the present administration hasn't gotten around to it."

Theilen would organize an "effective" Constitutional Revisions Committee and abide with its conclusions.

Both Roddick and Theilen agreed on at least one matter. Each would appoint cabinet officers after careful thought and discussion with advisers, instructors and students. "New faces are needed," Roddick stated.

Possession of an AS card as the primary basis for a voice in student government was also argued by the two candidates.

"All students should have a voice," Roddick declared. "After all, the AS gets only about one-third of its semester revenue from the sale of AS cards." Most of the other two-thirds comes from the sale of text books at the Ramporium bookstore.

"Students have adequate means of expressing themselves as it is now," Theilen remarked, "since they have the privilege of voting in all AS elections."

Each candidate then proceeded to give a brief summary of his platform.

"Fair play and cooperation among students and elected officers is most important," Roddick said. "If cuts in budgets are absolutely necessary, I'd rather see each request cut a certain percentage than have just a few budgets take the full impact."

Theilen's main goal will be to improve communication here "in order to prevent unsuccessful college-sponsored activities. Needless friction must also be eliminated," Theilen emphasized, "so that we can work together and understand each other's viewpoints."

In a somewhat lighter vein, leading candidates for election were busy here last Monday night preparing campaign placards for placement on almost every available and strategically-located spot on campus.

The results were noticeable to students as they arrived for Tuesday morning classes.

Reactions from the "evening workers" ranged anywhere from "Gee, was it cold up here!" to, "I'm going home to get some sleep."

AS Offices, Propositions Go On Ballot Today, Tomorrow

Voting for the 20 offices of the Associated Student government will be held between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. today and tomorrow, Chris Small, election commissioner, announced last Thursday.

Voting machines will be located in the main entrance to the library, at the Silver Pole in Science Hall, and in the fountain section of the cafeteria, Miss Small said.

The election will be open to all students possessing a valid registration card, and submitted the official list of candidates published below.

In addition to the candidates, students will also be voting on an amendment to the Associated Student Constitution.

Proposition 1, as it will appear on the ballot, provides for a change in the number of units required for a student seeking the office of AS President.

The present stipulation sets 42 as the minimum and 60 as the maximum number of units required for candidacy.

If the proposition passes, the number required will be raised to 45 and 68 respectively.

A special amendment election was originally scheduled on the unit requirement last week. This was cancelled because of "a lack of publicity," Vince Contreras, president of the Associated Students, said.

Contreras pointed out that the combined communication facilities of the college were not used to bring the news of the election to the greatest number of students.

Candidates, who have been eliminated from the running since each party's nominating convention was held, include Larry Casalegno, Student Representative Party candidate for Freshman President, and SRP's Freshman members of council candidates, Terry Cloney and Larry O-Leno.

Cloney was elevated to be the Frosh Presidential hopeful.

Eleven United Students Party candidates have pulled out of the race. They include Associated Men Student Presidential candidate Lou Galliani, Associated Women Student President Joan Twomey, Soph Class President Dennis Wholley and Frosh Class President Gene Riley.

Other "dropouts" are candidates for sophomore seats on council, Robert Steffans, Larry Laber, Jerry Harris, Keith Woolwine and Darlene Richards. Chuck Largaspada and Mike Selsnik were eliminated from running for freshman seats on council.

Running independently on the ballot are Craig Schwartz for AMS President, Bobbi McQuaid and Larry Casalegno for sophomore seats on council, and Phillip Soffer and Bill Tobin for freshman seats on council.

Ex-Coed From Iran Sends Condolences

As an indication of the far-reaching regard for the late President Kennedy's heart-felt plea for international peace, and that he shall not have died in vain, a simple letter of condolence was received recently from a former student here.

Dated November 24, 1963, just two days after President Kennedy's assassination, the letter was addressed to Dean Mary Golding by Pari Gharagazalou, who was graduated from City College in 1957 and now lives in Tehran, Iran.

She wrote extending her sympathy to the college's faculty for "this unexpected tragedy, which has plunged the world into a state of sadness and grief."

The letter concluded: "I am deeply sad that we have lost such a great man who could have planted the seed of freedom and equality all over the world."

Guardsman Wins 32nd All-American

The Guardsman received its 32nd All-American rating last week from the Associated Collegiate Press for the spring semester volume.

It is the third consecutive highest award and was one of 23 top awards to weekly newspapers in the nation, three of them to two-year colleges. In its 44 semesters of membership in ACP, The Guardsman has also received 12 First Class awards.

All-American rating indicates "distinctly superior achievement" and is awarded only to top newspapers. First Class rating is comparable to "excellent," while a Second Class rating is given to newspapers that are "good" to "very good."

Judges are newspapermen and women working from ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota.

John Silva was last semester's editor-in-chief. Present editor-in-chief Michel Janicot was feature editor, present managing editor Boyd Burtnett was staff editor and present staff editor Dick Bullard was news editor. Herm Kligerman was managing editor, and Dave Kleinberg was sports editor.

Silva, commenting on the rating, said, "I am very pleased that we received another All-American award. It is not due to the effort of merely one man as we were fortunate enough to have an excellent and experienced staff."

Faculty adviser is Joan Nourse.

Concert Soloists

LYNN GOODRICH, SHIRLEY DAIGLE AND ANDREA FULTON, shown here at a recent rehearsal, are the three soloists scheduled to appear at the annual Christmas concert given by the music department during College Hour in the theater tomorrow.

A Cappella Choir Presents C-Hour Christmas Concert

Gloria, a contata by Vivaldi, is the featured attraction of the college's annual Christmas concert to be presented by the music department during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

Gloria will be sung by the A Capella Choir, with Lynn Goodrich and Shirley Daigle, sopranos, and Andrea Fulton, alto, as soloists.

Participating groups in the concert in addition to the A Capella Choir, include the Chamber Choir, the Men's Glee Club, all conducted by Galen Marshall, music instructor here, and the Women's Choir, conducted by another of the college's music instructors, Richard Fenner.

Piano accompanist for all groups will be Robert Sheldon, a faculty member at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music.

Other highlights of the program include a song for men's voices, Magnificat, by Charpentier. The accompanists for this selection include Daniel Lebianc and George Thompson, violinists, and Fenner at the cello.

They will also accompany the A Cappella Choir in the contata, Command Thine Angel That He Come.

The Men's Glee Club will sing five folk songs, and the Chamber Choir will sing selections from Lovesong Waltzes, by Brahms, and a Mass by Hassler.

The music department's annual Fall concert was presented last night in the theater, and tomorrow's program is a shortened version.

Last Tuesday the choir sang at Del Webb's Towne House for the California School Administrators' convention.

The following day the choir journeyed to Mercy High School for a performance.

The music department's final semester performance will be at 8 p.m., Tuesday, in the theater.

Ushering Passes Available In S-150

Students interested in ushering at San Francisco Symphony concerts this year, can file for passes in S-150, and since the college sends only six student-ushers to each performance, Dean of Women Mary Golding urged applicants to file requests as soon as possible.

The program for the current season includes the presentation of such classical works as Handel's Messiah, Schumann's Concerto in A Minor, Strauss' Don Quixote and Mendelssohn's Concerto in E Minor.

Proper attire for women ushers is a black dress, street length, although dark blue or dark brown dresses or suits will be acceptable, but with no color in any part of the outfit. Short socks are not to be worn.

For men, dark, non-sport suit, white shirt and necktie are appropriate. Ushers must not, however, wear sweaters, top coats or scarves, Dean Golding said.

"Ushers are selected on a first-come, first-serve basis," Dean Golding emphasized.

The concerts will be under the direction of Josef Krips, in his first season as conductor and musical director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra and will feature internationally known artists.

Campus Parties Air Views In Quest For Student Support

NOW IS THE TIME for all good men and women to come to the aid of their college....

Well, it's that time of the semester again, the time when politics play an important part—in the lives of those concerned, of course—on campus.

Too much has been said and over-emphasized of the apathy of the students here. Apathy is a dirty word; yet, at every nominating convention, selected candidates stand behind that word and pledge to eradicate this feeling of indifference that is prominent here.

The old cliche of "Promises, promises, that's all I hear" is a result of promises made but not kept. This example occurs in ALL politics, national and international as well.

And so, the race for the Spring semester's student government positions is on! The two existing parties on campus, the Students Representative Party and the United Students Party, have held their respective nominating convention, selected their candidates and are... now waiting for the polls to open.

Today and tomorrow, these polls will be welcoming eligible voters, that is—EVERY student currently enrolled here. Looking back on the past number of votes cast in previous elections, one is inclined to expect the number of votes cast to be just about the same as in last semester's elections (977). Predictions are easy to make at City College....

The platform of each party contains eight points, as follows:

SRP	USP
1. The AS President should hold a weekly conference with representatives from The Guardsman and KCSF to insure better communication.	1. Budgets: no budget or action of council will be approved and voted on without the representation and consultation of the parties involved.
2. Continuation of the re-evaluation of the AS Constitution.	2. Appeals Board: an Appeals Board will be established to serve as an effective check and balance of the actions and decisions of council. The board will insure equal representation in City College.
3. Stabilize existing organizations, helping them to become stronger-functioning groups in student government.	3. Vote: a vote and choice should be given to all of the duly elected student presidents in Student Council.
4. Increasing attendance at athletic events by establishing a committee to investigate the cost of installing lights in the stadium.	4. Rallies: the Rally Committee will be reorganized and utilized. There will be more rallies in order to increase participation.
5. Increase personal pride in the college by stimulating spirit with well-planned activities.	5. Orientation and Information: orientation procedures will be utilized to a greater capacity. Information on all pending bills in council will be made directly available to all students.
6. Initiation of a training seminar for students interested in participating in student government activities.	6. Turnover: a turnover is needed in order to give all a chance in the running of the college.
7. Integrate the public relations services into campus activities to insure better publicized events.	7. Campus Organizations: will be built up by giving a more meaningful purpose to the Council of Organizations and the clubs represented therein.
8. Encourage faculty interest in social and athletic events.	8. Publicity: in order to publicize more effectively, we will, in working along with the Publicity Committee, co-ordinate and advertise the social, academic and athletic events of the college.

Who is to win? That is the question. Let no one make YOUR choice; weigh each party's platform and what the party stands for. Analyze and discuss the issues. Seek to solve any probing questions on the nature of student government, what it does to YOU, the students.

Above all, do not depend on hear-say evidence and beware of personal political acquaintances who may influence your vote.

'A Good Artist Always Sells'

FORMER CITY COLLEGE student Win Ng with his award-winning creation entitled The Tree.

Former Student Follows Satisfying Career In Art

By Bea Takeuchi

Win Ng, a former student of E. Roy Walker, ceramics instructor here, enjoys a successful art career in San Francisco. The 27-year old ceramist-sculptor has a studio-workshop in a neat 100 by 120 foot garage located at 1681 Folsom street.

From 1953 to 1954, Ng attended this college as an art major. "I concentrated on ceramics. Mr. Walker is one of the most dedicated instructors I know," said Ng.

"If it weren't for Mr. Walker, I wouldn't have experienced what the artists call a 'breakthrough,'—he gives his students so much of himself."

Ng firmly believes that students should take advantage of the art courses, especially if they plan to enter an art institute. "I doubt if I could have made it at San Francisco Art Institute without the previous training I had here," he emphasized.

Today a small sign, Taylor and Ng, hangs over the door of the Folsom street studio. Ng is in partnership with Spaulding Taylor, another well-known ceramist. The business affiliation is the result of a burning kiln.

At his former "shack" workshop in Bernal Heights, Ng had fired some ceramics in his newly-repaired Alpine kiln. He used the kiln without a hood, and the ceiling of the shack caught fire and destroyed Taylor's work.

"I offered him a partnership to replace his work. He accepted it because he was my student at the time," said Ng.

National art critics recognize Ng as a master of enamelware, pottery and sculpture. One of his better-known awards is a purchase prize at the San Francisco Museum of Art.

In 1959, Ng won an award there for a sculptured mass of twisted steel, 11 feet tall, which he named The Tree. He is now working on a six and one-half foot replica of this during his spare time for the lobby of a new building in Ukiah, California.

Ng was chosen as one of two artists to represent the United States in an art exhibition in Munich, Germany, this year.

After leaving this college, Ng volunteered for active duty in the U.S. Army. He was sent to France, and after his discharge, returned to attend the San Francisco Art Institute under the GI Bill.

Mills College offered Ng a $2400 scholarship for graduate work soon after his graduation. "I went there, and I flunked in ceramics several times," said Ng.

"It's unbelievable, but true. My other grades were fine, but Mills flunked me in ceramics, and each time they renewed the scholarship, because they said I had potential," Ng commented.

Ng finally felt that he would benefit more if he left school, because he could not "conform to what they wanted of my art."

"I don't believe in accepting scholarships, although there are those who benefit from it," Ng stated. "Instructors have lots to offer, but it's up to the students to absorb what they have to give," he said.

Inside of Ng's shop is an eye-catching display of artistic uniqueness. Odd pieces of sculpture and pottery are for sale, and decorators and architects visit the shop regularly and place orders.

When asked whether the competition for sales in ceramics in San Francisco presents a problem, Ng replied confidently, "A good artist can always sell."

Christmas Customs Around The World

Pinatas, Wooden Shoes Add Up To Santa

All Americans are well acquainted with the Christmas customs of this nation and find them familiar and ordinary.

The stockings hung up on the centralized heating units is a familiar sight, as are the Christmas turkey, tree and presents.

But, because the United States is still a youthful nation as nations go, very few, if any, of the customs are actually American. They have been borrowed from the many races of people who immigrated here in the 187 years of existence.

The stockings hung up on the chimney with care were once the wooden shoes of Holland which were placed carefully outside the doors on Christmas Eve to be filled with presents during the night.

The Christmas turkey was once the Christmas goose, but the early colonists had a difficult time securing geese with their trusty matchlock rifles. The American turkey was plentiful however, and the American tradition of ingenuity was already developing.

The Christmas tree was borrowed from Germany, as were most of the other customs. A slight examination of the names of Santa Claus' reindeer will also give a person a slight hint as to their nationality.

The Japanese, who are mostly non-Christian, have adopted most of the adopted American customs concerning gift giving, Santa Claus and the Christmas tree.

But there are still a few Christmas customs that we do not indulge in. The British Commonwealth has the day after Christmas as a legal holiday. This is hoxing day. On this day, all of the boxes which once contained presents are given back to the postman.

Another Christmas custom is the Mexican piñata—clay containers hung high from the ceiling and containing presents. They are broken with long poles by blindfolded children.

But, no matter where the place, Christmas is still celebrated and the real meaning has not been lost, though seemingly misplaced at times. It is still a time of joy, of giving and of love.

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

LOOKING at the thermometer we see that the mercury has dropped eight degrees since last month.

This can only mean that winter is upon us. Unlike other parts of the country, San Francisco does not announce winter with gales and blizzards and such. Here the mercury sneakily drops from 54 degrees to 46 degrees and everybody runs for the closet and airs out topcoats and woolen scarves.

In other days, one could foretell the coming of winter by the Christmas decorations in the street. Alas, this has become a lost art.

Now the last bone of the Thanksgiving turkey has barely hit the platter before someone is hawking Christmas trees in the corner lot.

Not that there is anything wrong with an early preparation for Christmas, quite the contrary. We feel that an early recognition of the joyous holiday is a very beneficial thing.

It gives everybody a chance to prepare himself and reflect on the things which are the real meaning of the great holiday. Things like charge accounts, lay-away plans and easy-payment loans.

The beautiful thing about Christmas is that everyone drifts into the friendly holiday spirit. Everyone wits something to sell, that is.

The season also brings to light all other strange specimen, the department store Santa Claus. From every corner we are besieged by round results with uncared for Van Dykes, fairly saturated with ho-ho-hos.

As soon as the first bit of tinsel hits the lamp posts, a regular little army of Kris Kringles springs out of the wood work.

These fellows go around ringing bells, conning tykes into being good and falling into the ocean.

This may be a great boon to old season unemployment, but it raises havoc with the Moms of the country.

In the old days, Mom could tell junior to be good or Santa wouldn't bring him anything.

Now all the kid has to do is sit down another three blocks and find Santa he is more compatible with.

With the rapid progress we are making, we may soon have Santas of assorted shapes, sizes and costumes. In short, a Santa for every budget.

Another aspect of our Atomic Age Christmases is the office party. The custom enables the boss to show his troops what a fine fellow he really is. He may be a tyrant the rest of the year, but on this day he's out to prove that he is really a jolly good sport.

The office party also gives the employees a chance to get into the holiday spirit, or, as W. C. Fields used to say, spiritus fermenti.

Of course, on the first day back on the job after Christmas, the boss is back at his desk, scowling as always and he help creeps around silently looking like a bunch of lost cocker spaniels.

Although we agree that the season is a thoroughly enjoyable one, what with the carols, tinsel, bells on the street corners and a happy round of parties, we feel that perhaps it is a bit overdone.

When the big day finally arrives, there is a considerable letdown. Something akin to waking up in the morning hungry and finding dog food in your breakfast cereal.

In closing let us remind you that if you are out enjoying the season with parties and such, drive carefully. We need all the readers we can get. Merry Christmas.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

WITH the approach of Christmas vacation, the students who hang around here (once in a while) are making the usual cross-my-heart-and-hope-to-die pledges about doing nothing but studying over the holidays.

This will be the perfect chance to catch up on that required reading you have been letting slide and now you can hack out that term paper that has been staring you in the face, right? No more last minute midnight typing for you, right? No siree, baby!

Just whom do you think you're kidding?

• • •

ONCE AGAIN the icy fingers of Winter have reached across from the North and enveloped San Francisco. There is no longer any doubt what the weather will be like: It will either be cold, or raining, or both.

Persons inhabiting the hallowed halls of City College are probably more aware of this than most others residing in the city. Stuck high on an overgrown mound of dirt, there is nothing to block the wind as it sweeps across the campus and continues toward Mt. Davidson.

We are all sort of in a suspended state at the present time. Thanksgiving has passed, and Christmas approaches, but we have not yet been instilled with the holiday spirit, despite combined commercial attempts along this line.

Perhaps on Friday afternoon, when we have attended our last class for a couple of weeks, we will begin to feel the approach of the coming festivities and we will have spirit. (Sorry "Boss," not school spirit!)

But, because of the publication schedule of our dear college newspaper, we have to issue a traditional statement now. You don't have to do back flips upon hearing it, you don't even have to listen. We hope somebody will, however.

Merry Christmas!

• • •

And now that you have been wished a Merry Christmas, a very unpleasant task awaits us in the form of an announcement that, we are afraid, will take away some of the cheer from the holiday festivities.

Word has just been received that Santa Claus is a secret agent for a foreign power.

Oh, we know it's unbelievable, but the facts have all been checked and will be released at a later date by the C. I. A. (Christmas Ideal Agitators).

We received word of this earth-shaking discovery through our informant within the ranks of this super-secret organization. His code name is Scrooge.

We gave some considerable thought about not releasing this news until after the holiday, but we feel it is our duty to print it, no matter what.

Santa Claus has built up a highly efficient espionage organization using the unsuspecting children of the United States. It is common knowledge that nobody censors the mail of these children who write him.

Because of the strategic location of his North Pole home, he is able to pass on the information he gets from the letters with no trouble at all. A sample of this information is "Please send me a model of the LSD-69 rocket, just like my Daddy works on at the plant."

Has it ever occurred to you why that old codger always wears a red suit?

We are certain the United States will not hold the children responsible for this gigantic breach of security, but we feel a warning must be issued to all students of City College.

Be sure to let your parents read your letters to Comrade Nick before mailing. If you don't, you may do your country a great injustice. You may also not get what you ask for.

Sport Films Tomorrow

Two films will be featured during College Hour tomorrow in S-136 audio-visual aids instructor Madison Devlin announced today.

Sportsman's Paradise, one of the films, shows some of Florida's best fishing and hunting grounds and famous baseball player Ted Williams narrates.

Second on the bill of films is Warrior Highlights. This film is devoted to the highlights of the San Francisco Warrior basketball games of 1962. The featured player of the film is Wilt (the Stilt) Chamberlain, the highest scorer of the entire professional National Basketball Association.

Lesser Prize Recipients

CHARLES MILLER AND DANIEL FEY, winners of the Lucille Lesser scholarships, which are awarded to two men students annually. The award is named in the memory of the benefactor's wife and is given to deserving graduates of the city's public schools.

Coveted Four-Year Awards Go To Math, Econ Majors

Charles M. Miller and Daniel W. Fey were awarded the coveted Lucille Lesser scholarship last week, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced today.

Selection of the two men was based on financial need, their first midterm grades, letters of recommendation, interviews and statements expressing reasons for continuing their education.

Miller, who won a $170 Scottish Rite scholarship in Spring, 1963, received a $1375 Lucille Lesser scholarship, the unspent sum of an award presented to a student who was later disqualified. A graduate of George Washington High School, Miller is a mathematics major here.

Fey, also a graduate of George Washington High School, received a $1500 Lucille Lesser scholarship; the sum is the usual one awarded. Fey is an economics major.

To qualify for the award one must be a United States citizen, a male high school graduate with at least a B average and have attended San Francisco schools for four years.

The award is stretched out over a four-year period. Fey and Miller will receive $125 each semester while at City College and $250 per semester while continuing their education at a four-year college.

To retain their scholarships the men must complete 30 units of university parallel courses each year, maintain at least a C average, transfer to a four-year college later and work there for a bachelor's degree in their chosen fields of study.

Presented annually to two male students here, the award was first presented in 1962. The donor named the scholarships for his wife and presented $33,000 to the college, to be awarded over an 11-year period.

Karen Lum Wins $50 Chinese-Student Award

Karen Lum, a Galileo High School graduate, was awarded a $50 Chinese Student Club scholarship last week.

Majoring in general education with a 3.3 average, Miss Lum plans to later attend San Francisco State College.

Any students interested in applying for a second $50 Chinese Club scholarship for students here may obtain the necessary forms from Dean Mary Golding in S-150. Deadline for applications is December 30.

ISC Presents Is Shifted To Jan. 3 In Smith Hall

Inter-Sorority Council will hold its semiannual Presents from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday, January 3, in Smith Hall, ISC President Cathy Bossert announced recently.

Presents, originally scheduled for November 22, was cancelled because of the death of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy and will not be held until January because of the month-long period of mourning.

The event is held each semester to introduce the new sorority pledges. The young women, representing two sororities, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, will be introduced and presented during the intermission by their sorority presidents and will then be presented with a scroll.

The names of the young women are not available at this time.

Dress for the occasion will be formal, and music will be provided by Sal Vance and his orchestra.

Admittance to the affair is "by invitation only." Family members and friends of the sorority women will attend.

President of Phi Beta Rho is Miss Bossert, and sponsor is Norma Carlisle. Theta Tau's president is Joan Twomey, and sponsor is Norine Smith.

Alice Harth Art Show On Display

Alice Harth, San Francisco graphic arts designer, will have a display of her works featured in the show case by the Silver Pole in Smith Hall until Christmas, William Davis, advertising art instructor here, announced today.

Miss Harth is director for Windfield Design Associates, an exclusive wallpaper company. She was presented with the Hisashi Tami award for outstanding work last year by the San Francisco Illustrators Society at their annual show.

The noted designer has traveled throughout the world to gain inspiration and ideas for her many projects.

Featured in the display will be a Japanese sketch book which she completed during a trip to Japan for Japanese Air Lines.

A Spice Islands cookbook, Christmas cards, wallpaper and other projects will also be on display, Davis said.

Chet Patterson, partner in the Patterson and Hall Art Service Company, will be guest speaker Friday for the art survey course, art 50, Davis also announced.

Patterson will discuss employment opportunities in this field in this area.

Protest, Two Resignations, Three Student Appointments Keep Council Members Busy

By Lowell Mengel

At recent Student Council meetings, three new members were elected to vacant seats, one council member and one cabinet member resigned, and another member of council protested the Associated Student elections, scheduled today and tomorrow.

The new council members, all freshmen, include Loralee Lando, Larry Casalegno and Terry Cloney. The three were elected by secret ballot. One vacancy still remains on council from the Freshman Class.

Sophomore member of council Art Gershman resigned because of personal reasons.

Cecil Reichert also announced to council that Buzz Kribs, Council of Organizations president, had dropped out of college and resigned his position and that she would continue as COO chairman for the remainder of the semester.

The protest to council came when Sophomore member Alan Williams moved to delay the elections from December to January since he claimed the present date was a violation of Article VII, Section 2 of the Associated Student Constitution.

There was no second to Williams' motion, so it died. Williams then asked that he go on record as being against the election date. Associated Student President Vince Contreras then told the secretary to record Williams' opinion.

In other business, the council studied a motion to grant City College student Mike Kelly $250 to attend a national handball championship at the University of Texas. It was explained that last year Kelly had paid his own way, represented the college, and had placed third.

Council had many unanswered questions, and the motion was tabled until a later meeting.

Student Council did allocate $350 for the conference champion soccer team to go to the state championship meet in Los Angeles. This was in addition to $600 the team had left from its regular season budget.

Other budget allocations by council included $98 to the Men's Glee, $629 to the A Cappella Choir, and $70 to the Dean of Women.

Council member Mary Ann Ducommun moved to delete two members elected-at-large from both the freshman and sophomore representatives on council. In their place, she wanted to give votes to the Associated Men and Women Student Presidents, and to the Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents. The motion failed by a 0-10-3 vote.

Under announcements council mentioned that its semi-annual dinner for Student Council members would be held Thursday, January 2, in Smith Hall. Inter-Fraternity Council President Joel Cohen announced the IFC would have a rally and dance before and after the January 17 basketball game here.

Foreign Students Flock Here From The World Over

By Patricia Dutter

Enrollment statistics, recently released by Gertrude Somerville, assistant registrar, show indication of a student body well sprinkled with an international flavor.

A total of 437 foreign students who have graduated from foreign high schools, are enrolled at the college this semester. Hong Kong has the largest representation here with 40 students, closely followed by the Philippine Islands with 38 students. Germany rounds out the top countries with a total of 36 students on campus.

The San Francisco high schools have a day-time distribution showing that there are 818 students who have been graduated from Lincoln High School, 768 from Washington High School and 576 graduates from Galileo High School. These schools are the top three here representation-wise.

Private schools in the city are represented by 1054 students.

There are 247 day and extended-day students whose legal residences are within one of the 29 California counties having no two-year college district, while 518 other students here represent five counties from other two-year college districts.

A combined day and evening enrollment total of 1,274 students is from states outside of California.

Currently, 49 states are represented at the college. Texas, Hawaii and Louisiana lead the other states with students here, while the state of Delaware has not been represented here for many years.

The day student enrollment figure of 7268 shows there are 4645 men on campus and 2623 women here, thereby indicating that 64 per cent of the day students are men.

Soccermen Clinch Championship With 8-2 San Mateo Victory

By Peter Huebner

Game time elapsed, and the referee blew the whistle. The score was 8-2. The Rams are champions, the first undefeated team in the new Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference.

Second place San Mateo, in its bid to share championship glory with the Rams, experienced the severe slashing November 30 beforé a record crowd of student onlookers at Balboa Stadium.

Outside left Larry Katzeff scored five goals, the most ever scored in a single contest by any one player of the conference this season.

The Rams' undisputed superiority in the league was doubted by no one after this final show of expert ball playing.

All six league games had been won with decisive margins, as were the four practice games. A straight 10-0, and a 60-19 goal spree, stand as the season record set by the Ram soccermen.

Before the important last game, Ram coach Roy Diederichsen urged his players to go "all out and not underestimate the San Mateo team."

It did not look like an easy win in the first two quarters which saw both teams playing a hard and determined game and San Mateo not giving in.

However, Katzeff, having his greatest day of the season, connected from a short distance after a pass from inside right Alex Volikovsky, to bring the Rams ahead. A few minutes later Volikovsky himself put the ball between the posts, before San Mateo converted a penalty kick to keep up the pace.

In the third quarter, left halfback Hector Olaya took a hard shot at the goal. The ball hit a defense man and sprang into the net. Once again San Mateo was awarded a penalty kick, this one disputed, but the referee's decision is always final; the penalty kick scored and it looked as though San Mateo were staging a comeback.

The opposite happened. The Rams started pressing and outplayed San Mateo completely. It was Katzeff who led the Rams in a tremendous effort to capitalize on the locals' superiority, and it was he who scored four successive goals in the third and fourth quarters.

Center forward Waldom Hom added the final touch to San Mateo's destruction with the last and eighth goal.

After the game, Diederichsen said "My men have played the best game of the season and are worthy to be champs. Goalie Ruben Hernander, center fullback Andy Nabong, right halfback Tony Losada, Olaya, and of conrse Katzeff, were clearly the outstanding players of the day. But the team as a whole played a well coordinated game and it was that which gave us the victory."

Top scorer of the season is Katzeff with ten goals, followed by outside right Carlos Cortez with nine goals. Olaya and Hom with six goals each and Volikovsky with five goals.

The final league standings: San Francisco, 6-0; San Mateo, 4-2; Menlo College, 2-4, and Diablo Valley College, 0-6.

Five Soccermen Selected On All-Conference Team

Almost half of the Ram soccer team was picked for All Conference selection last week. Five players made the first string and two players were named to the second team.

Right halfback Hector Olaya, named the Most Valuable Player of the season at the recent Block SF dinner, and a candidate for All American selection heads the list of the five All-Conference players.

Goalie Ruben Hernandez was named All Conference goalie. Left halfback Tony Losada, center forward Waldon Hom, and inside right Peter Huebner made up the rest of the local first string choices.

Second string All-Conference awards were made to outside left Larry Katzeff and right fullback Mike Beltran.

Newman In Playoff With H&R Tonight

Newman Club triumphed over the Filipino Club by a highly-disputed score of 34-21 last week in a riotous finale to one of the club divisions' competition in the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural tournament.

Tonight at 9 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, the Newmans will battle the Hotel and Restaurant club in the club division playoff.

In the other club league action of the night, The Guardsman fell to the Lutherans, 38-25, with Pete Franklin hitting 9 for the losers.

The only move in the fraternity division showed Zeta Phi Sigma over Phi Beta Delta, 24-16.

The high point of the independent division's night play was the still undefeated Originals' 90-52 massacre of the Independents.

In other games, the Mets squeezed by the Panthers, 29-27, Joe DeJean dumping in 9 Panther points, and Ron Crader putting up 10 for the Mets.

The Beavers bowed to the Ravens, 41-38, with Bruce Mattox hitting 18 for the losers.

The Divine Ones trounced the Brothers Five, 59-22. Warton Brown led the winners' attack with 18. The Apaches forfeited to the Five.

Winner of the tournament will be determined by an inter-division playoff on Sportnight, January 8.

In middle row are Al Garcia, Alex Bondarenok, Andy Nabong, Julio Freyre, Carlos Cortez, Calixito Cuevas and Alex Valikovsky.

The team completed its first season in the Northern California Junior College Soccer conference Saturday and emerged with the title.

Hoopsters Win First Three, Travel To Modesto Tourney

Defending the Golden Gate Conference championship, and a highly regarded third-place state-wide rating last season, the City College Rams basketball team began the new season with three impressive victories in their first outings.

The local basketballers will attend the annual tournament in Modesto from December 19 to 21.

The Rams opened their campaign with a 79-67 win over Monterey.

Next the Stanford Braves were stunned when the Rams, leading only 29-28 at half time, stormed back to outscore Stanford, 36-23, in the second half and capture a 65-51 victory.

Taking to the road for the third consecutive time, the Rams dumped San Joaquin delta's College of Stockton by a one-sided score, 72-49.

The Rams this season are led by Art Adams, Ken Scalmanini and Jerry Chandler. Chandler has seored in double figures in every game and holds down the center position.

Chandler played high school basketball in Indiana and is a welcome addition to the local five. Coach Sid Phelan stated recently that he considers Chandler one of the best centers he has ever coached.

Another team leader in the top five is Scalmanini, a veteran from George Washington High School in San Francisco. Scalmanini has played on the first unit in all contests thus far this season. He is an alert guard who, against Stanford, tied for second place scoring honors with Adams when both men hit for 15 points.

Rounding out Phelan's top five are Maek Smith and Elmor Youngblood.

Coach Phelan stated last week that he considers many of the men possible first string contenders. "In the Monterey game, I substituted quite freely and lost very little team momentum," he said.

Rich Henderson and Henry King impressed Phelan in recent performances. "Henderson was impressive against Monterey, and King has a good chance of breaking into the starting five," Phelan commented.

Henderson played his high school basketball for the powerful Irish of Sacred Heart High School.

King played for Polytechnic High and was chosen as a member of the All-City team last season. Although he played center for the Parrots, his talents are being used at the forward position for the Rams.

An ex-Lowell basketballer, Dennis Sweeney, is improving, aecording to Phelan, and the forward may see more action as the season progresses. "Sweeney, like Henry King, has a good chance to gaining a first unit forward position," Phelan said.

Against San Jose, the Rams lost Polytechnic eager who may see a good deal of action this season at guard.

Jim Smith, who has recently served with the Air Force, as has Youngblood, is a reserve forward whom Phelan believes will improve with the season and may see more action with experience.

Averey Carter, a Ram eager from out of the Bay Area, is one of Phelan's reserve men.

Charlie Luke, manning a forward position, plays substitute behind first stringers Adams and Youngblood, and the Ram coach emphasized, "the entire team shows good hustle."

Ed Parker, a man who once played for Galileo, also adds depth to the Ram capers as does another ex-Galileo Lion, Sam Smith.

Rich McRitchie, who played for the Wildcats of St. Ignatius High of San Francisco, will vie for the guard position.

Booters Blank Victor Valley For Perfect Season

VICTORVILLE (Saturday, December 7) — With Larry Katzeff scoring two goals in the first half and goalie Ruben Hernandez stopping Victor Valley College cold, the Ram booters shut out the Southern California champions 4-0 and captured the first State Junior College Soccer Championship.

The win was a team effort with all members playing hard to blank the less experienced Valley team.

Playing two 45-minute halves, the game remained scoreless until 15 minutes prior to halftime.

Outside left Katzeff broke the scoring ice with a 5 yard boot after dribbling past two stunned defenders.

Later Waldon Hom passed to center forward Caesar Pina who drew the Valley defenders in to cover him, then pivoted 180 degrees and passed to Katzeff who, virtually unguarded, completed the scoring play.

Leading 2-0 starting the second half, the Rams began to completely dominate the ball game.

Left half Hector Olaya lengthened the lead as he blasted a penalty kick through the corner of the goal.

A few minutes later, inside right Mario Sequenza caught the ball and sent a high fly boot to the edge of the goal but the elusive sphere escaped through the goalie's arms into the net.

Commenting on the championship and his team's 11-0 record Coach Roy Diederichsen stated, "We have good reason to be proud of our success today and throughout the season."

Diederichsen was instrumental in the arrangement of this the first North-South Soceer contest for the State title and the development of the NCJCSC.

Mermen Meet In C-Hour

All students interested in swimming next season are urged to attend an informal meeting during College Hour tomorrow in A-208.

Members of the swim team will preside over the meeting and relate their adventures of last season to the students interested in trying out for the 1964 team.

Coach Roy Burkhead will also talk at the meeting about his past teams and what he expects of next year's swimmers.

Damaged By Injuries, Football Team Finishes In Fourth Place

By Fred Wales

At the conclusion of the Fall, 1962 football season, grid mentor Art (Dutch) Elston commented that he hoped the ball would bounce in the Rams' favor this year.

In the beginning of the season it looked as though it might.

Although the Rams had only six returning veterans, the freshmen possessed both spirit and talent.

In their conference opener, the Rams stunned Chabot, 12-9, and the next week rocked nationally ranked Oakland, 12-0.

At this point, the Rams developed pure talent.

Veteran Charlie Stewart had kickoff returns of 103 and 93 yards. Pat Lewis and Joe Sobeck developed into league rushing threats.

Defensively, Stewart, Rudy Lapera, Ben Brown and Oliver Mitchel had been welded into an impenetrable pass defense, and the defensive line had not allowed a score.

And then the injuries piled up. Five of the starting seven linemen were out, along with veteran signal caller Craig Schwartz and halfback Craig Rodeiek.

Eventual league champion Contra Costa took advantage of the injuries to nail the home team, 23-0.

Bouncing back, the Rams stopped San Mateo, 12-8, and returned the traditional Tom-Tom trophy to San Francisco.

Against San Jose, the Rams lost their four-leaf clover as the Jaguars were completely out-played but won, 8-6, on two field goals and an intentional safety.

By the time of the Diablo Valley contest, 29 of the original Rams were gone, including Lewis, Sobeek and all but two tackles.

The fired-up Vikings still had a tough time stopping the Rams, 24-6.

This was the last contest the local gridders were destined to play, as the assassination of President Kennedy cancelled the Foothill game that Friday.

All in all, it was a suecessful season for the Rams, since they wound up in fourth place with an even 3-3 conference record despite being minus 31 players and all but two of the original first-stringers.

Coach Elston summarized the season, saying that "he could not have had a more spirited group, or one which possessed such personal pride in their performance.

"It, was a pleasure to coach these players because of their talent and willingness to work. It's just too bad we ran out of them."

Final Conference statistics:

Repeat of 'Madwoman' Tempts Fate

The last time Jean Giraudoux's The Madwoman of Chaillot was presented here, "the earth shook, the sky burned." At about noon on March 22, 1957, four to five tremors shook the earth and classes were immediately cancelled. So was the play which was scheduled to be presented that same evening. Robert Lasley, executive director of the drama department, hopes this time that "no catastrophic events will occur during this run." (For present production details, see page 3.)

Roddick Wins AS Election By 40 Votes

Opposition Party Sweeps Other Top Five AS Offices

A margin of 40 votes made the difference between victory and defeat, December 11 and 12, when Bob Roddick, of the United Students Party, captured the spring Associated Student Presidency from John Theilen of the Students Representative Party.

Ironically, however, SRP made a "sweep" of the top five offices below AS President. Although only one of these — the Vice Presidency — was contested. The party also won 10 of the 14 Student Council seats.

Roger Kaufman, who ran unopposed, became Associated Men Student President for the spring with 578 votes.

Lynn Goodrich, tallying 423 votes, won the office of AS Vice President from Cecil Reichert, who polled only 372 votes.

With a total of 889 votes cast, only 406 were recorded for the approval of the proposed constitutional amendment. The bill failed even though 229 votes were cast in favor of it and 177 against it. The proposal needed a two-thirds majority.

It would have changed the unit requirements for a candidate to run for AS President from 45 and 60, to 42 and 68.

Also running unopposed was Wardene Oliver who was automatically elevated to the Associated Women Student Presidency.

Gary Ettin and Terry Cloney ran unopposed, and were elected Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents, respectively.

The seven sophomore seats on council were filled by SRP representatives Jim Vance (458 votes), Joel Miller (447), Sandy Castelli (422), Carol Wong (414), Fran Richardson (394), Nancy Weigand (388) and USP candidate Beryl Knoller with 390 votes.

Four other candidates, Bobbi McQuaid (350), Mary Ann Ducommun (341), Ray Chezik (322) and Larry Casalegno (237), lacked a sufficient number of votes to place within the 'top seven' and win council positions.

Ten candidates vied for the seven freshman seats on council, and results placed Loralee Liando (463 votes), Sue Stanghellini (458), Barbara Kontis (442), Eileen Marx (428), Mary Jane Super (436), Mary Maurer (433) and Carol Hanover (408) as freshman members of council next semester.

Charlotte Wong (370), Philip Soffer (327) and William Tobin (327) failed in their bid to become freshman members of council.

Results were tabulated, immediately after the closing of the polls at 2 p.m. December 12, by AS President Vince Contreras, Election Commissioner Chris Small and Sherm Elworthy, student activities adviser.

Students were not required to have an AS card to vote in this election, and of approximately 8000 eligible voters, only 889, or a little more than 10 per cent, cast ballots.

New AS President Reveals Plans For Spring Semester

By Herm Kilgerman

Formation of a student appeals board and reorganization of the Rally Committee head Associated Student President-elect Bob Roddick's list of "things to do" in the spring.

"I cannot guarantee the formation of the appeals board at this stage in the game, but I will support it to the utmost," Roddick declared in an interview with the Guardsman last Thursday.

He pointed out that the proposal first needs approval by Student Council and then must go before the general student body in a vote to secure final passage. He hopes to start the process "early in the semester."

Rallies Source of Spirit

Regarding the Rally Committee, Roddick emphasized the need for effective and entertaining rallies to stimulate college spirit and pride among students here. "Rallies are our main source of spirit," he stated.

Plans call for the appointment of a six-member committee with each person having a specific responsibility.

Roddick has already filled seven cabinet positions for next semester. For AS Finance Chairman he chose George Quick, a political science major here, and for Election Commissioner Roddick picked Paul Coke, a criminology major.

Additional appointments include Cecil Reichert to corresponding secretary, Lambert Din to state information chairman, Al Rose to student handbook chairman, Tom Hepler to high-school public relations chairman and Chuck Largaspada to parliamentarian.

Roddick intends to fill the remaining cabinet posts after "consultation with advisers, instructors and students."

Roddick guaranteed that each budget submitted by a campus organization would be investigated by at least one qualified person "but I will try to study each request personally before presenting it to council for approval."

SRP Flanks President

Supported by the United Students Party in last month's election, Roddick will find himself flanked by representatives of the Students Representative Party next semester. The five elected posts below AS President were filled by SRP candidates.

However, only one of these offices, that of AS Vice President, was contested. Lynn Goodrich, SRP candidate, defeated USP's Cecil Reichert for that position.

"I don't think party lines will have any significance once the semester gets under way," Roddick said. "They are usually prevalent only at election-time."

Asked if he favored the two-party system on campus, Roddick remarked that he didn't and never had. "It might be all right if there were strietly just two parties nominating candidates; but once independents get on the ballot, complications arise."

On the question of whether the AS President and Vice President should run together on the same ticket, Roddick stated that he favored the way it is now "because a running mate can hurt the chances of the other person seeking election."

Election 'Don'ts' Listed

Based on his observations during the election campaigning of last month, Roddick announced that he would instruct his Election Commissioner to prepare and distribute an election booklet citing the items candidates cannot do in their drives to get votes.

"This should mean more than listing things candidates can do. The booklet will be about three pages long," he added.

Capping Ceremony Tomorrow For 18 Dental Assistants

Capping ceremonies for 18 women dental assistant students will be held at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the campus theater. This announcement was made today by Ruth P. Inskipp, instructor-coordinator of the dental assisting program, who will introduce the principal speaker.

The capping ceremonies are held semiannually for students who have completed the third semester of their dental studies.

The students are sponsored for the ceremony by senior students in their fourth semester.

"Our speaker for the event is to be Dr. Rodney Johnson, who is president of the San Francisco Dental Society," said Mrs. Inskipp, "and Virginia Meiger, 11th District trustee of the American Dental Assistants' Association, will be present for the event."

The caps will be presented during the candlelight ceremony by Betty Park, a 1960 graduate.

Miss Park will be assisted in the capping by Celeste Shoenstein, who was graduated in 1963. After the capping, Miss Shoenstein will lead the students in the dental assistant's pledge.

One of the highlights of the evening will be Lynn Goodrich's singing of the Star Spangled Banner and You'll Never Walk Alone, accompanied by William Richardson, counselor and Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser.

Students who will receive their caps are Carol Alger, Ines Barrios, Barbara Black, Leona Disney, Diana Dunn, Maureen Fragua, Joanne Garcia, Beryl Knoller, Linda Kramer, Jean Lagrave, Percetta Miner, Cynthia Moy, Grace Ng, Bonnie Pates, Marsha Pearson, Mary Shea, Pat Smyk and Barbara Theodoridis.

KCSF Student Talent Show To Open In Theater Tomorrow

By Bob Lutz

Talent Showcase '64, featuring a balanced program of music, song and dance, will present an extensive array of talent as the performance brings the first student talent show in nearly a decade to the college, tomorrow during College Hour, in the theater.

The program, also a City College closed circuit television production presented in cooperation with the campus KCSF Broadcasters, is under the over-all direction of faculty adviser Henry Leff, of the television and radio department here.

From Bach to Brubeck, from folk to modern daneing, with a bit of comedy ineluded for a touch of color, describes the show to be produced and directed by its originator, Robert Murphy, a student here.

"It is high time such a program be conceived and presented to the students at the college, for many of the colleges throughout the country have some type of student variety show during the academic year," Murphy said.

"The talent show was already in the stage of development last semester, and it is hoped that it becomes a regular feature here," he added.

The display of talent will be presented exclusively by students attending both day and evening classes at the college.

The performance will include special musical numbers by pianist Jay Williamson and singer Robert Johnston, each of whom has appeared recently in recitals on campus.

Petite Min Ja Lee will perform in two Korean folk dance numbers from her native homeland.

Larry (O'Leno), Jeanne (Chieffo), and Ken (Bachtold), three talented thespians from The Footlighters, the college drama group, will present a bit of slapstick comedy when they execute a scene from a Mack Sennett silent movie.

Lynn Goodrieh will exhibit her talents as a singer during the program.

Sensitive classical guitarist, John Reible, who presented a recital on campus previously during the semester, will perform with the guitar by playing a selection of Spanish music.

Rounding out the show will be Dennis Kalfas on the piano, and his trio, who will present a jazz selection. Kalfas has played in many clubs throughout the Bay Area and is widely regarded as an accomplished musician.

Two closed circuit television sets will be located in the choral room adjacent to the theater in order to provide an anticipated overflow crowd with an opportunity to observe the performance.

Following the 'live' production of the show, the east and erew, as well as all interested students and faculty members unable to attend the original performance, will be permitted to attend the video-taped showing of the program, in the choral room.

Admission is free to the talent show.

The KCSF broadeasters, who have headquarters in the arts building, go on the air with campus news at 10:10 a.m. each Monday, Wednesday and Friday and again at 8:10 a.m. each Tuesday and Thursday.

Selected musical recordings from the studio are piped into Smith Hall between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. throughout the week.

Resale Of Used Books Starts January 15

Students intending to sell their hooks at the Ramporium, may do so from January 15 to January 31, Dick Main, manager of the Associated Student bookstore, announced this week.

No records are required for the resale of books at the end of the semester, Main said.

"We aeeept all current books, in other words, books that are presently being used and that will be used the following semester," Main explained.

Students possessing books of newer edition have an opportunity to dispose of them also during these two weeks.

Top Films Set For New Series

A new film series "whieh will interest and be of value to college students" began last Thursday and will continue with a showing of the Freneh film, Carnival in Flanders, at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the theater, Walter Krumm, English instructor here, announced recently.

The programs, which are expected to continue into next semester on a regular basis, will include feature-length movies "most of whieh are available only for a series such as this," Krumm added.

Tomorrow night's film will be shown with English subtitles. Admission is free to all students and faculty members, but tickets must be picked up in advance. For the time being, faculty members James Haran, William Culver and Krumm are distributing passes.

Tickets will be distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis, aecording to Krumm.

Scheduled for Thursday, January 16, is Shakespeare's Henry V starring Laurence Olivier.

Opening the film series was the three-and-a-half hour drama, Intolerance.

H&R Students To Run Local Hotel For A Day

The 12th annual "Operation St. Francis Day" will go into full swing Thursday, January 16, when hotel and restaurant students here will assume major managerial positions at the St. Francis Hotel, Lawrence Wong, II and R placement director, announced today.

Top hotel positions will be held by fourth semester students who, for the day, will work side by side with persons regularly assigned to the job.

This program was started in 1952 by Dan London, the hotel's managing director, when he invited 38 H and R students to partieipate in what was then called "Operation Hotel." Sinee then the affair has been renamed "Operation St. Franeis Day" and has been held annually.

The day-long program begins with a grand tour of the entire building, during which students observe the work performed at each phase of hotel operation.

Federal Education Bill Raises Status Of Two-Year Colleges

PRESIDENT JOHNSON last month signed an historic bill which will bring the importance of the junior college in the spotlight.

The new $1.2 billion college bill provides for grants and loans for the construction of academic buildings and sets aside 22 per cent of the undergraduate grants for junior colleges and semi-professional technical institutes.

"This is the most significant education bill passed by the Congress in the history of the republic," the President declared.

With the current higher education enrollment of 4.2 million students and the anticipated increase to 7 million by 1970, the funds for physical expansion simply would not be found without Federal aid.

This new law provides special funds for the development of two-year colleges—the institutions which must increasingly act both as a feeder and a protective buffer to prevent mass-enrollment applications to the four-year college or university.

"These institutions will have to furnish much of the highly skilled manpower without which the cutting edge of university-educated talent will be severely dulled," an editorial in the New York Times explained.

California will no doubt get a considerable slice of the cake as it is now an accepted belief that the minimum level of education in this state is the junior college.

The enrollment here is growing with every semester, and old records fall as new ones are recorded. Registration figures this Fall showed 9015 students enrolled, an increase of almost 900 over the Spring semester.

The University of California has announced that it will go on the much-discussed quarter-system plan in 1966 and has even limited enrollment. The meaning is clear enough: only juniors and seniors are now accepted, leaving the junior colleges to handle the lower-division work. San Francisco State and San Jose State Colleges will no doubt follow the same direction in the near future.

Let us also remember that the so-called retention standard might be raised in all higher education institutions. President Conlan has repeatedly hinted that such a change is actually favored here, that of a 2.0 grade-point average being the minimum. No longer will a 1.5 be sufficient to remain at City College.

The lesson to be learned is evident for us to follow: the future of this state does, to some respects, depend on this newly-passed bill and, in turn, our own future depends on this college.

Repercussions Of Cutting

Industry Suffers Financial And Employment Setbacks

Unexcused absences, or cuts as they are commonly referred to by college students, produce serious repercussions not only for students involved, but also for downtown industry.

With the increasing emphasis on higher education, a student hurts himself if he is disqualified from attending a class or from attending the college because of excessive absences, Oscar Anderson, coordinator of educational management, explained in a recent interview.

A student who enrolls in a course and is later disqualified, "deprives another of a seat in the class and possibly the advantage of a better program," Anderson commented.

Industry, such as large hotels, stores and commerce in general, is indirectly affected by these students.

Anderson explained it this way: "The average family is composed of two or three children. The approximate cost per year of educating a child ranges from $400 for an elementary school education, to $550 for a high school education. The approximate cost per semester for educating a two-year college student is $600.

Therefore, if a family has three children, with one child in each phase of education, the parents benefit indirectly by receiving a total of more than $1500 per year in the education of their children.

In effect Anderson stated, "The downtown industry which pays heavy taxes is indirectly supporting our schools."

When a student is forced to withdraw from college because of excessive absences, "the industry suffers because its indirect financial contribution for the education of its future personnel is abused."

There are many ways to cut a tomato, but there is only one way to cut a class. When a student does so, he cuts himself, and his community.

A Laundromat On Campus?

Would a campus laundromat at City College earn its weight in soiled linen? Or would an on-campus cleaning (washing machine type) establishment merely make like a displaced cafeteria with Campus Police protection even?

"No standing in the aisles after you've stuffed your sheets in the machine. Go sit on a bench," the police officer would order.

Think of the companionship which would develop when students from the same classes got together to air their dirty linen. This development would either foretell the end of the college's fraternities or bring them closer together. (Depending on whether or not a coke machine was installed.)

Of course, there would always be the ingenious young student who would establish himself (with the dean's permission) as a competitor on the other side of the hill.

But let's not jump to hasty conclusions. Everything must be taken into consideration. Would bachelor professors be allowed to use the facility or would it be reserved for under-graduate personnel?

As has been said, all things must be taken into consideration.

A Necessary Profession

Librarians Are Scientists Dealing With Books, People

By Bea Takeuchi

Librarians are often mistaken for being "uninteresting, overpaid clerks, whose occupation involves stamping cards, giving directions to book stacks and catalogues, or just reading for their own pleasure."

Few persons know that to become a librarian, one must first earn a Master's degree in library science.

A rare interview, given by Irene Mensing, one of the college's librarians, discloses that there is a difference between having a position in the library and of being a librarian. A graduate librarian is not usually behind the charge desk.

"The librarian's work is to help and guide people in their research and studies. He selects books and organizes same. The work is interesting and varied," Miss Mensing explained.

"I recommend library science as a profession to students who love books and those who wish to give service to others. Librarians are needed, just as teachers are needed. The supply has never met the demand," she added.

"Reference work is very challenging and stimulating. There's never a dull day, and the faculty and students are always so appreciative. It is a satisfying profession," Miss Mensing emphasized.

Since joining the library staff here in 1940, Miss Mensing has assisted thousands of students. She has taught classes in library science and aided students in their research problems. Occasionally, she has even counseled students who came to her with their own personal problems.

"I intended to become a teacher. However, after working during the holidays at the San Francisco Public Library, I found that the work fascinated me. I decided to switch my field. I went back to college to earn a librarian's credential," she said.

Miss Mensing is a native San Franciscan. She attended Lowell High School and the University of California (Berkeley), where she received her A. B. degree and later her M. A. degree in librarianship.

She was elected to the Pi Lambda Theta (National Education) and Sigma Kappa Alpha (National History) Honor Societies. She has served as State President and Director of the California Association of School Librarians.

Miss Mensing, an enthusiastic tourist with a lifelong interest in international relations, has traveled all over the world.

"I believe that world understanding for everyone is the prerequisite to permanent world peace. Since I was a child, I have been interested in other countries. I have completed all the courses offered in the area of international relations," she said.

Miss Mensing revealed that she is an amateur singer, and a "typical joiner" with an interest in clubs and church work. She loves to cook and has a new hobby in photography. The opera and theater are her favorite recreations.

IRENE MENSING well knows that the life of a librarian is interesting and rewarding, not merely dull routine.

College Is More Than Education

Test Tubes, Painting, A Combo For Art Student

For some students, attending college is more than education. It means holding down a part-time job, a part-time class schedule, and making a living through a hobby.

City College student John White holds a part-time job with the Brown and Caldwell Civil and Chemical Engineering firm, attends City College on a part-time basis, and earns enough to cover his expenses through his art work.

Working an average of four hours week-days and eight hours week-ends, White explained that an agreement with his employer allows him to choose the hours when he works, because, he stated, "My work is always there no matter what time I show up."

White's duties at the Caldwell Engineering firm are composed mainly of cleaning up test tubes.

White was graduated from Mission High School in 1960, and in the fall of 1961 he went to Oxford, Ohio, to attend Miami University. When his finances ran out in 1962, after just one year of university life, White decided to come back to San Francisco to work. He found his present job with Caldwell, and his hobby of painting led him to art exhibits in Sausalito with the Edward Quill Gallery.

In 1962, White enrolled at City College to further his interest in art, and selected art design as his major field of study. With 22 units of work behind him in City College now, he is still on a part-time class basis.

A bachelor, White commented, "I rent a house rather than live at home, and I don't go out to eat very much, because I would rather cook at home instead."

His work with Caldwell Civil and Chemical Engineering firm really doesn't give him much spending money, White said, "but my painting full-time has taken care of all, or almost all, my expenses."

In 1962, White's paintings were displayed at the Quill Gallery in Sausalito, but this year they are on exhibit in private homes.

At college, White finds study a real problem, because as he puts it, "My real love is painting, and I can't look at nature inside a building." He is convinced that, "nature and art go together."

U. S. Flag Association Dictates Protocol In Use Of 'Old Glory'

Flag protocol, long established by such organizations as the United States Flag Association, becomes of special interest to citizens when a great public figure such as John F. Kennedy passes away.

The late President's death brought a mandatory lowering of the flag to half-staff for a 30-day mourning period throughout the United States, its possessions and its consulates on foreign territories.

President Kennedy's acceptance, and the high regard held for him in many allied foreign countries, precipitated equal mourning periods in these countries. But the raising of the flag to full-staff at the close of the mourning period does not mean that the flag will never be lowered to half-staff again out of respect for JFK.

His importance will require an annual lowering of the flag on the infamous day, according to the Flag Association. This is established flag protocol.

But this bit of protocol has been subverted and mocked successfully by such figures as the late Governor of Maine, Percival Baxter.

Back in the twenties when his Irish Terrier, Garry, died even the Grand Army of the Republic couldn't keep him from ordering the lowering of the flag to half-staff at the State Capitol.

His argument? "Dogs have played their part in peace and war," said the Governor. "The State's name has not been tarnished because the flag has been lowered out of respect to one of God's humble but noble creatures."

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

(Today's Foresight is by Michel Janicot)

THE one-man research team of The Guardsman, who has been producing such esoteric comments as those concerning the caption on the paper cups of the coffee machine in the basement of Science Hall, has a cohort at last!

We now have a two-man research team which has discovered all sorts of useless information for college students in need of conversational pieces whenever they go partying.

For example, the British Post Office, which runs Britain's state-owned telephone system, has called in a consulting psychiatrist to advise people how to remember their new 10-figure numbers. And you think the anti-dialers have trouble....

Also, the council chiefs of the village of Peo Adegan Purbalingga in central Java recently ruled that the fee for a marriage license would be 35 cubic feet of building stone, while a divorce would cost only 17.5 cubic feet of stone. The charges, the chiefs said, were to ease the cost of construction projects.

This point does prove then that divorce is more advantageous since its cost is half the price of marriage.

Everyone has heard of plans, such as "Fly now, pay later."

This Javanese plan is the handy dandy guide for the foundations of a happy divorce or as they say in Java What? Me Worry?

Another interesting vignette comes from desk of the editor who seems to have done too much thinking during the Christmas vacation. His story goes something like this.

Operation Big Lift which was designed to demonstrate U. S. troop mobility in the event of a European flareup is still subject to criticism. Although much of the 2nd Armored Division's equipment had been prepositioned by other means of transportation, the four-day move from Texas to Germany required 242 eastbound flights and cost an estimated $20 million.

Advocates of sea power claim that a single ship, the United States, could have delivered the full division and its equipment in five days, at a cost of $420,000. And a military historian recalled that, 20 years ago, the Queen Elizabeth made regular Atlantic crossings with a full division at less than one-twentieth the cost of Big Lift.

You see, the editor spent four long years in the U. S. Navy....

And now, here is something pleasing to all art lovers. Spanish painter Salvador Dali has just completed a painting called "The Profumo Affair," soon to be exhibited in New York...

Now, for those who feel that they know everything, here is another interesting anecdote. The general use of the typewriter is believed in part because many questioned the value of paying approximately $125 for a machine that would do the same work as a 1-cent pen. In addition, questions of the status of women in society became involved in the controversy over its utilization.

The girl typists became a symbol of women's emancipation and aroused responses accordingly. In 1881 when the New York YWCA announced typing lessons for women, physical tests were made on the ground that the female constitution would break down completely under the strenuous six months' course offered....

The finishing touch is a sample boo mot (for those who speak French) A member of the Haul of Fame de notes Fred Ackerman, chairman o Greyhound....

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

THE HOLIDAYS have passed, and everybody is proudly displaying the loot they received in what is known as the Big Haul.

The coeds bounce across the plaza in new dresses, a freshman is suddenly very conscious of time as he keeps looking at a new wristwatch and the traditionally horrible ties of the male instructors have that stiff, crisp, new look. They're still horrible, too.

The next holiday we can look forward to is Lincoln's Birthday, but that is in another semester and a million years from right now.

The Christmas cheer is fast disappearing as students start to look around and realize that the day of reckoning for the Fall, 1963, semester is fast approaching.

This is The Month Of The Final Examination. This is one of those times when we once again have to prove that Johnny can read.

Educators tell us that the final exams are the best way they know to find out how much we have learned about this or that subject. In other words, they want to find out if we know enough. Why can't they just ask us "yes" or "no?"

But while we wallow in self-pity and burn the midnight oil worrying about the exams, (it never seems to occur to anybody to study for them) we must realize that we are a lot luckier than the students of some other institutions of higher learning.

We have been conditioned for our finals by those little atrocities called mid-term examinations. Mid-terms have kept us on our toes and have not allowed us to fall too far behind, we hope.

At Hastings Law School here in San Francisco, there is a course offered that is two semesters long. This course is completely devoid of any mid-term or spot examinations, and the students only have to contend with an eight-hour final at the end of the second semester.

How many of us could walk into that examining room next June at Hastings with confidence?

But nobody's saying that our coming ordeal is going to be a snap. In keeping with the accepted forms of collegiate journalism, we will only say that it is going to be heck.

The sheer thought of impending disaster may even drive a couple of students into opening a book. These students will be on the right track. Reading western novels does take your mind off your troubles. Eisenhower did it before the Normandy invasion and we won, just in case you did not know.

Probably the greatest discomfort that college life offers is that you can never relax without feeling guilty. No matter how much studying you have done, there was always more you could do.

Ah, but after you walk out the door of your last final, the burdens and troubles of the world have been lifted from your shoulders, and you can go to a movie without thinking of the three chapters of Poly Sci you should be reading.

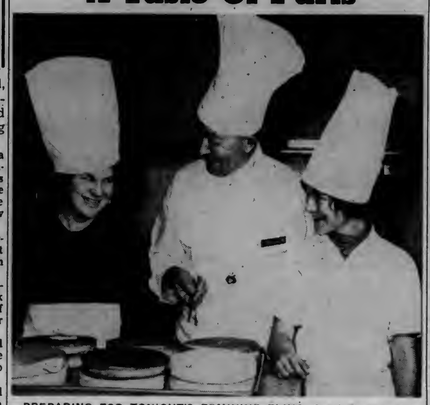
However, that time in Valhalla has not arrived yet, and now is not the time to relax. You can do that in a couple of weeks, or even start worrying about registration if you want to.

The best thing you can do right now is dig up those text books of yours and dust them off. It will be time to re-sell them very soon.

Or give them to Sherlock Holmes. It's his birthday today.

Asiatic Book Drive Falls Short Of Goal

Too high a goal was cited by Alpha Sigma Delta representative Larry Maibaum as the main reason for a below-goal collection in the fraternity's educational book drive here this semester.



The fraternity collected some 1200 books during the two-week drive. Its goal was 2500.

Maibaum conceded that the biggest contributors were faculty members and the Ramporium bookstore. "It was obvious that not enough excess literature was accumulated since 1962 to donate to last year's drive and make it a success," he commented.

With its goal of 1400 contributions in 1962, the fraternity gathered some 1600 pieces of acceptable literature.

All donations were shipped to the Asian continent where they will be used to help educate people in some 12 different countries, Maibaum said.

A Taste Of Paris

AWS Holds Feminine Fling Tonight In Smith Hall

By Charlotte Wong

The accent will be on France as the Associated Women Students hold their semiannual Feminine Fling awards party at 6:15 p.m. today in Smith Hall.

College chef Pierre Coste will emphasize the theme, A Taste Of Paris, by demonstrating the preparation of Beignets Souffle. Assisting him will be AWS board members Carol Parnow and Olga Wer.

The theme will be evident also in the light supper of French flavor served by the hotel and restaurant staff under the direction of Coste.

Insights on Parisian life will be provided by Doris Hernried, instructor of French here, and by the cultural attaché of the French consulate who has sent the college a short film entitled Christmas In Paris.

Also scheduled to participate is Norine Smith, English instructor and language laboratory attendant here, who will introduce French students attending the college. The students will be seated throughout the audience so that questions concerning Paris may be asked of them.

A highlight of the program will be the presentation of awards by the AWS to a woman student who has given outstanding service to the college and by the Recreation Association to an outstanding athlete.

The Inter-Sorority Council will also present the Dougherty Trophy, first awarded in Fall, 1953, to the sorority with the highest scholastic average.

Entertainment will be provided by students at the college. Scheduled are singer Andrea Fulton, dancers Mike Dobrinski and Lynn Goodrich and singers from Phi Beta Rho sorority.

Some 200 women are expected at the function.

'Madwoman' Opens Two Weekend Run In Theater Friday

The Madwoman of Chaillot, by Jean Girardoux, the final drama department presentation of the semester, will open at 8 p.m. Friday in the theater.

Scheduled for a two-weekend run, the play will be repeated Saturday, January 11 and January 17 and 18. It will also be presented in special matinee performances at 2 p.m. this Friday, and next Monday and Tuesday.

Another special performance will take place in the theater at 8 p.m. Wednesday, January 15, Robert Lasley, drama director, said last week.

Sandy Lundwall appears in the title role as Countess Aurelia. Three other madwomen are portrayed by Lynn Goodrich, Cherry Mir and Jeanne Chieffo.

A parody on defunct values, the theme of the play centers around the prospector, played by Larry O'Leno, whose wild plot to drill for oil in the heart of Paris is paramount over his concern for the city or the people.

In an hysterical desire for easy riches, a little man, played by Ross Post, unknowingly finances the scheme.

Temptation for the venture comes to him through the boasting of the president, the baron and the broker, played by Dennis Kalfas, Zorair Roubinian and Ray Lynch, respectively.

Ken Bachhold, in charge of publicity for the play, portrays the role of the ragpicker. Other members of the cast include Bill Shattuck as the waiter, Rudy Duterte as the deaf-mute, Bob Budiong as the shoelace peddler, and Dale Altvater as the sergeant.

Mike Dobrinski appears in dual roles of a newsman and a doorman. Roger Parker appears as Dr. Jadin, Lynne Fishel as Therese, Marlene Among as Paulette and Judy Gall as the flower girl.

Bob Leeds carries the role of the policeman. Alonso Gonzales, who has done professional set designing for little theater groups in the city, has created the two sets for this production.

Robert Johnston, theater costuming major, designed all the costumes for the play. Other drama majors who work behind the scenes are Brenda Goldstein in charge of make-up, Chuck Huntley in charge of sound, and William Trabucco in charge of light design and execution.

Admission will be $1 or free to Associated Student cardholders.

Sweetheart Ball To Be Held Jan. 25

City College's Chinese Student Club's annual Sweetheart Ball Rally, presenting seven queen candidates, will be held Saturday, January 25, at Victory Hall, 827 Stockton street, according to Jenny Tom, president of the Chinese Student Club.

Program for the rally will include introduction of the judges, presentation of queen candidates, a talent show, intelligence quiz and the presentation of the last year's queen, Miss Tom said.

Faculty members acting as judges are Dean Mary Golding, Dean Ralph Illsman, Sherm Elworthy, James Haran, Marcelline McDermott, William Funke and Florence Gantner. Other judges will be Flora Chan, Miss Talent of San Francisco and Albert Ting.

The queen of the ball will be chosen by the popularity vote, poise, talent and intelligence, and by the number of tickets sold by each contestant.

Members of the club are working "very hard," Miss Tom said, to make the rally successful, and all students are invited.

Donations are one dollar, and all contributions will go to college scholarships for City College students.

Reminiscence Of The Past— Council Debates Police Budget; $1600 Cut Proposed

By Lowell Mengel

In action reminiscent of previous semesters, Student Council last week temporarily tabled the proposed budget for the Campus Police after it was the target of $1600 in cuts.

The action against the original $3744.12 request of the Campus Police was led by sophomore member of council, Alan Williams, who proposed a $2000 budget for the police.

After the budget was presented by Williams, and after he admitted he had not talked with Fred Fitzgerald, the Campus Police adviser, the two members of council just elected and sworn in, Steve Christ and Gary Ettin, sought to table the budget until the adviser was consulted. The motion failed, 4-8-0.

Christ then told council that he would be glad to talk over the budget with Fitzgerald, feeling that Fitzgerald might be able to decide more easily what parts of his budget could be cut.

After considerable discussion, council finally voted 11-0-1 to postpone the vote on the budget. Williams was the lone abstainer.

With the election of Ettin and Christ to freshman and sophomore seats on the council, only one seat remains vacant.

Without any opposition, council also passed the last parts of the $25,518.32 budgeted at this point for next semester. The sum of $3 was allocated to the Election Committee, $2500 to the drama department, $683.50 to the Rally Committee and $960 to the Associated Women Students.

During the week just before Christmas vacation, Student Council selected the design made by Bob Voss for next semester's AS card, and voted to award him a transistor radio as a prize.

At the council meeting, Election Commissioner Chris Small announced that the official tally for votes cast in December elections was 889 votes.

Inter-Fraternity Council representative Craig Schwartz announced to the council that new officers of the IFC had been elected with Bruce Thomas the new president, Schwartz as vice president, Robert Stephens as secretary, Lou Galliani as treasurer and Joel Cohen as rushing chairman.

In other business council scheduled a special election for yesterday so students could vote on a protest presented to council by Williams, protesting the dates when AS elections were held.

Williams claims that the election was not properly publicised. Election Commissioner Small went on record as disagreeing with Williams.

Council also went through the final planning for the student government dinner held last Thursday, adopted a resolution choosing AS President Vince Contreras and council member Larry Casalogno as yell leaders and saw former AS President Dan Collins visit a meeting.

At the end of last Thursday's meeting, Contreras said goodbye to council and cabinet as he retired from office, saying he enjoyed his term.

Building Regulations Slow Construction Of Horticulture Center

Construction of the college's new horticulture building has been temporarily slowed down because certain city and state building regulations need additional consideration, Harry Nelson, head of the horticulture department, stated recently.

"The problem with the greenhouses is that they must serve as both greenhouses and classrooms," Nelson said. "But if all goes well, we will be able to move some time in April," he added.

Nelson explained that the biggest problem that will confront his department in April will be the process of moving. "Not only will we have the normal moving problems of trying not to lose or misplace various articles, but we also have to move 40,000 plants plus countless pounds of chemicals and fertilizer."

One of the main projects under development by Nelson and his classes are the plans for the landscaping of the area where Phelan Avenue crosses Judson Avenue. "This is a worthwhile project, and is being worked upon now, only because financial support is being made for the first time," Nelson commented.

13 Former All-City Musicians Belong To College Band

With 13 students who were members of the All-City Orchestra when in high school participating, the college's band and orchestra presented a concert last night, similar to the one held November 21, but with additional selections.

The band, which is composed of 35 members, played a scherzo from Shostakovich, Number 5 and selections from the musical comedy, The Most Happy Fella.

The orchestra presented a movement from Beethoven's Symphony Number 8.

Thirteen participating musicians of the orchestra and band at the concert were also members of the All-City Orchestra during their high school experience.

They include first violinist Mary Costanzo, formerly of Lincoln High School; celloist Catherine Tuttle of Lowell; double basses John Bevilacqua, of Galileo, and Penny Doran of Balboa.

Other members include clarinet, Douglas McCrea, Washington; bassoon, David Cohen, Lowell; trombone, Richard Deovlet, Galileo; French horns, Myron Woo, Galileo, and David Small, Lowell.

Members of the college's band who were also members of the All-City Orchestra include clarinet Joan Pugh, Lowell; flute, Michael Megas, Washington; trumpet, Dennis Reid, Washington; French horn, Small, Lowell, and oboe, Toni DeNegro, Lincoln.

The All-City Orchestra was started by Albert Renna, director of music for San Francisco public schools, approximately five years ago.

When the organization first started, Renna sent representatives to each high school in the city for auditions.

At present, auditions are held at San Francisco State College, and students wishing to audition must appear at State for this purpose.

Megas, engineering major and music student here, explained that the public high school students of the city participate as do some junior high students if they are especially talented.

Another concert, to feature the Wiener Solisten, a 13-man string ensemble from Vienna, is to appear during College Hour Thursday, January 16, Meyer M. Cahn, music instructor here, announced recently.

This group is scheduled to appear on January 10 at the University of California at Berkeley. An interesting point, according to Cahn, is the fact that at the UC performance, the admission charge for adults is $2.50, and for students $1.50.

No admission is charged here.

Council Honors Svabek, Kaufman

William Svabek, graphic arts instructor here, and Roger Kaufman, Associated Men Student vice president, were last week awarded the Outstanding Service Award for service to the student government.

The two award winners were presented with plaques at last Thursday night's student government dinner in Smith Hall.

Svabek, faculty award winner, received his Associate in Arts degree from City College, and his Bachelor of Arts degree from San Francisco State College.

The awards are presented each semester to a deserving student and faculty member respectively.

Cagers Third At Modesto Classic

Chandler All-Tourney Pick As Rams Suffer First Loss

By Fred Wales

After winning 10 straight, the Ram cagers suffered their first loss of the new season in the semi-finals of the Modesto Tourney's holiday classic to neighboring College of San Mateo, 65-54, and settled for third place with a 72-48 win over Santa Rosa.

Led by guard Milky Johnson and center John Carmichel, the Bulldogs took advantage of the Rams' passing errors to break the 28-27 halftime deficit and pull ahead to stay in the final five minutes.

Commenting on the loss, Ram pilot Sid Phelan stated that the loss "would be good for the team as a whole" as it would bring out the weaknesses of the team "while there is still time to correct them" before the start of Golden Gate Conference competition.

The Rams bounced back from their defeat in good form when they met Santa Rosa for third place spot and, using their bench most of the game, pulled away to a 29-16 halftime lead and a 72-48 final.

Art Adams was instrumental in the pull away with 22 points as were guards Mac Smith and Brandon Chappell with 11 and 12 respectively.

In the tournament opener against College of Sequoias, the San Franciscans used their control style of basketball to score a 60-49 come from behind victory on the scoring power of center Jerry Chandler and his 31-point performance.

The next round, against a Chaffey team whose front line averaged 6-6, Chandler again could not be stopped as he finished scoring plays with follow-ups, tip ins and lay-ups.

Chaffey still managed to give the Rams trouble as they came back to tie the score in the third quarter after being down seven at halftime. Adams and Chandler combined to finally sink Chaffey, 67-57, as the latter finished the night with 34 points scored.

The tourney proved a boon to the Rams as it showed their ability to score against balanced teams like Sequoias, tall teams like Chaffey and, most important, their ability to bounce back after a loss.

Chandler was selected as a member of the All-Tourney Five. He scored 83 points in four games for a 20-plus average despite scoring only 9 points against San Mateo while covered by two men.

Adams was overlooked in the team selections but was a definite contender with 78 points.

Prior to the tourney, the Rams had accumulated a perfect 8-0 record at the expense of the Bay Area's four-year college and university teams.

San Jose State was win number four but was the first team to press the Rams to the wire. With San Jose leading, 29-23, at halftime and playing on their home court, the Rams had their hands full when, late in the game, John Keating put the Spartans ahead, 48-47, with his third 20-foot set shot.

Free throws saved the Rams as San Jose finally eliminated two Spartans and put the Rams ahead to stay with less than a minute remaining.

In a desperate attempt to get back in the game, San Jose continued fouling and was beaten, 56-54, with the assistance of Chandler's 28 points.

St. Mary's proved less troublesome, as Chandler and Adams put on a skillful shooting display that found the Gaels losing 71-58, and the double horns of the Rams, Chandler and Adams, totaling 27 and 24 respectively.

University of San Francisco's Frosh gave Chandler a chance to show his defensive talents as sharpshooting guard Jerry Blum, who had hit for 38 points in the previous game, was held to 14 points until Chandler left the game. He then finished with 24, as the Dons were added to the list of Ram victims, 67-54.

Forward Henry King was lost to the Rams following the USF Frosh contest as he left the game in the first quarter with a broken nose.

King was lost to the Rams for six games including Modesto.

Berkeley nearly snapped the win streak as the University of California Freshmen gave the Rams their toughest battle prior to the Modesto classic.

Starting slowly, as usual, the Rams were down at halftime by 26-25, but the worst was yet to come.

California's Perkins and Cornelius came to life as Perkins connected on five field goals and Cornelius added two more. Forward Elmer Youngblood kept the Rams in there with eight points as did guards Ken Scalmanini and Rich Henderson.

Adams added the final two, and, with four seconds left, the Rams were up, 54-53. Perkins inbounded the ball, and after a time out, took the ball at half court and shot as the buzzer sounded. Two inches were the margin that saved the Rams their seventh win.

Vallejo was the final Ram opponent. Adams carried the Rams with 19 points in the first half which gave his team a 31-29 halftime lead. Chandler hit 16 points in the second half, followed by Adams' 11 and Mae Smith's 10 for a 78-66 final.

Twelve game statistics:

	FG	FT	F	Pts.	Games	Avg.
Chandler	81	81	25	243	12	20.2
Adams	93	46	28	232	12	19.4
Scalmanini	36	31	21	83	12	6.9

Gary Lewis, Former Ram Grid Star, 49er Choice

Former Ram grid star Gary Lewis, elected last semester to the college's athletic Hall of Fame, was recently named fifth draft choice by the San Francisco 49ers.

Lewis, now a junior at the University of Arizona, has been a gridiron standout since high school. He was rated All-America as a back for Polytechnic High School, and as a Ram was Big Eight Conference Back-of-the-Year in 1960.

Lewis, 6-2, 215 pounder, quarterbacked regularly for the Rams, doubling at fullback. He was most noted for his breakaway running ability.

At the end of the 1960 season, Lewis led the Rams in passing, scoring, interceptions, and was second only to "his other half," Tom Piggee, Rams' Most-Valuable-Player of 1960, in rushing. One coach commented, when the draft was announced, "He was a top ballplayer."

Hector Is Most Valuable Lineman; Lewis And Lapera Make Second Team

BOB HECTOR poses for cameramen during practice session.

The All-Golden Gate Conference team, selected by the eight head football coaches in the conference, named Ram guard Bob Hector as conference Most-Valuable-Lineman as well as to the first team both on offense and defense. Back Pat Lewis and defensive back Rudy Lapera gained spots on the second team.

Hector, 5-11, 185-pound sophomore who did not play last year, developed rapidly to become the mainstay in the Ram defense which held opponents to an average of 188.7 yards per game to pace the conference in that department.

"Bob's fine blocking opened up holes in the opposition's line and enabled our backs to get loose for long gainers. Bob was a good team man devoted to the game," said Ram head foothall coach Dutch Elston.

Second team selection, back Lewis, was a valuable asset to the Ram offense as he carried the ball 57 times to net 286 yards, for an average of 5 yards per carry.

"Pat was one of the best backs in the conference, and a hard worker. We felt his loss when he was out for several games because of injuries," Elston stated.

Rounding out the Ram selection was Lapera, linebacker, named to the second team on defense. "Rudy was a real competitor who did his best in every game and gave our team a real boost," Elston emphasized.

Team wise, Contra Costa, undefeated conference champion, dominated the offensive and defensive All-Conference teams with 11 selections, followed by Chabot with 7, Foothill 6, Oakland and San Jose 5, San Francisco and Diablo Valley 4, and San Mateo 2.

Along with Hector, other first team choices on both offense and defense, were Contra Costa tackle Jim Nelson and Chabot end Gary Woznick. Jim Bullock, of Contra Costa, was named the conference's Most-Valuable Back.

PAT LEWIS led the team in rushing and placed seventh in the league. He came to the Rams from the University of Utah and is a sophomore.

First team offensive selections were center Eb Hunter, Contra Costa; guards Jim Nelson, Contra Costa, and Hector, San Francisco; tackles Ralph Wenzel, Foothill, and Stan Wiseman, Oakland.

Hoopsters Face Foothill Owls In Friday Tilt

With the opener against Diablo Valley behind them, the Ram hoopsters will continue deeper into the 1964 season when they face the Foothill Owls this Friday at Foothill College in Los Altos Hills.

Foothill is rated high this year, despite a 7-6 preseason record.

Veterans Larry Ullrich and Bill Austin lead the Owl scoring attack with 12.2 and 12.1 game averages, followed closely by freshman Dick Treglown with an even 10.

The Owls have improved as the season has progressed and boast a second place finish in their own tourney, losing in the consolation championship with an 81-55 victory over Santa Ana.

Ram coach Sid Phelan rates the Owls as formidable and feels that with their rate of improvement they pose a good league threat.

Foothill had a tough time in the Oakland game last night and should be up for the Rams' game as it will be their first conference home game.

Despite the Owls' improvement, the Rams should rate as slight favorites because of their superior 11-1 record and Jerry Chandler's 20-point game average.

A definite boost for the Rams will be the return of forward Henry King to the line-up after his broken nose kept him out of the Modesto Tourney.

At 6-5, King will probably be needed to improve the rebounding ability of the small Ram front line which averages 6-2 at present.

Following the Foothill game things get tougher for the Rams as they face rival Oakland next Friday, here, and the following week will test number one ranked San Jose, also here.

Faculty-Student Game Feature Of AMS Semiannual Sportnight

The Associated Men Student sponsored semi-annual sportnight starts at 7 o'clock tonight in the men's gymnasium.

Feature action of the evening is a student-faculty basketball game, with the AMS intramural basketball league championship playoff and the semesterly boxing tournament, under the supervision of coach Roy Diederichsen, in nearly equal billing, AMS President Bob Roddick said.

Boxers scheduled to participate in the fisticuff tournament are Tuese Ahkiong—135 pounds; Al Rivas—130; Carlton Hall—140; Tom Fox—145; Art Howard—145; Paul Moniot—153; Ernie Banang—148; Tom Panetto—160; George Dotson—160, and Paul Fatoeh—158.

The boxing matches follow the basketball playoff, in which the Divine Ones and Hotel and Restaurant vie for the championship.

Roddick will present the perpetual championship trophy and medals to the champions following the game. Winners in each division will also receive team trophies and individual medals. Highest individual scorers in each league will also receive awards.

Boxing trophies will be awarded to each bout winner, and medals to each loser.

During intermission Roddick will award the newly initiated Perpetual Homecoming Queen trophy to this semester's queen.

To wrap up the evening, a faculty team will play the loser of the H&R-Alpha Kappa Rho contest. Expected to be on line for the game are Dean Ralph Hillsman, Coaches Sid Phelan, Lou Vasquez, Ernie Domecus and Dutch Elston, and instructors Lewis Matthey and George Muller.

Final league standings:

30 Coeds Receive Awards From RA

The Recreation Association will honor approximately 30 coeds at its semiannual awards social set for 6:30 p.m. tomorrow in the activity room of the women's gymnasium, Frances Galloway, RA adviser, announced last week.

Coeds who have been appointed managers of RA groups will be presented medals in recognition of their services during the semester. Newly-elected officers of RA will also be sworn into office at this time.

Fran Richardson is the outgoing president.

Students who have participated in their particular sport activity for the prescribed number of semesters will receive a shield for first semester participation, a block for second semester participation and a star for each additional semester.

Miss Galloway also announced that a bowling league composed of on-campus organizations will officially begin next semester. The league will operate on a regular schedule and awards will be presented to outstanding participants at the end of each semester at the RA social.

The league will meet Monday afternoons at L&L Castle Lanes, 1750 Geneva Avenue.

All campus clubs have been invited to sponsor a team in the league, Miss Galloway emphasized.

Interested parties may consult her during the next two weeks in her office at the women's gymnasium.

San Jose And San Mateo Are Cage Favorites

As the 1964 Golden Gate conference swings into action both San Jose and San Mateo loom as the teams to beat according to the preseason ratings.

Coach Sid Phelan has rated San Jose high since the practice season began two months ago. Composed of freshmen, the players from last year's club are either on the bench or gone. Despite their seeming greenness the Jaguars are well organized and take advantage of their speed and ability to hit from outside.

Although a new team depth seems to be no problem as they have gone 11 deep and still not lost much of their effectiveness.

To date San Jose won the Foothill tourney and placed second to Allen Haneock in the Haneock Tourney.

San Mateo has come into contention after their impressive wins in the Modesto tourney which they captured.

Lead by guard Milky Johnson and Center John Carmichael the Bulldogs boast both size and depth. Mike Gilman adds to the scoring power of the San Mateans as does John Rayburn.

Although less publicized, Oakland should also be a definite contender due to the area from which they draw and their string of preseason wins.

Foothill is a bit weaker this year with the loss of Jim Gleason, last year's big scorer, but are still a team that could be tough.

Chabot has come a long way from last year and is also being considered as a threat for the top four. Dave Garcia leads the Gladiators.

Contra Costa behind Roosevelt Robinson on a given night could be dangerous but their type of "running" basketball should hinder any title hopes.

Diablo Valley will be rebuilding this year after their loss of Mickey Toner and Sam Coston to graduation.

City College of San Francisco, according to Coach Sid Phelan, should be in the top four.

Student Protest Over Dates Of AS Elections Fails In Special 'Referendum' Vote

By Herm Kilgerman

An attempt by Sophomore Councilman Alan Williams to invalidate last month's Associated Student elections, because of what he considered was a lack of sufficient advance publicity, was foiled last Tuesday in a special "referendum" vote here.

A total of 69 votes were cast in the four-and-a-half hour election which was open to all registered students at the college—some 8000 in number. Forty-seven students cast ballots against Williams' proposal, while a mere 22 supported his contention.

The referendum needed a two-thirds majority to pass. It failed by more than two-thirds.

Williams prompted the special and unprecedented election when he presented Associated Student President Vince Contreras with a petition prior to Christmas vacation signed by 100 verified AS card-holders and stating that the elections were uneonstitutional.

According to the revised AS Constitution, which has a provision for referendum, Contreras was forced to schedule the special vote within two weeks after receiving the petition. Last Tuesday was the end of the second week.

Contreras announced in advance that advance publicity was not necessary for such an election.

Election Commissioner Chris Small went on record as opposing the special election and Williams' petition, because "the dates of the AS elections were incorporated in the November 21 minutes of Student Counell and posted in a public place on campus."

The constitution says that the dates must be published and/or posted at least two weeks prior to the elections. The meeting of November 21 was almost three weeks in advance.

"Alan (Williams) wrote a letter to several administrators," Student Government Advlser Sherm Elworthy stated, "explaining his point of view. We showed him that he was completely wrong and didn't have a leg to stand on, but he just wouldn't give in."

Elworthy cited the fact that of the probable 100 students who signed Williams' petition, only 22 students voted their support in the actual referendum election. "This was a sign of giving-in," he added.

Last Performance Of 'Madwoman' Set For Tonight

The Madwoman of Chaillot goes into its final performance at 8 o'clock tonight in the theater.

The last production of the semester, and one encompassing a cast of some 40 roles, the play had to be rescheduled to avoid conflict with final examinations and will not be presented on January 17 and 18 as previously announced.

Other changes, concerning the cast, will see Joan Grant as Mlle. Gabrielle replacing Cherry Mir as the Madwoman of St. Sulpice. Sandy Lundwall as the Madwoman of Chaillot and Jeanne Chieffo as the Madwoman of La Concorde complete the trio of madwomen who will dance the mazurka as a special attraction in the play.

Set designer Alonso Gonzales is responsible for the decor of the sidewalk cafe of the first act and the bedroom chamber of the Madwoman, seen in the second act.

Construction of the sets was by Don Bauer, assisted by Bob Leeds, Judy Gall, Leon Moniot, Sandra Turner and John Robb.

In addition to his role as street singer, costuming credits go to Robert Johnston, who paid special attention to the 1885 garb of the madwomen, while the general setting of the play is in the spring of the following year. Johnston was assisted by Dorothy Pinczykowski and Margaret McGraw.

Makeup is under the supervision of Brenda Goldstein, aided by Andrea Fulton and Keiko Mizutani.

AWS Awards Five Gifts, Trophy At Feminine Fling

By Charlotte Wong

The Associated Women Student Feminine Fling award ceremonies, January 8 in Smith Hall, included the presentation of five gifts and one trophy, the inauguration of one president and the introduction of a new college song.

Rosie Fang, AWS president, presented gifts of appreciation to active AWS board members Olga Wer and Marsha Latham. Miss Fang also announced that Miss Latham had been elected next semester's AWS fashion coordinator.

A gift for English instructor Sylvia Leff, who was commentator for the AWS fashion show in November, was not presented, beeause of the absence of Mrs. Leff.

Dean of Women Mary Golding received a French cookbook from the AWS board as a tribute for her work as sponsor of the organization. The gift was in keeping with the French theme of the funetion.

First awarded in Fall, 1953, to the sorority with the highest scholastic average, the Dougherty Trophy was presented by Inter-Sorority Counell President Cathy Bossert to Phi Beta Rho sorority.

During the introduetion of new presidents, it was announeed that Fran Richardson had been re-elected Recreation Association President and that the ISC had not as yet held elections.

Incoming AWS President Wardene Oliver was sworn into office by Miss Fang and presented with symbols of her office—a gavel and a pin. Miss Oliver in turn presented the outgoing president with a gift from the AWS board as a token of their appreciation.

A new college song was also introduced at the function. The four-verse song has lyrics written by student Kathleene M. Chalman and is sung to the musie of Ameriea The Beautiful.

Boyd Burtnett Will Head Spring Guardsman Staff

Following last week's Editorial Board meeting, announcement was made that Boyd Burtnett, current Managing Editor, will replace Michel Janicot as Editor in Chief of The Guardsman next semester.

Composing the remainder of the Spring staff will be current reporters Bea Takeuchi as Feature Editor, Charlotte Wong as News Editor and Pat Butler as Staff Writer.

Janicot will step down to Managing Editor and Fred Wales will continue as Sports Editor.

Winning Design

Bob Voss, an advertising art student here, displays his winning design for next semester's Associated Student card.

The design consists of a white background and a red foreground. A Ram's head, the college's mascot, is imprinted on the card as is an abstract view of Science Hall. "This winning design is a fine effort," Rich Thomas, AS card sales chairman, stated.

As an award for his efforts, Voss received a transistor radio.

"I would also like to thank all the other art students who submitted entries in the design contest this semester," Thomas commented. "They were all good, and it was a difficult decision to make."

Student Council voted on the winning entry.

Floristry Group Invests $4000

An investment of $4000 was made last week by members of the newly formed Retail Floristry Foundation here, Louis Batmale, of the college's department of instruetion, disclosed today.

The money will be used to purchase departmental supplies for the retail floristry curriculum here and to provide scholarships to deserving students enrolled in the program, Batmale explained.

"The fund will be continuous," Batmale said, "and is expected to increase as more interest is aroused among representatives from industry."

The seven-member group is headed by Wilber Stein, owner of Albert O. Stein florists, and includes Charles Bona, partner in Avansino and Mortenson florists; Louis Paolini, owner of Belmont Florists, and T. W. Yatabe, secretary of the California Floristry Association.

College officials belonging to the foundation are college President Louis G. Conlan, Mary Hope Jacks, retail floristry instructor and Batmale.

'Operation St. Francis' In Full Swing Tomorrow

By Patty Smith

Hotel and Restaurant students here will assume major managerial positions at the St. Francis Hotel tomorrow at the 12th annual "Operation St. Francis Day," Lawrence Wong, H & R placement director, stated recently.

Major hotel positions will be held by fourth semester students who, for the day, will work side by side with those regularly employed in the jobs.

This unique program, the only one existing west of the Mississippi, was first started 12 years ago by Dan London, the hotel's managing director, when he invited 38 H&R students to participate in a program called "Operation Hotel." The name has since been changed to "Operation St. Francis Day" and is held in January each year.

Working with London as managing director is H&R student Kay Sera. Student Edward Campbell will be second in command as resident manager, while Dwight Maxwell, Alan Perry and Frank Valdez will assume the positions of assistant managers.

The position of business development will be handled by Dennis Sammut, staff planning by William Grigsby, and Leroy Piecinini will take over as personnel manager.

Joubin Shokouhian will assume the duties of the food and beverage manager. Exhibiting their skill as chefs will be William Koon as executive chef, Orlindo Barsetti and Jack King as sous chefs and Harvey Chapman as pastry chef.

Business positions will be taken over by William Russi as auditor, John Ditton as credit manager, and Gloria Garibaldi will handle financial matters when she assumes the position of head cashier.

Blair Sawyer will try his hand as housekeeper, and Chris Hontalas will take over as building superintendent and chief engineer of the hotel. The role of purchasing agent will be assumed by Stanley Anastasio, and Thomas Smith will be assistant beverage manager.

Assuming top position in the publicity department is Nick Morf. Phyllis Chaix will assume the top role in the telephone department, while Douglas Walker will be in charge of the hotel's Grill Room.

Shozo Kikuchi will assume the duty of taking charge of the Medallion Room, while Valerie Davis will assume similar duties in the Terrace Room.

Room service will be handled by Phil Villanueva, banquet service by Charles Kundysek. Wally Flatt will be in charge of the mail department.

Accompanying the students tomorrow will be Wong, Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical terminal education, and Louis Conlan, president of the college.

Also participating in the one-day program will be students from photography, law enforeement, engineering, public relations and journalism departments.

The program starts at 9 a.m., outside the Mural Room, where students will assemble for a grand tour of the hotel. After observing the work performed by regular personnel at all phases of hotel operation, the students will then go to their assigned posts.

H&R Sophomore Kay Sera Wins Sheraton Award

Kay Sera, fourth semester hotel and restaurant major, was selected as the recipient of the Sheraton Corporation of America Award last Thursday night.

Three fourth semester students in the H&R department are nominated each year for the award on the basis of class work, leadership and ability to progress in the hotel industry, Lawrence Wong, H&R instruetor explained.

"Nineteen scholarships awarded to H&R majors last fall were renewed for the spring semester," Wong added.

The Harvey M. Toy scholarships of $500 each were awarded to Robert E. Barney, Riehard Heise and Merlyn H. Gill.

Other students receiving $500 scholarships ineluded Stanley Gershenson, whose scholarship is from the E. B. De Golia fund; Roland Street, from the George D. Smith scholarship fund; Mark White, from Accent International, Minerals and Chemicals Corporation, and Arpad Mihaly, from Food Service Executives Association.

Sera was awarded a $300 scholarship from Western Hotels, Dupar, while Eluwene Visser, William Koon, James Miraglia, Jr., John Christian, Edward Campbell, Douglas Walker and Orval Miller were awarded scholarships of $250 each.

Visser's scholarship was from Borden's Dairy Delivery Co., Koon's from Harvey M. Toy, Miraglia's from National Association — Hotel & Restaurant Meat Purveyors, Christian's from Shenson Meat Co., San Franeisco, Campbell's from San Mateo County Restaurant Association and Walker's and Miller's scholarships came from Les Amis d' Escoffier Society, New York.

Food Service Executive Association, San Francisco branch, awarded Michael Foley a $200 scholarship, while Spreckels Russel Dairy Co. gave Frederick Guihara a $150 scholarship.

A $100 scholarship was won by John Battistone from Lyons-Magnus, and Calvin Mark was awarded a scholarship for the same amount by the Western Hotels Corporation.

Hotel and Restaurant Foundation Scholarship Committee members include Louis Batmale, foundation chairman and coordinator of technical-terminal education here, President Louis Conlan, John P. Gifford, Wendell Muntz, Hilda L. Gifford, Carl D. Rutledge and Wong, the foundation's secretary.

The Guardsman Looks Back At A Much Too Long Semester

AND SO, the Fall semester is drawing to a close with final examinations rapidly approaching. What kind of a semester has it been at City College? Looking back through the 13 issues of The Guardsman, one can actually realize that this has been a long semester. To be exact, much too long. It's a good thing Christmas vacation broke the long spell, but who has ever heard of coming back on December 30 and 31, off January 1, back January 2....

The headlines of The Guardsman read something like this: Fall Semester Sets Another New Enrollment Mark... Carillons, Full Length College Hour—Signs Of New Semester... The Next Thing To Being 4-F—Marriage... Police Chief Cain Promises Strict Enforcement Of Law (and he did too!)

Things moved out quite rapidly then, and the campus social life expanded: COO Launches Activities With Get-Acquainted Day Tomorrow.... At the same time, controversy broke loose with, OK, Wear The Slacks, But Pick Up The Tab.... Associated Men Student Bob Roddick also had an interesting idea when he appointed coeds to AMS organizational positions; however, the administration had other plans....

Then, someone noticed the campus was beginning to look like a city dump, Campus Police were appointed to regulate the cafeteria and Dropouts Start When Leaves Of Autumn Fall....

Wendie Williams was selected football queen during Homecoming with only one car entered in the car parade (no wonder there is a dearth of spirit on the campus).... Burglars and thoughtful vandals hit the college too, and Student Council came under attack with Less Play, More Leadership.

The semiannual pledge week got under way along with Fate, Elements Wreck COO Plans For Football Activities.... A newly revised AS Constitution went into effect (why a new one, nobody really knows)... Alpha Gamma Sigma's study habit clinic proved to be a success while the Alpha Sigma Delta's book drive fell short....

The annual International Relations Club Fair—much publicized—also failed to be a money-making event while weird election procedures were discovered in the ratification of the AS Constitution. ... Mme. Nhu made campus news when a Vietnamese-speaking student had the opportunity to meet her and her daughter (Wow!) at a downtown reception... The college gained $10,000 worth of equipment from the IBM Corporation....

By this time, election fever hit the campus and two political parties formed, waiting for the election dates... the AS President then declared a lack of spirit existed on campus and issued a "state-of-the-union message."

John Theilen and Bob Roddick then vied for the AS Presidency. ... the assassination of President Kennedy plunged the campus into complete bewilderment... The Guardsman won its 32nd All-American award.

The soccer team found itself state champs while Roddick won the AS election... Associated Women Students' semiannual Feminine Fling—not to be outdone by the city of San Francisco—had its own French festival (A taste of Paris), and Student Council cut the campus police budget....

Meanwhile, H&R department will operate the St. Francis hotel tomorrow, and The Madwoman of Chaillot finally went on after much rescheduling....

And so with all these happy and sad memories of the Fall semester, it is time for The Guardsman to sign off also while anticipating a good new semester.

'Money In Motion'

Coordinator Of Instruction Luckmann Doubles As TV Personality On Weekends

By Bea Takeuchi

An administrator here dutifully pays his union dues regularly to the American Radio and Television Artists Association. He is an experienced television personality and is considered talent by the staff of KRON-TV.

Any undergraduate would envy his educational background. It includes a B. A. from the University of San Francisco, an M. A. from Stanford University, an L. L. B. from the University of San Francisco, and a Ph. D., from the University of California at Berkeley.

ADMINISTRATIVE duties and TV moderation keep Lloyd Luckmann busy.

When City College is in session, he can be located in C-306. His key traits are patience and understanding. He is a very busy person—but never too busy to take the time to listen to some student referred to him for special instructional counselling.

Who is he? Lloyd D. Luckmann, the college's coordinator of instruction. Each Sunday he is the "anchor man" on a panel discussion program, titled Money in Motion.

The program introduces new personalities each week. Luckmann presides over the extemporaneous discussions, which involve conversations about economy, automation, air transportation, Mexican Braceros, the United European Market, California agriculture, tomorrow's business leaders and other stimulating subjects.

"Starting next semester, Money in Motion will present a series that is designed to help San Francisco high school students. By law, they will be required to take civics. We will discuss each phase of this subject," said Luckmann.

Luckmann's show-business career began in 1953, when he was moderator for the television production, Gold Label Round Table.

When asked whether he preferred the bright lights to the routine work of being a college coordinator of instruction, he chuckled and said, "Don't use the word 'hobby,' let's say it's a pleasant avocation—and a very uncertain one."

Student Spends Weekends In Zoo

Public Contact Job Is 'Most Interesting' To Engineering Major

Rick McRitchie, an engineering major at the college, spends a good deal of his spare time in the San Francisco Zoo. He holds down a part-time job making deliveries to various areas of the botanical gardens.

McRitchie, who finds his time during the week booked solid with engineering courses, is equally busy on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays zooming around Fleishacker on a three-wheeler.

He got the position a year and a half ago and has held it ever since. He has also held a number of other interesting jobs, including selling ice cream and being a maintainence engineer at Penney's.

"All of the jobs I have had brought me in contact with a lot of people," he said, "but working at the zoo is the most interesting of all. It's kind of funny watching the people and the animals at the same time; you begin to wonder who is watching whom."

McRitchie, until recently in a leg cast from an injury incurred in basketball practice, found that the injury did not interfere with his driving.

A well-rounded athlete, McRitchie is most disgruntled by the inactivity caused by the cast. It has put a temporary damper on his basketball and football playing and his surfing.

He played basketball at Saint Ignatius, and is now undergoing whirlpool treatments under the supervision of City College basketball coach Sid Phelan in the hope that he will be ready for the basketball season. He has also played baseball for the Torneros, Presidio of San Francisco's army ball team.

McRitchie admits that a twofold problem developed from the leg injury. "The monkeys never let me forget it—when I look at their agility, and then think about me, trying to get up on the boards—boy."

"Since the job at the zoo is only a weekend arrangement, I have time on weekdays during the summer for sports and other jobs," he explained, "but when college is in session it's engineer during the week and zoologist weekends."

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

(Today's column is by Chris Welzig)

IT IS wisely said that French is the language for lovers, German is to be spoken in sophisticated circles and Italian is at its best when it is spoken to servants. This accounting doesn't leave much room for the language of Shakespeare.

But, on the other hand, maybe it does. English is being used to distort (some say disfigure) all the other languages. Yippee!

A recent Time Magazine article discloses that the German Luftwaffe used expressions like "Aber, no sweat, boy, no sweat, ich habe normal letdown procedure gemacht." How's that for continental (American Continent, of course) flavor?

The impact of U.S.-flavored, jargonized English on the continent of Europe allows for speculation on the part of nimble-witted (or dim-witted, maybe) persons.

Picture neat little rows of homes in a typical Deutsch hamlet marred only by a scribbling on a white washed fence: "Heinrich Herman Helmut Humpernickel is nuts about Emma Kraut Steinhager."

Oh well, enough for speculation. But, getting to the hard, bare-faced facts, the Britishers love us. At least, they don't concentrate on the less mundane things such as what the Americans are doing (or have done) to the English language. Ever since the American sponsored concentration of British tea in American waters off the East Coast, they've had more important things to worry about.

• • •

AT ONE TIME or another American students are compared with the European brand, and everybody agrees that it's shameful the way American students waste their time in school.

But America continues to prosper grandly. Possibly because of all the fine persons who come to America to save us from decay.

• • •

CALIFORNIA COLLEGES exhibit a specimen whose very presence illustrates an academic phenomenon in the United States: the student who finished high school as many as 20 years ago and whose schooling was not necessarily interrupted by service in the Armed Forces during a war period.

These persons are found abundantly in the California school system for at least two reasons: free education and the liberalism for which California is noted.

Students from two generations sit side by side in most California classrooms and cafeterias.

Some of these older persons are successful business people who find that something important is missing from their lives.

Then there are those who haven't been successful and realize suddenly that the years which have been sliding by haven't robbed them of the desire to express and prove themselves.

They may just desire a career job which will guarantee them future security, but usually they are looking for a position which offers meaning for their lives.

This foray into the world of the older student doesn't begin to cover the subject. Most of these older students enter campus life expecting ridicule, don't find any, and go on to prove themselves as outstanding students.

Lost Articles Moan 'Home Sweet Home'

The eyes have it. Or do they? Finals week may be the reason for some students' dim outlook on life, but a pair of glasses collecting dust in secretary Ruth Hoburg's office, C-303, may be the real reason for a student's uneasiness.

The lost-and-found offices, located in C-303, headquarters; A-201, S-149 and the finance office in Smith Hall, are constantly overflowing.

"Glasses, textbooks, umbrellas, gymnasium clothes, sweaters, gloves and lunches are the most frequent articles turned into the offices," Mrs. Hoburg said.

Students finding or seeking gone-but-not-forgotten articles can direct their inquiries to the secretaries in one of the lost-and-found locations.

"If students had their name, address, and telephone number clearly written on textbooks and personal articles, it would expedite their return," Mrs. Hoburg added.

Whatever Happened To Aviation 1A?

Lack Of Interest Cancels Pilot Training

By Tom Federoff

In the years that City College has been in existence, it has offered a great variety of training courses in many fields to help students prepare for professional or technical work.

One of the more interesting and probably the most exciting of these courses was a program of actual flight training sponsored by the Civil Aeronautics Authority which was added to the curriculum in August, 1939.

At that time, with world wide peace relations rather shaky, the idea was conceived as a part of the United States Government's extensive program of aerial preparedness.

In a concerted effort to bolster the national defense, basic flight training began in more than 300 colleges and universities throughout the country.

At City College the course was called Aviation 1A and was offered as a five unit course.

Besides the actual flight training, the program included study of navigation, meteorology and Civil Air regulations. Along with these, the other subjects covered were aerodynamics, airplanes and their engines and aircraft accessories and instruments.

Strangely enough, however, the Aviation 1A course was left wanting for lack of enough ambitious 'future birdmen' in the fall of 1940. In fact, the program was almost discontinued at that time because of a shortage of student pilot trainees.

But for the young and adventurous men who did enter the program, the thrill of actually being able to operate and control a deafeningly noisy, throbbing metal bird, was more than enough incentive to make them join.

In the first semester, the instruction consisted of three hours a week of level flight, gentle banks and turns, and S turns and figure eights. These aerial maneuvers were taught in 50 horsepower Piper Cubs, 65 HP Luscombes and sometimes in 125 HP Fleet airplanes.

As their proficiency improved, student pilots began to practice takeoffs and landings.

That the intensive training did not consist solely of clear and steady weathering soon became evident when cases of post-acrobatic nausea began to occur not infrequently.

These students, succumbing to the involuntarily topsy-turvy strains of Immelmans, barrel rolls, and vertical banks on their digestive systems, were often seen making dubious bee-lines for places of refuge upon landing.

No matter how upsetting, or possibly upsurging, these intricate maneuvers became, the serious 'future birdman' had to overlook these involuntary physical and mental reactions.

After successfully completing 35 hours flying time, and finishing the ground school training, the student received a private pilot's license, and became eligible for advanced training.

If the student had not by this time developed a resistance to the various forms of aerial seasickness, there wouldn't be much use in going on, because the second semester covered those dizzying upside down motions involved in all aerial acrobatics and maneuvers.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

IN THE secret language of the journalist, this column is going to be "30" for the semester. In the layman's jargon this means that these words are the end, finis, kaput and exeunt.

Of course there will be the cynical few who will say that the column was all of this before it even started, but the author reserves the right to disagree and ignore any such dissenters.

Fellow collegians, the name of the game is Hindsight and this is the method with which we are going to look back over the events of this semester now drawing to a close. It is our intention to tell everybody what we should have done now that we know what happened after we did it another way.

We will not attempt to take these events in chronological order but simply offer what we think are the solutions to problems that are now too late to solve.

This semester will probably become known in the history of our college as the Time Of The Changing Constitution.

We sat back in mild horror and even slight amusement all semester and watched the written laws the Associated Students revised, then the revision revised, and immediately after that, a committee chosen to study the revisions in the revised constitution.

What we should have done was chuck the thing out the window in the first place and completely ignore it. It would seem as though this is what some factions are doing now, but it is our honored opinion that their actions are a little too late.

This was also the semester that the nation's growing trends in conservatism and isolationism finally hit the college. Two campus affairs concerned with the international aspects of our life failed bitterly.

One of these was the Asian Book Drive. The person in charge of the drive was kind enough to say that the reason so few students donated books was because they probably did not have any left over from last semester.

Maybe. But the real reason was probably because the students were too involved in their own affairs to worry about somebody three thousand miles away.

Another "failure" was the International Relations Club Fair which didn't even clear its overhead. People were probably afraid to go to the fair because they might get exposed to something new.

What should have been done was maybe get the IRC and the needy Asians together and form some sort of society to help the Americans.

This was also the semester of the budget cuts in Student Council. We were told all budgets had to be cut because of excessive spending in the previous semester. We have no doubt this is true.

We also have no doubt that the council members themselves took the shortage of finances into consideration on their annual "retreat" held last summer. The trouble is we have no way of knowing because no report on this outing has been made public.

Ah well, let us not fret. The semester is over, and a new one is staring us in the face. Things may get better.

We do have a new set of student officers—even though their election was questioned and we had to call another election to see if there would have to be another election. Things may get better.

RA To Inaugurate New Coed Bowling League In Spring

By Pat Dutter

Plans are currently being made to initiate a coed bowling league next semester, Frances Galloway, Recreation Association adviser, announced last week.

Letters will be sent to the sponsors of all organizations on campus requesting the names of students interested in joining the new bowling league, Miss Galloway stated.

The games will be played at L & L Castle Lanes located at 1750 Geneva Avenue, on Mondays from 3 to 5 p.m.

Regular bowling rules will apply in the league, Miss Galloway explained, and trophies, donated by Castle Lanes, will be awarded to the winning team and individual high scorers.

"Students interested in joining the bowling league must have an Associated Student card," Miss Galloway emphasized.

The league will participate in competition on college Sport's Days against other Bay Area colleges and will elect a President, Vice-President and Secretary, the RA adviser said.

"Sign-up sheets," Miss Galloway declared, "will be posted in the women's gymnasium at the end of this semester, or in the beginning of the spring semester."

The two bowling classes this semester have "done quite well," and through their success and popularity, an additional class will be offered next semester, Miss Galloway added.

Advertising Art Gets $500 Commission

The California Seed Association donated a $500 commission last week to the college's department of advertising art and design for an 8 by 12 foot mural, William Davis, department chairman, announced today.

"We will have a contest, open to students in our department only. One will win a cash award for the winning design. The theme will be Seeds Of The World, and the students will 'dream up' their own ideas for the mural," Davis said. The mural will be made in sections on plyboard.

A portion of the commission will be used for the contest award, and the remainder will be added to the William J. Eekert scholarship fund which was established last June.

Group Demonstrates Artificial Respiration

A demonstration of the new mouth-to-mouth method of artificial respiration will be given by Don Kemper during College Hour tomorrow at the Bio-Med Society meeting in S-309.

Kemper has actually used this technique in emergency situations. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation is now being used exclusively by all emergency forces.

All faculty members and students are invited to attend.

The winning mural will be shown at the Seedgrowers International convention.

Police Adviser Talks To Council —Budget Passes

By Lowell Mengel

With their terms nearly over, and much work left to do, Student Council members last week held their first meeting under new Associated Student President Bob Roddick and passed several large budgets for next semester.

Included among council allocations was the much argued Campus Police budget.

Under old business, council began discussing the Campus Police budget. Sophomore member of council, Steve Christ then moved to allocate $2793.95 to the Police. Christ pointed out how his motion would cut only about 25 per cent from the budget, compared to a "harsh" 45 per cent proposed by Alan Williams at the previous week's meeting.

Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police adviser, then spoke to council, explaining that the policemen "do a lot" for the campus. He said they direct traffic, issue parking permits and patrol cars.

When Fitzgerald was through, council voted, 7-3-3 to accept Christ's new amount to be allocated, then voted, 9-3-1, on the motion itself.

At last Thursday's meeting, new Vice President Lynn Goodrich joined Roddick at the head table, and more last-minute budgets were passed. The Rally Committee was allocated a total of $113 for busses to two basketball games. The first $56.50 was awarded by a 10-2-1 vote, and the second $56.50 by an 11-0-2 vote.

Other action saw Christ move to rescind the passed drama budget and allocate $4000 to the department. The allocation passed by a 10-2-1 vote.

The varsity basketball team received $685.25, the junior varsity basketball team was given $247.50, and Roddick presented a budget of $448.60 for the Associated Men Students, of which Roddick just finished being president.

The first meeting for Roddick wasn't the smoothest operation, for council was going slow in the budget allocations and Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy asked them to "please get on with it."

President-elect of the Freshman Class, Terry Cloney, moved that council appoint Vince Contreras, Gary Ettin and Cloney himself as members of a committee to orientate new students in student government next semester. After some discussion, Roddick declared the motion out of order and protected some of his executive power.

The council meeting also saw graphic arts instructor William Svabek presented with his award for service to the AS this semester. The student award for service had been presented to Roger Kaufman earlier.

Former Student Thomas Secretary To Shelley

William G. Thomas, former editorial board member of The Guardsman, and more recently a reporter on the San Francisco Chronicle, left the newspaper field last week when he became confidential secretary to Mayor Jack Shelley.

In the spring of 1950, Thomas was staff editor for The Guardsman. He was also a regular columnist for the newspaper and spent a semester as Student Council reporter.

Thomas continued his education at the University of California at Berkeley and later joined the staff of the Chronicle.

Mayor Shelley appointed Thomas to the new position shortly before he was officially installed into office last Wednesday morning.

Famed Musicians Play In Theater Tomorrow

Die Wiener Solisten, the Viennese Chamber Orchestra from Austria, is scheduled to perform here free of charge during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Meyer M. Cahn, band and orchestra instructor, announced last week.

A substantial portion of the Artist Series' budget has been spent to bring these young Viennese artists to the college.

The group played at the University of California at Berkeley last week and performed an all-Mozart program. A charge of $2.50 for tickets was made; here, however, admission will be free of charge.

Their specialty is the music of Viennese composers. The group is currently on a tour of the United States.

Talent Rally Jan. 25 Precedes Annual Chinese Students' Club Sweetheart Ball February 29

Preceding the annual Chinese Students' Club Sweetheart Ball, to be held Saturday, February 29, in the Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, a rally will take place Saturday, January 25 at Victory Hall, 827 Stockton street, Club President Jenny Tom stated today.

Presentation of the seven queen candidates will highlight the rally. Those running for this title include Liberty Chang, Gloria Jean Dumpit, Nancy Lum, Jeannie Lee, Marilyn Kirk Lee and Joan Yee.

The queen will be chosen between January 25 and February 29, partly by the number of tickets she sells for the dance, a popularity vote at the ball, and partly by talent demonstrated at the rally, with judges active in evaluation.

Admission to the rally itself is $1 with dress semi-formal.

The main event, the Sweetheart Ball, will be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. February 29. Dress will be semi-formal, and Jimmy Blass' 12-piece orchestra will provide the music. Tickets at $3.75 per coupie are available from queen contestants and club members.

They will also be sold at the silver pole in Science Hall.

The coed selected queen will receive a $100 check and an engraved trophy while her princesses, or runnersup in the contest, will receive trophies and a $25 check each.

Purpose of the ball, according to Miss Tom, is to raise money to provide scholarships for deserving and outstanding students at the college.

Miss Tom emphasized that all students are invited to attend both the January 25 presentation rally and the February 29 ball at the Sheraton-Palace.

Faculty Beats Students, 21-20; Divine Ones Rip H&R, 62-31, For Title

By Pete Franklin

Two boxing draws and a surprise faculty win in the student-faculty basketball game marked the semiannual Associated Men Student Sportnight held last Wednesday in the men's gymnasium.

In the opening event of the evening, the AMS intramural basketball tournament title playoff was won by the Divine Ones of the independent division who romped over club division champs Hotel and Restaurant, 62-31.

H&R had reached the playoff with a perfect record, 5-0 in their division, and 6-0 after the semifinals in which they downed fraternity division victors Zeta Phi Sigma.

The Divine Ones, favored in the contest, proved in the first five minutes that they were a stronger team, jumping to a half-time lead, 26-13. Team Captain Warton Brown led the attack with 22 points; Eli Horn hit 14. Mark White was good for 15 H&R points.

In the boxing event, there were several surprises. Out of six bouts, there were two draws, the first Sportnight draws in three semesters, according to AMS President Bob Roddick.

"The draws were an unforseen development," Roddick said, "as we had only six trophies and six medals, one for the winner and loser of each bout. The matter will be settled later."

In the 130-pound division, Barry Silverman beat Henry Dawson, and Tuese Ahkiong defeated Al Rivas. Paul Moniot won out over Artie Howard in a close one for the 150's, and in the 160 division, Tom Panetto downed George Dotson.

Involved in the draws, the two toughest bouts of the evening, were Tom Fox vs. George Scott, weighing in at 140, and Paul Fatooh against Henry Wesch, both 155ers. The individual bout trophies and medals were presented following each fight.

Following the boxing event, Roddick and next semester's AMS President Roger Kaufman, presented trophies to the Divine Ones, team intramural champs; Tom London, Joe Dalpogetti and Delmar Leroy Bennett, high point men in each intramural division, and individual medals to each player on each divisional champion team, Divine Ones, Zeta Phi Sigma and H&R.

London hit an average of 15 points per game, Dalpogetti averaged 12 per and Bennett 19.5 per.

In the feature action of the night, the faculty team, composed of Lew Mottley, Gerry Mullin, Larry Lawson, Terry Kilpatrick, Ernie Domecus and Bill Fisher, pulled a 21-20 surprise upset over Zeta Phi Sigma.

The faculty trailed, 20-19, with 11 seconds in the game, when Kilpatrick hit from 20 feet out. Kilpatrick paced the faculty with 8 points. He hit 80 per cent of his shots, only one of which was from closer than 20 feet.

In his only lay-up attempt, he was down court and clear. "Mottley," he yelled, "pass the ball!" Mottley did, Kilpatrick missed.

Phelan's Five Ends Practice Season With 13-1 Record

If the preseason is any indication of the future of the Ram cagers, things should look pretty good as Phelan's Five posted a respectable 13 win-1 loss record and a third-place finish in the Annual Modesto Classic.

Emerging into the limelight during the preseason were center Jerry Chandler, forwards Henry King and guards Rich Henderson and Brandon Chappell.

Added to this were the already developed talents of Ken Scalmanini, Mac Smith and Art Adams.

Altogether, the Rams pose a league threat, and as Coach Sid Phelan has stated, "We should be picked for one of those top four spots."

On Friday, January 3, the Rams closed out their preseason games with a 55-52 win over Sacramento at the capital.

Adams and Mac Smith carried the Rams in this one as Chandler was unable to make the trip.

Springing high into the air to rifle his jumpers downward, Adams accounted for 10 of the Rams' first 12 points and a 12-9 bulge with 8:26 remaining in the half.

Halftime found the Bay City Boys on top of a 24-21 score and Adams with 13 points.

Flashy forward Mac Smith joined Adams in the second half as he tanked six floaters in a row to maintain the Ram lead at 39-33. Adams came on from here to hit two jumpers and then score the final six points for the win.

Adams ended the evening with 25 points and Smith with his season high of 17. The two combined for 27 of the 31 Ram points scored in the final half.

The day before, the Rams downed Hamilton Air Force Base, 69-42, as Chandler, Youngblood and Jimmy Smith played their alumnus. All three were members of the World Air Force team from Hamilton prior to their entrance here.

Chandler lead his new teammates as he totaled 22 points followed by Adams with 14.

The preseason brought the cagers up to another season of ifs.

Wrestling, Anyone?

By John Arberry

"Wrestling is 70 per cent skill and 30 per cent strength," states Frank Pratt, who is instrumental in forming the college's first competitive wrestling team.

Pratt, an 18-year-old freshman here and a graduate of San Francisco's Washington High School, has four years of high school wrestling experience behind him and helped form teams at Glendale High School in Los Angeles and at Washington.

"At present we have about 20 wrestlers out for the sport here at the college and seven of these have at least three years experience," Pratt said. The team wrestles daily in the men's gymnasium from 1:15 to 4 p.m.

A wrestling match consists of three rounds, three minutes each. A winner is decided either by a point system or if one wrestler is pinned. As to how vigorous the sport is, Pratt stated that "a wrestler, in a nine-minute match uses twice as much energy as a football player playing two consecutive 60-minute football games."

As to his preparation for an important match, Pratt, who competes in the 165-pound class, divulged, "I like to get a psychological advantage over my opponent before a match, so I shave my head and use unorthodox methods in order to ruffle him.

"About an hour before a match I use self-hypnosis which aids me in making my opponent appear as a goliath while he is actually only my size." Pratt added, "this keeps me from going into a match overconfident and from underestimating him."

Although the Ram wrestling team will not be eligible for Golden Gate Conference competition this year the team will have a practice match against San Mateo next month. "We plan to have some wrestlers from the Olympic Club help prepare us for the San Mateo meet," Pratt commented.

Under team adviser Dutch Elston, the Ram wrestling team will be eligible for conference competition in Fall, 1964. Pratt, who also helps coach the Ram team, plans to attend Stanford University next fall.

Anyone interested in joining the Ram wrestling team can reach Dutch Elston in the men's gymnasium or Pratt at BAyview 1-5064 in the evenings.

Rams 2-0, Tied For Lead

Front Line Leads Cagers Past Foothill And Diablo Valley

By Fred Wales

With their forward line all hitting 20 points or more, the Ram cagers posted their second straight victory in as many starts with an 88-64 romp over Foothill last Friday at Los Altos Hills.

The win kept the Rams in first place with San Jose and San Mateo as all three teams boast 2-0 marks in the young Golden Gate Conference season's first two outings.

Both teams started slow playing controlled basketball. Ken Scalmanini started the Rams off with a jumper from the top of the key. Foothill countered then Jerry Chandler potted two more points before Rich Henderson fed Henry King on a fast pass and layup for a 6-2 bulge.

The lead jumped to 14-7, before Foothill started coming back. Losing on the boards, the Owls pulled up to 14-11 before Adams' two jumpers made it 18-11.

With 6:26 remaining in the first half Bill Neall sparked the Owls to a 18-16 score, the closest of the long night.

From here Foothill never saw day light as King blasted two followed by Adams then Chandler for a 22-16 pullaway.

Adams kept it up as did Chandler and King, who began looking like a guard with his fast breaking lay-ups, until halftime found the bewildered Owls on the wrong end of a 35-19 score.

Adams lead the first half scoring with 14 points followed by King and Chandler with 9.

With the start of the second period ball control went out the window as Foothill would break down the court and take a shot in a desperate attempt to get back in the ball game.

The reverse happened as behind King the Rams pulled way out in front at 50-29.

Foothill closed to 55-39 only to have Adams lead a barrage to 65-39. From here Chandler contributed 10 points and as the reserves entered the game the score stood at 79-55 with 6:14 remaining.

The second team of Sam Smith, Dennis Sweeney, Rich McRitchie, and Charles Luke held for a 88-64 win as the Rams lengthened their overall season record to 15-1.

The Rams opened the 1964 Golden Gate Conference season with a 62-40 win over Diablo Valley here last Tuesday.

Rated as heavy favorites, the Rams had their hands full with the Vikings until the final period.

Jumping out in front, 7-2, on three of Adams' tankers and a free throw by Chandler, the Rams were caught and tied at 14-14 with 7:27 left in the first half.

Adams then hit a jumper from the top of the key for a 16-14 lead, but the Vikings' Bill Hood countered, and it was again deadlocked at 16-16.

From here Chandler hit twice and Kling sank a charity and Henderson a pair of them and the Rams were up, 23-17.

The Vikings closed to 25-23 at halftime, but this was as close as the Diablo team was destined to come.

Five minutes into the second half, the Rams had leaped to a 32-24 spread and held the eight point lead until the 7:45 was remaining in the contest.

From this point on it was all Rams.

Working on a 39-31 lead, Chandler hit a field goal and a free throw, which was followed by Mac Smith's jumper.

With six minutes remaining, Chandler fouled out with a 43-31 Ram lead.

The two teams matched baskets from here on with the Rams getting the better shots. Rich McRitchie tipped in points 61 and 62 as the buzzer sounded.

RAM FORWARD Art Adams displays his jumping ability with this dunk shot during a practice session. Adams is the leading scorer for the team to date.

T-Birds Collide With Hoopsters In Tilt Friday

Oakland City College hoopsters will attempt to avenge last year's post season loss to San Francisco, which resulted in a state tournament bid for the Rams. The talented Thunderbirds clash with the locals at 8 p.m. Friday here.

The Oakland cagers are expected to be strong contenders in this season's conference race. Oakland has a number of veterans who should aid the Oakland squad, since last year's Oakland team posted an 11-3 conference record. Needless to say, the returning men will have the advantage of a hearty taste of experience.

Among the returning Thunderbirds are Jim Brown and Glenn Beamon. Brown is a 6-4 center who can hit and Beamon a 6-2 forward with experience. Both men played for powerful McClymonds of Oakland when in high school. In addition to these veterans, guard T. C. Williams from Fort Wayne, Indiana will return.

Oakland has fared well in preseason games and is expected to do so in conference play. "Oakland will be a strong and powerful contender in the Golden Gate Conference and could only be rated second to powerful San Jose and College of San Mateo," Ram coach Sid Phelan stated.

Coach Bill Rockwell of the Thunderbirds believes his cagers are contenders. "We will do well if we steady down," he declared recently.

Leading the Oakland newcomers is Jim Tolliver, a high scoring forward from McClymonds High. Tolliver stands only 5-11, but proved himself to be a powerhouse while in high school.

Jerry Robinson, also from McClymonds, and a 5-11 guard, is also expected to aid the Oakland cause. Forward Charles Hawkins, 6-3, and ex-Berkeley High star Walt Norman, 5-11 guard, are expected to strengthen Rockwell's squad.

RA Gives Honors To 41 Members At Semiannual Dinner

Awards were presented to 41 Recreation Association members at their semiannual dinner last Thursday in the activity room of the women's gymnasium.

The men's fencing team received shields and stars. Recipients of the awards were Vince Halagueña, Carlos Ciudad Real, Wayne Spencer, Charles Miller and Harry Jorgensen.

Ruth Archer, Donna Fetesoff and Jacquelyn Paull were awarded shields as members of the women's fencing team.

Social dance awards were given to Keyes Kelly, James Rosner and Ted Spencer. Modern dance awards were presented to Patricia Boddie and Theodorina Resella. Helen Bishop, Louise Burfiet, and Betty Richardson received archery awards.

Orlando da Costa and Beverly Galten were awarded stars, Michael Fiorentino, a block, and Pamela Bertrand a shield award in the folk dancing category.

Badminton shields were awarded to Mary Catannia, Benjamin Chin, Louis Chung, Diane Culver, Christine Drogitis, Charles Fisher, David Gore. Block awards were given to Joyce Fleming and Joe Marin and star awards to Joyce Holeman and Carol Wong.

Patricia Connela and Rosemary Donaldson were awarded chevrons while Joyce Coleman, Donna Lieces, Donald Peterson, Fran Richardson, Virginia Rush and Richard Serabian were awarded stars in volleyball. Guy Oei was awarded a shield.

Anyone interested in coming out for the tennis team can reach coach Diederichsen in the men's gymnasium.

SWIMMING

Attempting to equal their third place Golden Gate Conference finish last year, the Ram mermen will be more numerous this year but not nearly so well rounded.

Although high in freestylers and butterflyers, the team will have a tough time replacing breaststroker Herm Fruchtenicht and again this year will be looking for a backstroker.

Any person interested in trying out for the team is invited to a special meeting during College Hour tomorrow in A-301.

GOLF

With coach Grover Klemmer expecting three veterans, Mike Selsnik, Dave Egan and Rich Orme, to return the Ram golf team hopes to better last season's 3-4 Golden Gate Conference record.

A special golf meeting will be held in the men's gymnasium during college hour tomorrow.

Spring Sports Meetings, Signups, Underway

BASEBALL

The Ram baseball team, which held initial sign-ups at a meeting last Thursday, will begin tryouts on the first day of registration for the Spring, 1964 semester, February 3, Ernie Domecus, team coach, announced.

Those interested in signing up for the team, but who missed the first meeting, can still sign up with Domecus in the men's gymnasium this week.

"It is as yet uncertain how many members of last year's squad will return," Domecus said, "and I won't know for sure until tryouts."

TRACK

With several returning veterans backed up by an array of talented freshmen newcomers, the Ram track team will be out to improve on last season's fourth place finish in the Golden Gate Conference.

Topping the returning veterans will be Gene Plotkin, an ex-Balboa spiker, who placed in the state meet mile last year, and has best times of 4:21 for the mile and 9:38 for the two mile.

Also returning is Ozzie Norris, ex-Galileo runner, who has an 880 best of 1:57. Top freshmen expected to be out for the team are Chris Ferrigno, from Saint Ignatius, a 50-flat 440 man; Rich Klemmer, from Lincoln, a 1:58 half miler and Oliver Mitchell, the Athletic Academic Association hurdles champion.

All students interested in track can sign up with track coach Lou Vasquez in the men's gymnasium.

TENNIS

With three veterans back from last season's state championship tennis team, coach Roy Diederichsen hopes for another winning year.

Expected to return are Bob Murio, last year's number two man, Vince Chin, number one man four years ago and Steve Jones, number seven man last year.

Freshmen expected to bolster the team are Al Breambilla, Fred Suessman, from Lincoln, an Academic Athletic Association finalist; Mike Price from Lowell, and Louis Englestein, number three man from Lowell.

Retail Floristry Department Moves Into Sprawling New Floral Center

ROBERT STAMER AND JOHN HAMPTON go over a floral arrangement set up in the retail floristry department's section of the new horticulutre center. Construction on the sprawling complex has not been completed as yet but is far enough along to allow floristry operations. Upon completion, the horticulture center will hold open house for all instructors and students April 8. —Guardsman photo by Ron Eckelhoff.

Horticulture Construction Nears Completion

Retail floristry department classes moved into the new horticulture center this month as construction of the sprawling, ranch-type structure neared completion.

Greenhouses adjacent are expected to be ready for use soon.

There are two new sections in the retail floristry half of the building; one section contains the flower shop with display counters, sales counters, a display window and conference tables for students in classes.

In these classes students practice retail flower selling in the walk-in counter where all the assorted flowers are on display.

Students also participate in college activities such as decorating for dances and supplying corsages.

The other section of the building contains the "laboratory," or the workshop where all the flower arrangements are made. In the laboratory, there are 15 design tables which contain wire and ribbons used in floral design.

There is a walk-in refrigerator where flowers can be kept fresh until needed. There is also a library for trade books and papers used for reference, advertising and information.

In all classrooms are large sinks designed solely for use in floristry work. They are built to eliminate the need for stooping when lifting vases out of the sink area which is filled with flowers and water.

In the rear of the building there is a large room which is used for storage, and mechanical aids are kept there such as display materials, lattices, wire frames, vases and soil bins. Near this room there are many other conveniences such as offices for the instructors and showers for student use.

"Much of the financial aid and advice given to the students comes from members of the floral industry," Maryhope Jacks, retail floristry instructor, declared. "Each year the florists in San Francisco provide 22 of their shop windows for the use of our students."

These students decorate the shop windows which gives them practical working experience. Another activity that floral students enter is the design shows at the flower market. They also do designs for the Villa Motel and other establishments.

Last semester five scholarships were awarded by floral organizations to students, plus a slide projector, tape recorder and cash.

Each year trophies are awarded to top students—a perpetual trophy and a first and second prize trophy. These trophies are housed in the large trophy case in the horticulture center where they are on display.

First guests to visit the facilities formally will be leaders in the floral industry, probably on April 7, Mrs. Jacks said. An open house for faculty and students every one is welcome," Devlin said.

C-Hour Lecture On Glamour To Be First Of AWS Series

Signup forms for the Best-Dressed Coed Contest will be available during College Hour tomorrow in S-204 when three women begin the first of a series of Associated Women Student lectures by speaking on How To Be Glamorous, Wardene Oliver, AWS president, announced last week.

Speakers will be business instructors Anka Ohman and Elizabeth Helseth and student Barbara Burrus, a runner-up in the Miss Fresno contest.

Later lectures will include topics of interest to coeds.

The best-dressed coed will be chosen from 12 women to model at the AWS fashion show-tea on April 9, Miss Oliver said.

To qualify as a model, a coed must be no smaller than a size 8 and no larger than a size 11. Signup forms may be picked up also in S-150.

The first tryouts will be held during College Hour Thursday, March 5, in bungalow 6. During this time the number of applicants will be reduced to 20. At the second tryouts, to be held March 12, the number will be reduced to 12.

Judges for the first tryouts will be faculty and AWS board members.

Pennsylvania First Of New Film Series

Pennsylvania, a 30-minute color film to be shown tomorrow in S-136, opens this semester's series of motion pictures, Madison W. Devlin, of the audio visual aids department, announced yesterday.

The film, which shows the area known today as a cradle of American liberty, bulwark of industrial strength and land of Valley Forge and Gettysburg, will also include the scenic wonders and memorable tours of Pittsburgh's steel mills.

Among the films to be shown at a later date are Rhoades Scholar, High Rent to Yosemite, Legend of the Raven, Jazz of Brubeck, and Turn of the Century. Names of the six remaining films will be announced at the end of this week, Devlin said.

"The film series is open to faculty and students every one is welcome," Devlin said.

Sorority Rushing Starts March 2

Interested coeds may register for rushing at S-150 between March 2 and 6, Theta Tau President Norene Segerquist and Phi Beta Rho President Beryl Knoller announced last week.

To qualify for membership in a sorority, a coed must maintain a C average for a minimum of 12 units.

A tea will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 8, at the Women's City Club, 465 Post Street, to acquaint rushees with sorority activities and regulations.

Also scheduled is a coffee preference hour to be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on March 31. By attending this session, coeds indicate their interest in joining a sorority.

Pledging is scheduled on April 6, 8, and 10.

Enrollment Breaks All-Time Spring Mark

A new spring semester enrollment record, which eclipses the previous high established last spring and is just 250 short of the all-time college record reached last fall, has been recorded here this semester by Registrar Mary Jane Learnard.

In addition to the total spring enrollment posting of a new record, the number of students enrolled in evening classes has broken a previous high mark, also established last fall.

A total of 8765 students is attending classes here this semester. This surpasses last spring's high of 8157 and comes close to last fall's record enrollment of 9015.

Of the 8765, students enrolled in day classes number 6865 and those in evening classes number 1900. Last spring, 6625 attended day classes.

The previous high in evening enrollment, reached last fall, was 1750. Before that time, the fall semester of 1961 held the record with 1657 students attending night classes.

Miss Learnard added that the ratio of men to women remains about the same with two men to every coed. In actual figures this would mean that there are approximately 5842 men here as compared with 2921 women.

Prior to the fall of 1961, men outnumbered women by almost three to one. Miss Learnard cited the development of technical programs here, such as nurses training and medical and dental assisting as reasons for the recent change.

Reacting to the record spring enrollment, Miss Learnard stated that the registrar's office was cognizant of the fact "because of all the work that has been necessary in processing each enrollee."

Student Bank Hit

The college's finance office, located near the fountain section of Smith Hall, was victimized by robbers to the amount of approximately $2000 sometime between 11 p.m. February 13 and 7 a.m. February 14.

According to official Campus Police records, Carl Anderson of the finance office made the discovery when he came to work on St. Valentine's Day. Campus Police Chief Bob Sola was notified of the robbery later that morning.

Entrance to the office was made by a key, according to the report on file in the criminology department. The safe, situated on one side of the small room near the window, was apparently opened by the use of a crow-bar and transported to the nearby men's room.

There, the culprits emptied the contents of the safe. The report stated that the "take" was somewhere between $1500 and $2000.

All was in United States currency and was apparently revenue from the sale of Associated Student cards on campus, since the finance office is the keeper of such funds until formally banked.

The San Francisco burglary detail was called in to check the location and search for possible clues. After investigation, the Campus Police report showed no "useable prints" could be found.

As of late last week, the case was still marked 'suspended,' meaning that no arrest had been made and no suspects were in custody.

Zeta Phi, Phi Beta Delta Win Men's Night Awards

Scholarship and service awards were presented at the Associated Men Student - Inter-Fraternity Council sponsored Men's Night, February 18 in Smith Hall.

The scholarship trophy, awarded each semester to the fraternity having the highest over-all grade point average, was won by Zeta Phi Sigma—a 2.15 over-all average. Second place award went to Beta Tau for having a 2.12 average. Alpha Kappa Rho won third place with a 2.057 average.

For restoring the Ram after its many defacings last semester, for donating blood to one of the students, and for having a Christmas party for crippled children, Phi Beta Delta was awarded the first place service trophy. Second place award was presented to Beta Tau, and Alpha Kappa Rho received the third place trophy.

May 7 and 8 were chosen as dates for the IFC-sponsored blood drive.

"All students are invited to donate one pint of blood," Bruce Thomas, newly elected president of IFC said, "and those who do will have automatically opened an unlimited account for one year with the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank for use themselves or for any other member of their immediate family. Donors may also give from their account as much as eight pints to whoever needs it, related or not."

Trophies will be awarded to the campus clubs or organizations making the largest donation. Donors are not allowed to give more than one pint of blood.

After each of the six fraternity presidents gave a short invitational speech, rushing began; it will continue until March 15. Those who were unable to attend Men's Night and are considering joining a fraternity may register for application at the silver pole on the main floor of Science Hall.

Phi Beta Delta Rally Kicks Off Dimes Drive

Phi Beta Delta has scheduled two folksinging groups, the San Francisco Town Criers and The Turtles, for its March of Dimes kickoff rally during College Hour tomorrow, Duane Underwood, fraternity president, announced today.

Masking tape will be sold to interested organizations and students at a dollar per foot in an effort to raise a mile of dimes. The tape will be laid down from the book store and extend up the path leading to Cloud Hall and Science Hall. Students will be able to lay their money right on the tape.

Last year the fraternity collected $330.35 or an equivalent of 405 feet if the 3303½ dimes were laid side by side.

The money will be turned over to the national foundation to finance research projects in the fields of birth defects and arthritis.

The college's first Dean's Honor List was compiled in Fall, 1962. Surpassing by eight the number of qualifying students in the first list, the current one falls short of the 19 students who earned a 4.0 average in 1962.

Last semester 60 made the list, with seven earning straight A.

AS Membership Benefits All; Who Wants To Be A Parasite?

THE SEMESTER is now almost a month old, and once again students and instructors are finding themselves back in that situation which is commonly referred to as the "old grind." But the semester is still young by most standards, and already there is trouble in the air.

Phyllis Webb, Associated Student card sales chairman, has reported that sales are behind schedule. It is becoming apparent that quite a number of students on this campus do not feel that the AS card is worth shelling out five dollars.

These students have a perfect right to feel this way. The purchase of an AS card is not mandatory, nor should it be.

But these same students who do not buy an AS card must be classified as parasites. The student who only attends classes and does nothing else on campus still receives some sort of benefit from the activities of the Associated Students. As with a parasite, he is receiving something at the expense of somebody else. The only trouble with too many parasites is that they weaken and sometimes kill the parent body, in this case, the Associated Students.

And so now the question that comes to mind is, who needs the Associated Students and their governing body, Student Council? Granted, we are certain the college could function reasonably well without the presence of this organization. Night schools all over the country, for example, are doing it every day.

But take a good look at night schools. They are completely devoid of any sort of personality whatsoever—the reason being that there are no extracurricular activities available to the students. In the type of society we have today, these activities "make" the college, and at this college, student government is probably responsible, either directly or indirectly, for 90 per cent of all extracurricular functions.

A mature student government makes for a mature college, but a lax and irresponsible student government makes for a bomb in the American educational system. Far too many times members of student organizations fail to remember the responsibilities they have to their college.

There is not enough space here to list all of the benefits that can be derived from being a member of the Associated Students, and most students are, or should be, aware of at least the most obvious ones. By buying an AS card, a student automatically becomes a member.

The Associated Students need the sales of these cards as one of their main sources of revenue. When a student buys a card, he puts himself under no obligation whatsoever. He does not HAVE to get the permit, to which he is entitled, to park his car in areas close to or a part of the campus, nor is he required to join or participate in anything classified as extracurricular.

Of course, Student Council urges that members of the Associated Students do participate, and college President Louis G. Conlan stated in an interview last year that while students should concentrate the majority of their efforts on academic studies, they should not discount the importance of extracurricular activities.

The decision of being or not being a member of the Associated Students is up to the individual, and The Guardsman urges all students to join. Who wants to be a parasite?

Slimnastics Program Trims, Slims Coeds

By Paul Girerd

Tired coeds who are gaining nothing but sore muscles from lifting weights, running track and jumping rope, may be interested in Slimnastics, a newer physical education course here.

The course has a somewhat different approach to the physical education program here, because it concentrates mainly on figure control. Posture, walking, rhythm, physical fitness and well-being are taught and improved by special exercises.

These exercises, which coordinate all the muscles in the body, are accompanied by piano and records. Ropes are used for exercising and stretching. Long wooden poles, wands, are used to stretch the body and help coeds enrolled to concentrate on rhythm.

The course is offered twice a week in the activity room in the women's gymnasium. There is limited enrollment, allowing the instructors, Phyllis Vasquez and Melia Furgis, to concentrate more on the individual problems encountered.

Women who are enrolled in this course are measured and photographed at the beginning and at the end of the semester to enable them to see improvement in posture and figure.

Coeds are encouraged to exercise not only in class but also at home. Mimeographed forms are distributed which list the exercises and figure control movements that are taught in the class. Diets and calorie lists are also offered.

"Many women seem to be interested in just remaining trim, while others are trying to lose a few pounds," Miss Furgis said.

This program has been offered for three semesters since it was started by Miss Furgis, the instructor presently directing the program. There has been good acceptance of the course, but because available facilities are limited the classes are kept small.

"The women have been doing well with their measurements and weight," Miss Furgis said, "and their measurements have shown marked improvement."

The slimnastics have less to do with physical fitness programs as such. Physical fitness is concerned mainly with developing stamina and endurance. There, coeds run, jump, throw balls and generally do heavy exercising.

In slimnastics, they stretch to music and use specialized equipment designed to improve faults in posture.

"A woman's appearance is very important," Miss Furgis said; "she looks much better if she can walk straight and carry herself with confidence.

Success Story

Former Student Defines Philosophy Of Architecture As Complexity Conquered

By Bea Takeuchi

Success, as measured in terms of dollars and cents, is not important to Roger Malek, architect, American Institute of Architecture. His measure of success is effectiveness.

"I've done without much money long enough, so it is no real problem. Modesty is my motto, and I don't like exaggeration or notoriety," Malek declared in an interview last week.

In 1954 Malek studied here as a student of architecture with Instructor W. Merle Weidman. "It was a happy and fortunate discovery to find Mr. Weidman. He is alive to the goals of each individual student. He opens the sensitivity of many people. This is fundamental in architecture," Malek said.

After graduation from University of California, Berkeley, where Malek transferred after completing his courses at City College, he was employed by local architectural firms and worked in San Jose and Fresno. He is now self-employed at 1275 Jackson street, and serves as a design and supervising consultant on private projects.

An example of his work is in a balcony of a Mill Valley home wherein he designed "nooks and crannies" for the children to play hide-and-seek. The home is situated on a steep hill with a grove of redwood trees. It is rectangular, with emphasis on vertical proportions.

He advises all aspiring architecture students to continue their education at a four-year college. "What seems important to a student while a student becomes incidental when he is actually working in this field.

"Take all the UC parallels possible. Later on, students will find decisions so complicated that they will need this academic learning. They must learn to discipline themselves.

"I am constantly thinking of spatial problems. Sometimes I come to decisions while driving, or eating. There are so many complicated problems," Malek explained.

"We cannot look at the world through rose-colored glasses. Today's architect cannot disregard new intellectual goals, computers, city planning operations and research.

"He must constantly be aware of what goes on. To be hostile and to remain ignorant is asking for trouble," he added.

Iowa-born Malek is a Zen Buddhist. His interest in Buddhism began in China, where he spent three years with the US Navy. His devotion to this religion is reflected in his philosophy.

When asked about his definition of simplicity, he replied, "A lot of simplicity today is just plain simple-mindedness. The many vernacular apartment buildings that are supposed to be simple are just vulgar.

"There is no expression, no dignity. Buildings should be cosmos as well as micro-cosmos. The only kind of simplicity I like has conquered complexity."

Malek is married, and the father of two children. He claims, however, "A real artist should not have any personal life!"

CHILDREN PLAY hide and seek around this Mill Valley balcony.

Shaggy Quartet Bombs In Survey

The boisterous, bustling Beatles from Liverpool, England, have taken over some of the younger set in the United States overnight. A survey, made here last week, interprets the City College attitude concerning this new, shaggy group.

Question: "What do you think of the Beatles?"

Tyrone Scott, sophomore: "The Beatles question one's capacity for appreciation of music."

Bob Vernon, freshman: "Should be sprayed with D.D.T."

Orvy Jundis, sophomore: "They're strictly for the immature set."

Emory Douglas, freshman: "I think they are four confused young men."

Carolyn Sparks, sophomore: "I want a Beatle-Bob!"

Bernard Piper, sophomore: "I'm anti-Beatle."

Homero Scott, sophomore: "People can't believe it."

Nard Guila, sophomore: "I think they're swingin'."

Franklin Gadson: "No showmanship."

Avant Guardsman!

By Michel Janicot

THERE is always ONE in every crowd who incredulously asks . . . "Is he really French?"

To such an enervating person, there is only one answer: "No!" leaving that person curt and killing his curiosity. Otherwise, the writer has to go through his whole background once more:

Chapter One: The Infant Years . . .

Of course, everybody has formed in his mind the image of the stereotyped Frenchman—short, rotund, sporting a beret, and a menu list something like this: frog legs, snails, croissants and wine (red). In addition, he has short, plump hands and laughs continuously. Except De Gaulle, naturally.

A confidential survey, taken on campus two weeks ago, reflects the image American students have of the average Frenchman. The responses are fantastic and yet believable—if you're American, that is!

For instance, Nancy (a former Lowell coed) sincerely believes that ALL Frenchmen eat bouillabaisse three times a day, while Gretchen Marina (a German import) has a different version. "The Frenchman is a short, stocky, brown-haired man who cheats his wife constantly and she, naturally, divorces him as many times as necessary."

Jerry, a golden blonde from San Leandro, offers her own edition of the Frenchman. "With all the time he wastes sleeping, eating, talking politics and walking around the Champs Elysees, the Frenchman has absolutely no time to work. And so, it is greatly surprising when France comes out with a new airplane or a new car!"

Only one other miss, a petite Chinese with a porcelain-like complexion, thinks the Frenchman is a tall, blue-eyed man who is also nasty and dirty. "Dirty?" we pondered, "You mean his clothes? or needing a shave?" (Giggling) "No. Just dirty." This statement also seemed to correspond with Jerry's, the San Leandro miss, who added that "at school-age, French girls have adventures with French boys."

The same Jerry also thinks that one can easily recognize the Frenchman because of his polka-dot ties, pin-striped shirts and his beret! (This is when one might speculate and wonder why French men marry, and why French women, so elegantly dressed by Dior or Chanel, can put up with their husbands!)

There were, however, a few things with which every woman seemed to agree. One was that the Frenchman eats ANYTHING, but particularly frog legs and snails. "He never drinks a glass of water, eats late in the evening and sometimes doesn't finish eating until after midnight," Katryn assured us.

The other was that the Frenchman, even though he is lazy, dirty, nasty and alcoholic, is also romantic and irresistible. He does what he wants—when he wants—and that is why he is never home. He is internationally known to be the best lover in the world, speaks with a Charles Boyer accent and sings like Maurice Chevalier.

Finally, when a Frenchman pronounces the magic word, "France," he immediately thinks of Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité, Vive de Gaulle, and Yankee Go Home!

When a foreigner pronounces the same word (France), there is, however, a different reaction. For Nancy, Marina, Jerry, and the Chinese cutie, it spells romance, love, a loaf of bread, a walk by the Seine with a lover, a cup of expresso at a Left Bank coffee shop where Bill Jones, John Doe, Joe Smith and Mary Clark are studying at the Sorbonne. . . .

A Twisting Affair

Trampoliners Are Fearless And Flexible

Crowds of amused and/or admiring men students frequently gather around 201 in the men's gymnasium, peeking through the small windows and key holes to get a glimpse of the trampoline jumpers turning and twisting in the air.

Probably the spectators would not be so amused, if they knew that they themselves, with average ability, could learn to do back and front somersaults in just six months.

"Often students are frightened of trampoline at first, fearing that they can not 'make it,' but once they start jumping, they lose their fear and can jump enthusiastically," Alex Schwarz, physical education instructor here, said last week.

There are about 75 men and 20 coeds in three trampoline classes, but Schwarz hopes to see trampoline become a regular part of physical education.

"I believe that it is an excellent physical conditioning which has a very good carry-over value in life, because a person learns how to fall without injuring himself, control his weight and body in the upward position and acquires a very important balancing skill," Schwarz emphasized.

Schwarz also believes that trampoline is an aid to those who wish to learn diving. As a matter of fact, a former trampoline student, David Ichieng, upon graduation from City College, became a diving champion at Ohio State University.

According to Schwarz, trampoline is not only interesting and exciting, "but there is risk involved if students become careless. However," he explained, "we have had only one accident, a broken jaw, in the past ten years."

Schwarz insists that anyone can learn trampoline, although, he declared, small-framed persons can learn more easily than taller and heavier ones.

Outstanding trampoline students here now are Pat Browning, Everett Krik, Robert Uribe and Jack Stone, who will perform at basketball game intermissions this semester.

FINAL EXAMS of last month may be a thing of the past, but the final grades are everpresent. No use crying over them. What's done is done.

The fall semester is now a memory, whether it be good, bad or indifferent, and the spring semester is in full swing.

Way back when, in the still of the night, on the eve of that certain cloudy day of Wednesday, January 1, that gone-but-not-forgotten New Year's resolution was made to study, study, study. It's not too late to renew that resolution and keep that clean slate for the spring semester clean clear through.

However, it is only fair to warn the men of these hallowed halls, that while they intend to leap into the new semester with vim and vigor, their female constituents are planning to do likewise.

So, what's the problem?

This is the year of 1964, and this year unlike last, has 366 days.

So what?

Well, it has been said by many a wise man (and many a foolish one too) that this year has proved to be a bonanza for all the young ladies because. . . .

This is Leap Year!

So?

This will be the year when some gals will renounce their allegiance to spinsterhood and announce their allegiance to some innocent young man.

Then?

According to tradition, this is the year when the young lady may assert herself.

The problem?

If this were the year when the young lady asserted herself academically, that would be fine. But, this is not the case.

So?

Stated simply and concisely, this is the year when the young lady may turn about and assert herself by proposing marriage no less, to some fortunate or unfortunate young man.

Problem?

For the young man who has been too shy to propose to his favorite gal, He has it made.

The young man who has always dreamed of a pretty little wife putting him through college—he too has it made.

And the young man who simply needs someone to cook, clean, sew, and pick up after him—to say the least, he has it made.

So, what IS the problem?

For the poor young man who is content to propose to his favorite gal when he gets good and ready, and for the young man who is content to put himself through college, cook, clean, sew and pick up after himself, there is a problem!

Is there any way to remedy the situation? Well, he could wrap himself up in a cocoon and hang a quarantine sign on his door.

Or he could put cotton in his ears and blinders on his eyes, whenever he is forced to be the "delicious" scents coming from the cafeteria to enter Smith Hall, and, what with the crowds, further be forced to sit next to some young pretty and assertive coed—but that wouldn't be any fun either.

Or he could sign up with Uncle Sam, or join the Foreign Legion, but he knows right well that wouldn't be any fun.

Or as a last resort, he could buy a Beatle wig in the hope that no one would recognize him, but that probably wouldn't work either.

In review of the cold hard facts, there's only one intelligent and sensible thing left to do.

Men, assert yourself! Whether big or small, husky or tall, young or old, wise or foolish, rich or poor, beat that cute asserting female to the punch. Propose to her only if you dare!

That's the problem!

14 Choir Members To Appear At Convention

Fourteen students from the college's Chamber Choir have been selected to appear at one of the meetings of the California Music Educators Association's State Convention to be held in San Mateo during Easter week, Galen Marshall, music instructor here, announced last week.

Queen Coronation, Awards Highlight Oriental Fling

By Charlotte Wong

Highlights of the Chinese Students' Club Ball, to be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday in the Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, will be the Sweetheart Queen coronation and scholarship award presentations, Club President Jenny Tom stated last week.

Tickets cost $3.75 per couple and may be purchased from queen candidates and club members, who expect to sell 400 tickets. Music will be provided by Jimmy Blass' 12-piece orchestra, and dress will be semi-formal. Proceeds of the ball will be used to provide scholarships for deserving students at the college.

The queen will be selected on the basis of talent performed at a rally held on January 25, the number of tickets she sells, and the number of popular votes she receives at the ball.

Seven coeds here are vying for the title, among whom are Gloria Jean Dumpit, a business major; Jeannie Lee, a social welfare major; Nancy Lum, and Marilyn Kirk Lee, a general education major.

Sweetheart candidate Shirley Lee, a medical assistant-secretary major, hopes to work for a physician or in a hospital after completing her studies here. A math major who hopes to teach someday, Liberty Chang plans to attend San Francisco State College after leaving here.

Candidate Joan Yee hopes to be a successful business woman someday and to be a typist for some company before returning to her native Australia.

A $100 check and a trophy will be awarded to the coed queen, while each runner-up will receive a trophy and a $25 check.

Contest judges include William Funke, business instructor; Florence Gantner, social science instructor; Dean of Women Mary Golding; James Haran, drama instructor; Marceline McDermott, English instructor; Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman and Albert Ting, college clerk.

Three students will receive $50 club scholarships each, among whom is Charles Jursch, a business administration major whose ambition is to work in the field of industrial production management.

Ronald Young will also receive an award. Majoring in medicine, he hopes to attend the University of California after completing his studies here.

Sue Gerry Yee of Galileo High School will receive the club's award to an outstanding high school graduate.

Cancer Exhibit Due Here Monday

The college's life science department will present a traveling exhibit, in cooperation with the American Cancer Society, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. next Monday, Samuel Carpenter, instructor in the department, announced last week.

The exhibit trailer will be parked at the south end of Science Hall and will be manned by members of the college's Bio-Med Society.

This project is designed to promote public knowledge of cancer and its prevention.

The interior of the trailer contains eight exhibit panels which develop the theme, Cancer Can Be Cured, Find Out How, with messages, models and photographs.

Burtnett Sets Guardsman Publication Schedule

Publication of The Guardsman this semester calls for 11 issues after today's, and possibly 12, Boyd Burtnett, Editor in Chief, announced today.

The semester publication dates of The Guardsman after today are March 4, 11, 18; April 8, 15, 22, 29; May 6, 13, 20, and 27.

Burtnett said that publication of a 13th issue, scheduled for June 3, is still uncertain.

Main distribution center for The Guardsman is on the first floor of Science Hall. The Guardsman will also be available in the library, Cloud hall, and inside the second floor of the arts building.

Semiannual COO 'Day' And Dance Set March 5, 6

Council of Organizations will sponsor its semi-annual 'Day' during College Hour, Thursday, March 5.

It will be followed by Korral Kapers, a dance which is set for Friday, March 6, according to Dion Dillon, COO president.

Throughout COO Day, students will have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with campus organizations, which offer participation in professional, career, religious, fraternity or sorority organizations.

Each organization will have a table situated in the courtyard between Science and Cloud Halls. Applications for membership in any club will be accepted there or at the COO dance the following night, Dillon said.

The COO-sponsored dance has a Western theme, and officers ask that attire be check-blouses and skirts for coeds and western-type shirts and levis for men.

Time for the March 6 dance, Dillon stated, is 9 p.m. to midnight, and, he added, music with a western twist, will be provided by Paul Miller and his band, who appear weekdays on the Tennessee Ernie Ford TV show.

Dillon said that admission will be charged only to students who are not members of the A.S.

He stressed the importance for all club representatives to attend all COO meetings held on Tuesday at 1 p.m. in bungalow 6, behind Cloud Hall. He continued by saying that anyone interested in COO is invited to attend the weekly meeting.

Dillon and his officers, Carol Wong, vice chairman, Arthur Gershman, treasurer, and a secretary who has not yet been appointed, are presently working on coordinating students with clubs of their interests through information written on student preference cards.

Council Members Hear Protest On 'Maltreatment' Of Teams; Newman Club Gets Suspension

By Ann Weill

Recent Student Council meetings, under the leadership of Associated Student President Bob Roddick, have included an announcement that the Newman Club is temporarily off-campus and comments on the treatment of college teams by Oakland City College.

Lynn Goodrich, AS vice president, said that since the Newman Club did not comply with certain college regulations, its major activities are postponed and meetings only may be held on campus.

Rally Commissioner Larry Casalengo cited a case of maltreatment. "Aside from abuse while in Oakland," Casalengo said, "when Oakland comes here for a game, team members have been threatened right here in our own gymnasium." This subject will be brought up at the next Golden Gate Conference meeting.

Charlotte Wong, freshman member of Student Council, Vince Contreras, spring '64 yell leader, and Cecil Reichert, State Information chairman, were approved by council and sworn in as Spring Semester officers.

AS card sales chairman Phyllis Webb reported approximately 1300 to 1500 AS cards sold as of February 18. "I expect that 2000 will be sold by the end of the week," she said.

Campus Police representative Charles Simms reported that 20 or 21 men have applied for admission this semester to Campus Police membership, but there is only enough equipment for 15 or 17 men.

Joe Miller, parliamentarian, asked which was more important—pistol team matches, or equipment. Roddick immediately struck his gavel on the table and ruled that Miller was out of order. Miller then appealed the decision, as Roddick proceeded to hand the gavel to Lynn Goodrich to debate the decision and appeal.

The council then voted on the merit of Roddick's ruling, but a re-vote was taken since too few members had voted. The re-vote was 8-1-0, to uphold Roddick's ruling.

Simms also stated that more than 1000 parking permits had been issued as of February 18. The Campus Police plans to issue a college rules manual.

Inter-sorority Council representative Beryl Knoller announced that February 24 through 28 is signup week for rushing sororities.

Rosie Fang, publicity committee chairman, anticipates that college calendars, which will list dates of social events of the semester and office numbers of faculty sponsors, will be distributed starting tomorrow.

Council of Organizations representative Dion Dillon announced a dance set for March 6, from 9-12 p.m. Although the theme is western, popular music will be played.

AWS president Wardene Oliver announced a dance slated for March 13 called, Don't Say No. The AWS is also planning a contest for the best dressed coed on campus.

Council meets at noon Tuesdays and Thursdays in Bungalow 6.

Kin Of Dalai Lama To Speak On Tibet

Thubten Jigme Norbu, brother of the Dalai Lama, will speak here during College Hour tomorrow in A-152 on the subject, Escape from Tibet.

Norbu, author of the autobiography, Tibet Is My Country, is expected to describe highlights of the life and exile of his brother as well as explain Tibetan customs, loyalties and ways of Tibet life.

He will also describe the solemn ceremonies and innermost sanctuaries of Tibet, including life in the Dalai Lama's palace.

Norbu, who at the age of eight was recognized as the reincarnation of the famed Tagster, entered the monastery Kumbum, where he underwent study and training.

After becoming the abbot of Kumbum, Norbu was imprisoned in his own monastary by Communist Chinese, and in time he succeeded in leaving Tibet.

Now in exile, Norbu has become a worker for the benefit of Tibetan refugees. He travels throughout America, telling of his experiences in Southeast Asia.

This will be the second in a series of College Hour lectures this semester.

Appointments by Roddick include Lori Klein as recording secretary, Gail Pursley as corresponding secretary, George Quick as finance chairman, Chuck Largaspada as parliamentarian, Cecil Reichert as state information chairman and Vince Contreras, yell-leader.

Others are Phyllis Webb, AS card sales chairman; John Wood, Campus Affairs coordinator, and Paul Coke, election commissioner.

Honorary appointive offices, under Roddick, include Dion Dillon, Council of Organizations chairman; Larry Casalegno, rally commissioner; Bruce Thomas, Inter-Fraternity Council President; Boyd Burtnett, Publications Board chairman, and Rosie Fang, Publicity Committee chairman.

Rounding out the list are Bob Sola, Campus Police chief and Fran Richardson, Recreation Association president.

Ruth Wimmer is handbook chairman this semester; Terry Ellis is student coordinator for the concert and lecture series.

Retirements, Leaves Cause Faculty Changes

The retirement at the end of last semester of Samuel E. Duff and Franklin C. Sewell, plus four sabbatical leaves taken by instructors, has caused changes in the faculty of the college this spring, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced last week.

Duff, who received his A.B. and M.A. in English from the University of Missouri, left the college after teaching here for 17 years.

Sewell, a Ph.D. in social science, retired in January after being at the college for 28 years.

Instructors on sabbatical leave this semester, Luckmann stated, include Norene Smith, English; Charles J. Stewart, life science; Glen Mercer, business, and Leland G. Eisan, business and health.

Luckmann added that all are traveling abroad with the possible exception of Stewart.

Returning from leave this semester are Herold J. Miller, engineering, and Donald Smith, social science.

Two resignations, Luckmann also added, were accepted from Robert Rutherford, political science instructor, and Mary Mattison of the nurse training program.

James Haran and Walter Krumm have been assigned to drama, replacing Mike Griffin and Robert Lasley, assigned to debate and humanities, respectively.

Newly appointed to the college's faculty for the Spring semester are Melvin Ching, life science; Robert Stewart, business; John Davlin, anthropology, and Thomas Leeson, graphic arts.

Timothy Foley has been appointed to the criminology department to fill the vacancy created by the sudden death in January of Fred Fitzgerald.

Wrestling Team In Jeopardy— Needs More Men

By George Nelson

The Ram wrestling team began the spring semester with one foot on the mat and the other in the grave. Still in the experimental phase, the team has only 18 of the 40 or more wrestlers needed to fill the ten weight divisions—115 lbs. to unlimited.

Only with complete weight divisions—usually three or more men—would the team be eligible for membership in the Golden Gate Conference and also for the allotment needed to finance the team in state-wide competition.

Dutch Elston, coach and moderator of the two-semester-old team, would like to have at least five wrestlers in each weight division. "Competition between each of the wrestlers for top spot in their weight division makes a championship team," coach Elston said.

The Ram wrestlers will represent the college March 13 and 14 in the State Junior College Wrestling Championship at Diablo Valley College.

With the help of Frank Pratt, Ray Archuleta, Bernard Mordret and each of the other wrestlers, Elston plans to bring trophies back to the campus.

A wrestling match consists of three three-minute rounds, and the winner is chosen either by points or by pinning his opponent to the mat. NCAA rules apply.

Coach Elston needs more good wrestlers. No previous experience is necessary.

Block SF Awards Trophy On Friday

Starting the Spring semester with a bang, members of the Block SF Society will present their semi-annual spirit award trophy this Friday during halftime of the San Mateo game.

All clubs and fraternities are eligible for the trophy and need only themselves, en masse, to win.

Further details are available from Coach Dutch Elston in the men's gymnasium or Fred Wales in S-304.

Block Society members are urged to attend an important but brief meeting during College Hour tomorrow in C-260.

At this meeting the judges for the spirit contest will be chosen and plans for a Block SF beach party will be discussed.

Comeback Victory Insures Hoopsters Of Title Berth

By Fred Wales

Overcoming an 11-point halftime deficit, the first place Ram cagers virtually eliminated San Jose from the close Golden Gate Conference title race with a thrilling 89-78 win last Tuesday night at San Jose.

The win was a must for the Rams as it left them in sole possession of first place with an 11-1 record and eliminated San Jose, now 9-3.

Versatile Jerry Chandler established two new scoring records on the way to his 28-point output by sinking 16 out of 17 free throws and bringing his consecutive free throw total to 18.

Contra Costa's Ted Bradley held the old record for most free throws in a game with 12, and John Carmichael had established a 16-consecutive free throw mark at San Mateo.

At San Jose the Rams pulled their greatest comeback of the season. Although Chandler opened the game with a three-point play, the Jaguars, behind guards Donnie Hicks and Art Gilbert, jumped to an early 10-5 lead.

Three baskets by Art Adams brought the Rams up to San Jose at 15-14, but Hicks and Nate Dennis stretched the lead again at 30-20.

The Rams again pulled up to the unsteady Jags at 29-31 and tied them at 31-all on Adams' driving lay-up with 6:11 remaining in the first half.

Ken Scalmanini put the Rams in front briefly, 34-33, on two charities before, in the final four minutes, San Jose piled up a 47-36 halftime lead.

In the lapse of team work that comprised the first half, Adams and Chandler accounted for 31 of the team's 36-point output as the pair salvaged broken plays and vainly tried to relieve the murderous full-court press thrown at them by the Jaguars.

Adams started the Rams up the downhill path in the second half as he controlled the tip and tanked a jump shot. Rich Henderson added a free throw and Henry King a lay-up followed by another Adams basket as the Jaguar lead dropped to 47-43.

San Jose countered to 51-46, but then Scalmanini, playing inspired ball, meshed three in a row to bring the score to 52-53.

Adams gave the Rams a 54-53 lead before Hicks led the San Joseans to a 65-58 bulge. With less than 10 minutes in the game, the San Franciscans made their move. Adams, Chandler, Henderson, Brandon Chappell and Mac Smith held the Jags scoreless and totaled 16 points for a 74-65 lead which was held to the buzzer and a final 89-78 score.

Adams and Chandler were high point men with 28, while Henderson and Scalmanini totaled 11 each.

Last Friday the Rams survived a third period cold spell to score a 53-41 comeback victory over Chabot College.

Leading 25-19 at halftime the Rams hit a lapse in teamwork and with 15:40 left in the game they found themselves trailing 39-35.

Chandler and Adams led the comeback with jumpshots and followups as they totaled 38 points. Chandler tanked 21 points to lead both teams in scoring followed by Adams with 17.

Both clubs were way off on their shooting as indicated by the fact that the Rams missed 18 out of 31 free throws.

First Place Rams Battle Bulldogs For Title Friday

Carrying the Golden Gate Conference championship down to the final game, the first-place Rams will stake their claim on the line when they take on College of San Mateo's powerful Bulldogs at 8 p.m. Friday here.

San Mateo as of last Friday was tied with San Jose for the runnerup spot with identical 9 win, 3 loss marks.

The Bulldogs were upset 91-90 last Friday by a fired up Foothill club. The loss has dimmed the San Mateans title chances as they now must beat the Rams in order to end up in a three way tie for first place with the Rams and San Jose.

San Mateo boasts a big front line with considerable depth and flashy Milky Johnson at guard.

Johnson is the team's leading scorer and is notorious for his off balance shots that seldom miss.

Dick Drake occupies the other starting guard position.

The Bulldogs' biggest strength is in their forwards. Al Winfield, 6-3, George Raybon, 6-3, and Mike Gilman, 6-4, alternate without losing any scoring punch or rebounding strength.

At center San Mateo loses little height with 6-5 John Carmichael. Combining his board work with his accuracy at long hooks, he would have to rank as one of the conference's top centers.

Along with being the conference crucial, this game is also the decider between the two teams. The Rams' first loss this season was to San Mateo 63-54, at Modesto.

This loss was avenged February 4 when the Rams inflicted San Mateo's first conference defeat, 86-67, at the plush College Heights gymnasium.

Local Nine To Face Oakland In League Opener March 10

Ram baseball coach Ernie Domecus made final thinnings in his roster last week in preparation for the remainder of the 1964 pre-conference practice season and the conference opener against Oakland City College March 10.

The Rams continue their practice season tomorrow as they face the Stanford Braves at Stanford. Game time is 3 p.m. The college team has already faced the University of California JVs and College of Marin in practice clashes.

With seven players returning from last year's team, including Ron Bringuel, Butch Bussanick, Gus Geraldi, Pete Giovanola, Bob Greenberg, Clarence Jenkins and Russ Kunkle, Domecus' squad boasts Ken Dyer, Mike Dunne, Hugh Miller, Brad Rothbach and Al Mould as outstanding freshmen.

"The club could develop into a title threat," Domecus said, "if the frosh can come around." The men to watch on the team are Giovanola, veteran catcher, and infielder Don Kunkle.

The Rams have a tough league to face again this year, and Domecus states that anything can be expected.

Pitching is expected to be a problem in the conference this year as doubleheaders have been adopted for the first time in the Golden Gate Conference. Each team plays five over the course of the season.

Intra Petitions Deadline March 4

Last date for filing petitions to play in this semester's Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition is Wednesday, March 4, Rodger Kaufman, AMS president, disclosed recently.

To participate in the games, Kaufman emphasized, teams must comply with the following AMS regulations:

1. All players must be Associated Student card holders.

2. Teams must have five eligible players on the court within 15 minutes of game time or lose by default.

3. All petitions must have been filed by March 4.

4. Teams and players must observe any additional rules posted by AMS officers during the season.

Kaufman emphasized that the majority of men AS card holders do not realize their eligibility to participate in the intramural competition, which is composed of three leagues, fraternity, club and independents.

Another privilege which accompanies AS membership is the right to attend the AMS board meetings, a privilege initiated this semester.

Mermen To Meet Foothill March 13

Again only seven strong, coach Roy Burkhead's mermen are repeating their plea for more swimmers to try out before they face titanic Foothill Friday, March 13, in Los Altos Hills.

With what will have to be the smallest team in the conference, coach Burkhead will be out to retain his third place finish of last season, although he is still in desperate need of more swimmers.

As he phrases it, "We have the nucleus of a good team, but more members are needed to compete in all the events."

Leading last year's swimmers will be standout Riek Gray, powerful in both the freestyle and butterfly.

Returning with Gray will be freestyler Fred Wales and Diver Dave Stone.

Newcomers who have lasted to date are Jim Barnes, Tom Edie, Roger Guidi and John Hamilton.

Any swimmers enrolled at the college interested in the team may still consult Burkhead in A-202.

Netters Look To Frosh For Third Straight Title

The Ram tennis team, in quest of its third straight title, will have to win it with a team of rookies plus one returning veteran, Vince Chinn.

When Chinn was on the team four years ago, he was the Ram's top man. This year, however, he will be in the number three berth.

With Chinn will be five new but talented tennis players.

Lou Engelstein, who was number two man with last year's AAA champs, Lowell High School, will occupy the second spot with City College this year, and Al Brambila will be one notch above him.

A few more possible future prospects are Mike Price, Fred Suessman and Ben Levy.

When asked to evaluate his team, coach Roy Diederichsen said, "We have a well-balanced team; on any given day our number five man can do as well as our number one man."

That is the Rams' strongest point, but their weak point of lacking a real number one man like Bob Siska, last year's Ram great, could hurt them.

"We have a good chance of finishing near the top," the tennis coach stated, "and we can win it."

In predicting the three toughest teams in the Golden Gate Conference, Coach Diederichsen chose the Foothill College Owls, City College Rams and the San Mateo Bulldogs. It is going to be a tough season, and the Rams just might come out on top once again.

Golfers In Final Days Of Training

Ram golfers, now in their final days of training, will face Hamilton Air Force Base in Sonoma at 12 noon this Friday in non-conference play.

With three returning members on this year's club, and numerous ex-high school talents to bolster the squad, coach Grover Klemmer predicts a dog fight for the top five spots.

"I hope," Klemmer said, "that the team will have taken shape by the conference opener against Oakland, March 11."

Ram veterans include Bruce Bair, last year's number four man; Rich Orme, rated five last season, and Mike Selsnik, ranked number one.

Of 17 men on the existing roster, nine can hit around par, according to Klemmer, and the freshman players, including Mike Moore, Jim Schroder and Gerry Dorn, show ability.

RAMBLINGS

Five Players Become First Place Team

By Fred Wales

AT THE conclusion of last season, feeling was running high that although the Ram cagers had managed to win the title, next year (1964), they wouldn't be in the running.

Discounting Art Adams' jumpers as not being enough to save the Rams, it was a bit of a shock when out of the blue came Jerry Chandler to add to Adams' scoring punch.

As great as the pair was, Modesto proved that no two men, no matter how good, can be double and triple manned in a loosely officiated ball game and still beat a team of five men.

Henry King brought the odds down to five to three, once his broken nose was mended. In the conference opener against Diablo Valley, King hit 11 points and helped control the boards.

Against Oakland a fourth member was represented when guard Brandon Chappell potted 15 points, and a possible fifth appeared in playmaker Rich Henderson.

San Jose proved the Rams hadn't come around completely as the locals missed tieing the game on six occasions within the last three minutes.

In the Contra Costa game, King was second in scoring with 24 points. San Mateo had never played against King in Modesto and all eyes were turned to the College Heights gymnasium for the San Francisco-San Mateo decider.

The first half was Modesto revisited as San Mateo led, 38-37, at halftime with Chandler and Adams accounting for 29 of the Rams' 37 points.

Then this team came to life.

San Mateo was opposing five men. King hit two shots; then "forgotten" veteran guard Ken Scalmanini tanked four field goals.

Henderson added a jumper as he and Scalmanini took over the ball control for both teams. Passes were stolen, lay-ups were made and assists helped Chandler to a 31-point output.

Adams' jumpers accounted for 24 more points, and King and Scalmanini hit 11 each. The result was an 86-67 victory and first place in the conference standings with a 6-1 record.

Then the ultimate was reached. The Foothill game February 11 found all five starters in double figures. Adams had 15, Chandler led with 25, King hucketed 10, Scalmanini meshed 13, and Henderson pumped five field goals for 10 points. The result, an easy 80-60 rout.

The Rams still face a decider for their third conference title this Friday. No matter what the outcome, coach Sid Phelan and his players deserve a lot of credit for building a basketball TEAM of which the college can be proud.

Unique Duo Here

PEGGY AND MILTON SALKIND go over their music for tomorrow's concert. The piano duo is expert in the unique four-handed method of playing and will be giving a recital in the theater during College Hour. They will be playing music especially composed for their specialty.

Salkinds Rediscover Lost Art Of Four-Hand Piano Playing

Piano duo Milton and Peggy Salkind will perform their four-hand concert during College Hour tomorrow in the campus theater.

The Salkinds revived the almost totally lost art of four-hand piano playing as well as some great but neglected literature composed for four hands at the keyboard rather than two.

Milton and Peggy Salkind have appeared nationally, and enthusiastic acclaim follows wherever they appear. Harold Schonberg of the New York Times summarizes in a few words the over-all impressions of the critics, "... Their work is delightful."

Because they perform a great deal of rarely heard music, the Salkinds have won national recognition from experts as the "most outstanding four-hand duo in this country."

Artists are finding that compositions for four hands, once quite rare, are regaining their proper place on the concert stage because the Salkinds are commissioning works themselves, thus giving many composers the opportunity to hear his work performed during his lifetime.

Both Salkinds were graduated from the Juilliard School of Music and later studied with Edward Steuermann in New York City.

There will be no charge for the concert and all students are invited to attend.

ISC Tea To Start Sorority Rushing, Pledge Week

Prospective sorority members will assemble at the Women's City Club at 2 p.m. Sunday, for a tea, sponsored by the Inter-Sorority Council, the first function of the spring rush season.

Dean Mary Golding emphasized that all coeds who have registered to rush a sorority are invited to attend the tea. Registration ends Friday.

At the tea Theta Tau President Norene Segerquist and Phi Beta Rho President Beryl Knoller will introduce and describe the standing campus sorority system to the rushees.

Membership requirement scholastically is a C average in a minimum of 12½ units.

Firesides, scheduled from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. next Tuesday at the homes of Joan Twomey and Dorline Bergstedt, are designed to present an opportunity for the rushees and the sorority members to become acquainted with each other.

Sites for the Firesides are within walking distance of each other, ISC officers said, and entertainment will be provided at each Fireside.

ISC leaders are participating in the Leap Year Dance scheduled at the Forest Lodge, Friday, March 13.

The Associated Women Students are sponsoring the dance, and the sorority members have offered to provide escorts for the rushees if requested.

Coffee preference hours on Tuesday, March 31, are from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Women attending the coffee preference indicate their interest in joining a sorority. Invitations for these functions are issued to rushees with a C average.

Pledging is scheduled for April 6, 8 and 10 and indications are that all rushees qualifying for sorority membership will be admitted to a sorority.

During COO "Day," students will have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with campus organizations which offer participation in professional, career, religious, fraternity or sorority groups.

Each organization will have a table situated in the courtyard between Science and Cloud Halls.

Korral Kapers, the COO sponsored dance, has a Western theme, and officers ask that attire be checkblouses and skirts for coeds and western-type shirts and levis for men.

College To Present Weekly Taped TV Program Next Fall

By Don Patten

City College, in cooperation with KP1X-TV, will present a half-hour weekly television program beginning in the fall semester, Sylvia R. Leff, part-time speech instructor at the college and producer of the proposed series, announced recently.

The series, entitled The City College Story, is to last 13 weeks, and will demonstrate how the college's students benefit from the special training offered here and acquaint pre-college students with the advantages of the semi-professional training the college offers.

The series will cover the following courses which are offered at the present time: photography; criminology; medical services (nursing, medical assistant, and X-ray); engineering #1 (architecture, building, civil, general, chemical); and engineering #2 (electronic, electrical, mechanical, design and drafting).

Other areas covered will include business #1 (secretarial, clerical, accounting and business machines); business #2 (merchandising, airline and transportation, insurance and real estate); horticulture and retail floristry; advertising, and graphic arts.

Also included will be dental services (assisting and laboratory technician); hotel and restaurant; university parallel study, and the Junior College Story.

The series will be taped, and these taping sessions will begin on March 10 with photography; March 17, criminology; March 31, medical services; April 7, engineering #1; April 14, engineering #2; April 21, business #1; April 28, business #2; May 5, horticulture.

Other taping dates will be advertising on May 12; dental services on May 19; hotel and restaurant on May 26; university parallel, June 2; and the Junior College Story on June 9.

KP1X-TV has agreed to supply all the facilities, studios, manpower and operating budget.

The format these programs will follow will be the opening, a standard film kaleidescope of the college with off-screen narration.

The next portion of the program will be in the form of a panel discussion. This will include industrial (advisory) panel talks about the general field with an administrative representative.

Following this will be a demonstration of curriculum—an overall explanation of courses with emphasis on the subjects most important to career preparation.

Fraternity Application Deadline This Friday

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines a fraternity as "a student organization formed chiefly to promote friendship and welfare among its members, and usually having secret rites and a name consisting of Greek letters."

With the possible exception of "secret rites," there are six organizations on campus fitting this definition.

Students interested in joining one of the campus fraternities have until Friday to apply, according to Bruce Thomas, Inter-Fraternity Council president.

Individuals must submit their name and their dollar initiation fee to the Inter-Fraternity Council at the silver pole on the first floor of Science Hall between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Applications may also be made in the courtyard during College Hour tomorrow, at Council Of Organizations "Day" activities.

Once applied for membership, students' names will be presented to the fraternities and invitations to the first rushing affair will be mailed to the prospective pledges.

The six campus fraternities offering brotherhood to students are Beta Tau, Dan Foley, president; Alpha Sigma Delta, Dennis Whooley, president; Zeta Phi Sigma, Don Holsher, president; Alpha Kappa Rho, Joel Cohen, president; Phi Beta Delta, Duane Underwood, president, and Alpha Phi Epsilon, Bob Stephens, president.

Pledge Week, more colorful in the past, is scheduled for the week of April 6. During this week, pledges must prove themselves eligible for brotherhood by performing "difficult but not impossible feats of durability, resiliency and character often embarrassing but never harmful."

These feats will be designated to the pledges by their senior fraternity brothers.

The pledge games will take place Thursday, April 9, during College Hour on the football field. Students are invited to witness the pledges represent their respective fraternities in a series of contests: the 880-four-man relay, balloon contest, three-legged race, egg toss and a pie eating contest.

Slapstick buffoonery, maybe, but not without reason. Thomas explains, "The fraternities want only those students who sincerely want to join. If they really want to become fraternity men, they will survive all the nonsense. If they can't cut the mustard during Pledge Week, it's likely that they wouldn't become good fraternity brothers."

Deadline Monday To Apply For Six Scholarships Here

Applications for the newly revised retail floristry, Lucille Lesser and Scottish Rite scholarships are available in S-150 and must be filed as soon as possible, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced last week.

The deadline for the Lucille Lesser and Scottish Rite applications is next Monday, Dean Golding reported, adding, however, that "many applications are already in."

"Only students who entered the college in September, 1963, or February, 1964 are eligible to apply," Dean Golding stipulated.

The two annual Lucille Lesser scholarships, $1500 each, are open to men graduates of San Francisco high schools. The four Scottish Rite scholarships, $75 each, are limited to men or women graduates of this city's public schools only.

The retail floristry foundation has been revised so that now scholarships, usually $200 each, are awarded by the entire body, rather than by certain groups within it, instructor Maryhope Jacks explained.

With a basis of $4000, the foundation also furnishes supplies and equipment for the new horticulture center not provided for by other associations or the college budget, Mrs. Jacks said.

"It is well to apply for the scholarship the semester before one needs it," Mrs. Jacks advised. "Any number of scholarships are available to deserving students on the basis of need, scholastic merit and the intention of completing the full two years here."

The sole recipient of the current semester's scholarship is Larry Janzen. He will receive $250 during a special open house, Tuesday, April 7, at the horticulture center.

Further information may be obtained from Mrs. Jacks at the horticulture center lower shop.

CJCSGA Features Dr. Max Rafferty

A talk by Dr. Max Rafferty, superintendent of public instruction in California, is expected to highlight the area six conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association on Saturday, March 14, at College of San Mateo.

Thirty student leaders from this college will attend the all-day meeting, Associated Student President Bob Roddick announced, adding, "We have also been asked to have a member of our delegation chairman one of the ten workshops."

Selection of a chairman has not as yet been made by Roddick.

Workshops are scheduled to provide discussion of internal and external communications, social and cultural activities, inter-club councils, finances, organizations, judicial systems, foreign student interests and the Area Presidents' meeting.

The latter will be presided over by the area six president, Bob Coleman of the host college.

Other colleges in area six are Cabrillo, Monterey Peninsula, Foothill, Hartnell, Menlo, San Benito and San Jose City.

March 6 Final Day For Graduation Petitions

All students planning to graduate from City College at the end of this semester should file petitions for graduation with the office of the registrar before or on Friday, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Petition forms may be obtained throughout this week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the office of the registrar.

"Although graduating students were expected to file petition forms for graduation during registration on February 3 and 4, many of them failed to do so," Miss Learnard said, adding that it is for a student's own welfare that he submit petitions for graduation in time.

Basketball Team Needs Fans, Not Army To Defend Status

WHENEVER AN EDUCATIONAL institution such as we have here indulges in organized sports activities outside of the campus, a situation known as "traditional rivalry" is usually developed with one or more of the competing colleges.

Traditional rivalry is both desirable and healthy in the case of organized sports—Undeclared war is not. And recently it looks as though we have been at war with Oakland City College, not playing basketball with them. Basketball has just been the catalyst of war.

The Athletic Director of our college refused to send the team over to the East Bay until police protection could be guaranteed and provided. Special entrances and exits were provided for our students lest they fall ambush to the enemy. Many women did not attend the game because of past, unpleasant experiences. Even our coaches were not above the most vile of verbal abuse.

It was indeed a disgraceful situation and it cheapened the whole idea of sporting competition.

And now a further danger has been added. Students from this college, who have never had the desire to attend a basketball game in their lives, have decided on going to the next one to get a piece of the action. "After all," they say, "that kind of thing has never happened at our home games."

And they are right in this respect too. We have never had any trouble of this nature when our teams played at home, but not because we are true-blue sportsmen in the finest sense of the word. The truth is that there are never enough persons at our home games to cause even a minor crisis, much less a full scale riot.

But it looks as though all of this is about to change. It will not be too long before other colleges will be demanding police protection before they come anywhere near our courts. The armies are mustering on campus and are about to march out and defend the reputation of City College of San Francisco by destroying that reputation. They are going to raise us to some dubious status by lowering us to the level of those around us. They are out to save us.

It goes without saying that we do not need to be saved in this manner. Anybody who cares anything at all about the college will agree that we need more spectators at our sporting events, but better no spectators at all than punks looking for a fight.

At any of our sports activities we have a team out there which is playing for no other reason than love of the game. They all do pretty well on their own, but they would do better with the backing of good and honest fans, not armies.

It may be that these misguided souls feel that in some way they are defending the honor and pride of City College. After all, society has little respect for the person who crawls away from a fight. But a basketball game is not a fight, nor should it be looked upon as such.

Freudian Withdrawal?

Students Use Cafeteria As Hiding Place From Life

By Jim Loveland

In the colleges and universities of today, student attitudes toward campus cafeterias have changed markedly in the past few years.

The transformation of the cafeteria, from an adventure in epicurism to a meeting place for the socially acceptable, has almost been completed.

No longer do most students consider the cafeteria as a place where inexpensive, nourishing meals can be purchased and enjoyed. To the contrary, most students view the "cafe" as a refuge from the adversities of student life, and also as the focal point for their future social triumphs.

To the first semester student the cafeteria presents an overwhelming composite of smoke, people and scattered cups of cold coffee. As one first semester coed marveled, "It's so huge, it's fantastic."

To the conditioned veteran of two or more semesters, it represents the place to go during the free hours of the day. Here he finds an atmosphere both agreeable to and tranquil for his smoke-polluted condition. One veteran campaigner put it this way, "It's okay here, I can study a little, have some coffee and smoke."

The affect of the cafeteria on the intense social life of the persons who frequent it is questionable. As one stereotyped student calmly asserted, "I come here because everybody I know comes here. It's just the way it is. It's the thing to do if you want to have any good friends."

Another more radical coed lamented, "I'm sometimes afraid to walk through the 'cafe' if I feel my hair isn't right or that a blemish on my face is showing under the makeup."

The entire concept of the cafeteria has gradually evolved into an institution of reverence for students with aversions toward individualism.

As some one once philosophized, "I do things this way because everybody else does." This seems to be sad advice from an individual no one will ever recognize as an individual.

Former Student Finds Life Of Teacher Hard On Vocal Cords, But Rewarding

CAROL VUKASIN, Sharp Park school's young teacher.

By Bea Takeuchi

Carol Vukasin, an eighth grade teacher at Sharp Park school, Pacifica, is convinced that the chief occupational hazard for most school teachers is laryngitis.

Despite this hindrance, Miss Vukasin is an enthusiastic 'schoolmarm.' "Sometimes teaching can be a most frustrating experience. You ask yourself what you're doing in a classroom when things don't go right.

"Then in the next breath, a child can do or say something so intelligent and conduct himself in such an orderly manner that you change your mind about your doubts," she said, hoarsly.

She teaches 34 students in a little suburban school with an elementary school system that reaches from the first to the eighth grades.

"I put in an eight hour day," Miss Vukasin whispered, "but it doesn't end when I come home. When I get home, I prepare for the next day."

She learned that many of her students who did not adjust to classroom activities came from middle class homes where both parents were employed. She indicated that children reveal their environment in the classroom.

"If I could have the endurance, and can give personal help to each, I'd like that. There are so many children who need help, that it makes me sick at heart," she added.

Miss Vukasin attended City College from 1958 to 1961, and transferred to San Francisco State College where she received her B.A. degree in January 1963. While attending this college she was active in student government.

"Tell those interested in teaching to be sure to enroll in Education 30. It really lends itself to the teaching profession in that it clues you in to what you can expect in certain areas of education," she emphasized.

"Mr. Bev Pasqualetti, of the education and photography department, was really an inspiration to me. He is what I want to be like. He has that quality called warmth.

"Also, Mr. Merritt Beckerman, humanities instructor, is one who stands out foremost in my mind as the most dedicated teacher I've ever had. Even if he had taught space psychology, I would take it. He always gave students the opportunity to be wrong and to express their opinions," Miss Vukasin said.

She intends to continue with college courses and work for a Master's degree in psychology, so that she may become a counselor and help children who need it.

When queried about her first reaction to receiving her teaching certificate, she said, "When I first got my teaching credentials, I just couldn't believe it. I put the certificate on the dresser and stared at it for days.

"I had a great feeling of achievement, and I know that it is a stepping stone to greater things."

Miss Vukasin plays the piano and creates mosaic art pieces during her spare time. She will be married on July 1 and plans to continue her teaching career.

● College Not For Kids

Editor, The Guardsman:

In the first issue of The Guardsman last fall, there was an editorial welcoming new students to City College.

The editorial advised these new students to "grow up" and informed them that this college is no recreation center but an institution where one can further his education.

Well, I didn't take this editorial to heart. I had better things to do than study. I neglected my responsibilities of getting to class on time, or for that matter, getting to class.

Then when finals were approaching, and my stay here was doubtful, I realized what I had been doing. I was throwing away a great opportunity—one which offered me a greater selection of jobs with better pay.

Sure, a woman should get married and raise a family, and I plan to, but until that time, I can't just live off of my parents.

If only I had realized sooner that college is for the mature and not for the immature who can't accept responsibilities!

Fortunately for me, when finals came, there was still time to study and pass, so that I am here another semester. For others there was no time—for they didn't grow up.

Avant Guardsman!

By Michel Janicot

NOW THAT everyone has a definite image of the average Frenchman, let us shift to another topic, also quite interesting for normal All-American adult males . . . WOMEN! (But again the emphasis is on French men and women.)

Let us start with the latest Paris fashion note: leather underwear. Black leather lingerie is recommended as being "cozy"—especially when worn for sports like skiing. As with leather boots and other leather apparel, such lingerie is thought to look sexy. Said one critic of the new fad who had tried a matching set (name withheld on request to protect the family name) "It's like wearing gloves in the wrong place."

Another favorite Frenchman, Georges Carpentier, has come up with a new version of the standard game of watching the girls go by, and calls it Picking The Americans. The scene is at Carpentier's bar on the Boulevard de la Madeleine in Paris where during the tourist deluge, Carpentier has been clouting .930 correct when it comes to picking out Americans 50 feet away.

"You can tell them from the rest of the mob by their slouch, bear walk and liquor habits," confided Carpentier. "San Franciscans are easiest to spot," he added "as the men still wear suits and neckties, and the women aren't so bossy and nagging.

"The Los Angeles crowd is entirely different," noted the French restaurateur. "Generally, they are not Californians at all. They have lived there for less than five years and are mere sunand-money worshipers."

(Now do you see why San Francisco is so well appreciated? Sun nor money is everything to San Franciscans!)

Next year is election year in France and naturally, everyone's conversation centers around that topic. Here in the United States, Senator Margaret Chase Smith is running for the Presidency. French communists have finally dropped the suggestion to oppose President de Gaulle with a female presidential candidate after a copy of the French Public Opinion Institute's recent survey fell into their hands.

The findings were that the idea of a lady president finds little favor—especially among French women. It seems that 71 per cent of the ladies questioned were opposed to the suggestion; only 59 per cent of the men asked were definitely against it. The reason behind the ladies' opposition was that "women lack sufficient dignity" to be chiefs of state, unless born to it, as is a queen.

The ladies added that if the woman were married, her husband might have too much influence over her. Meanwhile, back in the U.S., first in formal public opinion polling on Senator Smith's announced candidacy indicated more men than women favorably entertained the idea of a female president. Most glamorous proponent Cary Grant.

And now, let us shift to a different line which we shall call structurally yours. It seems that making a properly-fitting bra is comparable to building a suspension bridge or a cantilevered skyscraper.

According to a report in Science & Mechanics, a magazine usually devoted to the more visible aspects of engineering, bra making can properly be termed an engineering miracle. Solving the problem of providing an uplift against vertical—and sometimes tangential—forces has become a more than $450 million annual business in the United States alone!

More than 200 bra design innovations are sent to the Patent Office each year; competition is fierce and the piracy rate high. Said one earnest bra designer: "The quest for new and better ways to support and enclose is a full-time job."

Tarzan And Jane Romp Through Jungle Again

Tarzan and Jane, that amative couple of the jungle, have again burst upon the literary scene with their daring exploits of mayhem and adventure.

As any urban man of letters knows, Edgar Rice Burroughs' fictional hero has suddenly returned to great popularity. He appears in any drugstore or newsstand where storytelling and daydreaming are at a premium, and the price of a paperback is minimal. Tarzan and his companion have not as yet animated the shelves of the Ramporium.

In 1914 Burroughs published his first book, Tarzan of the Apes, and history was made. To date the Tarzan books have sold more than 25 million copies in 56 languages. Between 1914 and his death in 1950, Burroughs produced more than 60 Tarzan adventures.

In Tarzan of the Apes, baby Tarzan is first introduced to the reading public. In an almost too convenient series of episodes, Tarzan grows up before the reader's eyes. His parents, after being lost on the west coast of Africa, die.

He teaches himself to read and write English by looking at some old books left behind by his parents. He doesn't speak English, but he can communicate with apes, lions, elephants and vultures.

White people arrive, Tarzan meets Jane and saves her from an ape. He puts on a suit of clothes, goes to America and saves Jane from a forest fire in Wisconsin. He learns to speak French, leaves Jane and returns to Africa.

In the next book, The Return of Tarzan, he marries Jane and they live happily in Africa, raising a son, Boy.

This is not the end of Tarzan. He continues to swing from tree to branch, yelling like Johnny Weismuller.

Episode after episode, Tarzan is invariably knocked on the head and taken prisoner. He escapes, with the help of his animal following who are summoned to his side by his earth-silencing cry, to save all, with his fantastic strength against all opposition.

Tarzan has been reborn, and maybe just in time, to save a generation from a pasteboard oblivion.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

THE LONGING OF belonging to something or anything has hit the average college student harder than an epidemic of flu.

A quick glance around the campus at the numerous collegiate organizations proves that most everyone nowadays wants to be a joiner.

This joining bit of togetherness has proved to be a boon to the one-time seemingly spectator sport of bowling.

Here at long last is a sport that has no age, sex or physical barriers. A child of seven or a person of seventy can enjoy the game of bowling equally.

No longer do the gals have to take a back seat when it comes time to talk sports. They can bowl as well as they can talk and prove that they can do either with the greatest of ease.

The A-Number-1 physical conditioning, required in the more vigorous sports of football, hockey, wrestling and roller derby, are not absolute musts for the would-be bowler.

The only prerequisite standing required of the bowler is that he must belong to a bowling league or team.

The gone-but-not-forgotten days when a person could walk into a bowling alley and bowl a leisurely game are truly gone forever.

If it isn't the Teen Queens bowling on Monday night, then it's the Roaring Twenties on Tuesday night, the Swinging Thirties on Wednesday night, the Folding Forties on Thursday night, the Zany Fifties on Friday night, the Sorrowful Sixties on Saturday night and the Stompin' Seventies on Sunday night.

What has even happened to the individual? About the only persons who seem to be alone any more are those "individuals" who aren't hep to the toothpaste, deodorant and hair cream ads!

If Greta Garbo wanted to be alone 30 years ago, imagine how she feels today?

Perhaps a bowling league or team, entitled the Non-Joiner's Club, could be established for those individuals, whoever or wherever they are, who have no longing of belonging! A club where members have the feeling of belonging and disbelonging at the same time may be just what the individual doctor ordered!

Despite the odds, the sport of bowling, with all its leagues and teams, is here to stay. A leisurely drive through any city in sunny California, if that's possible any more, bears witness to the fact that almost every new construction project has something to do with bowling.

Oh well! If nothing else, bowling has made loneliness obsolete.

And let's face it, no one really wants to be alone anymore, not even Greta Garbo!

Ski Club Plans Trip In March

City College's Ram Ski club is planning a snow trip Saturday, March 14, to the only indoor ski spot in the western United States, located at Menlo Park, California, Andrew Vena, president of the club, announced recently.

The club, organized by a small group of interested students two semesters ago, has grown into a large organization with approximately 150 members, according to estimates made during club elections last week.

Officers newly elected with Vena are Richard Hunter, vice president, and Arthur Gershman, treasurer.

Patti Carrol was elected recording secretary, Bobbi McQuaid corresponding secretary, Frances Blum historian and Jayne Pfotenhauer, Council Of Organizations representative.

Although only two snow trips are scheduled by the club this semester, each weekend members drive to slopes of Northern California and select the sites they consider interesting, Gershman said.

Unlike some ski associations, more than half of the members are inexperienced skiers, but there are two professional ski instructors, Betsy Hawkins and Joe Humyleu, who teach on a part-time job basis during weekends at Squaw Valley and Echo Summit, respectively.

Club meetings feature guest speakers, ski movies, discussion of safety rules and future plans of the club. The next meeting is set for College Hour tomorrow in A-213 and all interested students are invited.

Finance Chairman Freezes 14 Campus Organization Budgets, Upholds 100 Per Cent AS Rule

By Ann Weill

At last week's Student Council meetings, budgets of 14 campus organizations were reported frozen, and an allocation of an additional $209 to The Guardsman was approved.

Organizations now without funds include drama, KCSF, baseball, varsity basketball, golf, swimming, tennis, track, physical education department, recreation association fencing team, A Cappella Choir, Forum, Men's Glee and the Rally Committee.

According to Finance Chairman George Quick, "under Associated Student regulations, all groups receiving funds from the AS must have 100 per cent AS membership."

Quick upheld this ruling and suggested, "If card lists are not in within two weeks after February 27, the AS should rescind the budgets."

The Guardsman, official paper of the AS, was allotted the $209 to increase printing as of now to 3000 copies per issue, as against 2500 per issue originally allocated. The funds will also be used for 600 stamps, postage for copies sent as exchange papers to other colleges.

AS President Bob Roddick announced that the area six conference, concerning student government, is scheduled for Saturday, March 14, at College of San Mateo. Thirty delegates will be sent from here to work in ten workshops. Roddick reported that 23 council and cabinet members had volunteered participation as of February 27.

Freshman Class President Terry Cloney recorded 238 in attendance at the last Freshman dance. Profits from the dance were $110. Cloney also stated that 60 names have been submitted to fill the five new offices for the Freshman Class.

The three unoccupied seats on council were filled yesterday, after The Guardsman went to press. Petitioners were Steve Willis and Arch Carrillo for the one sophomore seat, and Mike Garabedian and Chuck Larga-spada for the two freshman seats.

A ditto machine has been added to the office in S-147, Quick announced. Any student may use it as long as he brings his own paper and requests permission from either recording secretary Lori Klein, or Quick.

Entry Into Behind-Scenes Theater Jobs Made Easy

Students who want to be in "The Profession," may never find an easier way to fulfill their desire than the one offered this semester by the directors of the college's drama department.

Walter Krumm, codirector in the department, issued a welcome last week to students who may be interested in volunteering time to work "behind-the-scenes" of the theater.

Assistance is needed in all phases of drama production, according to Krumm. This includes anything from backstage help to ushering at performances.

"Experience is not a prerequisite," Krumm added. "Any student interested in the theater is welcome." Volunteers may consult Krumm, or James Haran in the arts building theater or during the instructors' office hours on faculty row in Cloud Hall.

The Bicycle Thief Next Attraction Of Movie Series

The Bicycle Thief, directed by Vittorio de Sica, is the next scheduled production in the spring movie series, James Haran, drama instructor, disclosed yesterday.

The film, to be shown at 8 p.m. tomorrow night in the theater, was produced in Italy in 1949.

April 23, "The Seven Deadly Sins, directed by Claude Autant-Lara and produced in France in 1952, will be featured.

Other scheduled attractions this semester will include Sawdust and Tinsel on April 30. This production was directed by Ingmar Bergman in Sweden in 1953.

Ikiru, directed by Akira Kurosawa in Japan in 1952, is listed for May 14, and Alexander Nevsky, which was directed by Serge Eisenstein in Russia in 1938, is slated for May 21.

The first productions of the movie series, shown on February 13, were Man of Aran and Song of Ceylon. The former was directed by Robert J. Flaherty in the United States in 1934, and the latter was directed by John Grierson in England in 1934.

Admission for these performances is free, but one must have a ticket, which can be obtained in the theater office, A-147, or by consulting faculty members Walter Krumm, William Culver, Victor Vaio, or Haran.

Tartuffe Set For March 11 Opening

Moliere's Tartuffe, a French romantic-comedy in five acts, will be presented by the college's drama department beginning next Wednesday, March 11, in the theater, and continuing through Saturday, March 14.

Curtain will be at 8 p.m. each night.

Tartuffe is a fictional hypocritical religious devotee who swindles his benefactor and attempts to seduce his benefactor's wife.

Heading the cast will be Larry O'Leno, Joan Grant, Ken Bachtold, Andrea Fulton, Lynn Goodrich, Ray Lynch, Jeannie Chieffo and Lincoln Paine.

Admission will be free to Associated Student card-holders; students without an AS card and the general public will be charged $1 for admission.

Director of Tartuffe is James Haran.

Two Coeds Net $400 From Bank Of America Awards

Business students Sophia Tso and Gertrude Adams were chosen February 10 as the college's recipients of two of the annual Bank of America awards, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced last week.

Cash awards of $200 each are open to students majoring in banking, business administration and secretarial or clerical courses.

The awards and certificates of recognition will be presented at a business awards dinner, Thursday, March 19, at the St. Francis Hotel.

The reviewing committee for the college includes Dean Golding, and business instructors George Stewart, Harry Frustuck, Anka Ohman, Edward Larson and Ruth Gavin.

Miss Tso is a fourth semester student here. She will graduate in June but has not decided whether to work or to continue her education at a state college.

A graduate of Lowell High School, where she majored in German and mathematics, Miss Tso said, "I had my first accounting course at City College."

Miss Tso became interested in the awards when Stewart, her instructor, announced the requirements in class. "I really didn't think I would win," she said.

Miss Adams, who won the other award, is a secretarial-nursing major. She is a graduate of George Washington High School.

Parking Control Plagues Police

Campus Police officers are asking the cooperation of the students in solving the traffic problem here. "Parking and pedestrian disregard of officer instructions are the biggest problems," Deputy Chief Jim Aligo, emphasized today.

There are five parking lots which students with parking permits may use: lot B, along Ocean avenue and next to the practice football field; lot C, at the south end of the football field and track; lots F and G, on Judson avenue next to the horticulture center, and the reservoir, directly across from the front of the college.

Students are asked to park only in the above named lots and not in those lots reserved for faculty members, and in Cloud circle.

From Peaceful To Aggressive Land —Story Of Tibet

An illustration of how a primitive, peace-loving environment can be transformed into an aggressive, militant one, was shown in a movie last Thursday, in the campus theater.

The film, Escape from Tibet, was taken and produced by Thubten Jigme Norbu, brother of the Dalai Lama of Tibet. The customs and culture of this peaceful little Himalayan country before and after Red Chinese seizure was depicted in both black and white and color film.

Tibet, a highly primitive and religious country, is known to most students as the location of James Hilton's Shangri-La, in his famous book, Lost Horizon.

Until Chinese rule, there were no cars, indoor plumbing, hotels or electricity. "The Chinese have built a town they call New Lhasa. It is really a New Chinatown, a compiete military installation where Tibetans are forbidden under penalty of death," Norbu said sadly.

The Tibetans are people with simple pleasures. The closest thing to the Mexican bullfight is their crude method of wrestling. For liquid refreshment, they thoroughly enjoy a tea mixture that is concnected with tea, milk, butter and salt. Heavy drinkers indulge in at least 60 cups a day.

They also gamble a little when they are not churning their little prayer wheels.

"The boys go into monasteries at an early age," Norbu said, explaining, "These are equivalent to your colleges. We have at least four colleges in one monastery. We teach history, religion, logic, philosophy, mysticism, astrology and horoscopes.

"The girls attend nunneries. We may marry, but we must renounce ourselves while in college. I am a happily married father of two children," he declared.

Norbu is now employed in the Anthropology Department of the American Museum of National History in New York.

Tutoring Jobs Open To Qualified Students

Private coaching jobs are available this semester to students who wish to earn money, William Richardson, sponsor of the college's scholastic honor society, announced last week.

Coaches will be allowed to charge up to $1.50 per hour helping other students in one or more of the following subjects: English, algebra, trigonometry, calculus, high school or college chemistry, Spanish, French, German and life sciences.

Students interested in coaching need not be members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, the honor society. They can consult Richardson, who has a list of students who need help, in S-140 this week.

Champs Defeat Bulldogs, 95-90, Post 13-1 Record

By Fred Wales

After being forced into two overtimes the Ram basketball team behind Rich Henderson downed a fired up San Mateo, 95-90, here last Friday night.

The victory gave the Conference Champion Rams a 13-1 conference record and a 26-2 overall record. This is the best record ever accumulated in the young Golden Gate Conference.

San Mateo dropped into third place in final conference standings with a 10-4 mark.

Starting fast, the Rams jumped to a 19-5 lead prior to the second quarter.

Despite Don Pressley's 10 point output, the Rams stretched the lead to 30-15 prior to halftime. The Bulldogs closed to 38-28 at the half and started firing and hitting after the intermission.

Suffering a cold spell the San Franciscans couldn't buy a basket, but behind free throws and Jerry Chandler, managed to hold a lead until with 6:20 left in the game, Milky Johnson sank a free throw on a technical foul to put San Mateo ahead 63-62.

Chandler scored six points to give the Rams a 73-71 lead with 50 seconds left in the game.

Then Johnson hit a jumper for San Mateo to send the game into overtime. The flashy guard repeated the performance to send the game into a second overtime.

In the second overtime Henderson sank six consecutive free throws to ice the 95-90 victory.

Henderson saved the Rams on six occasions as he combined jump shots, nine out of 11 free throws and a near impossible two-handed lay-up for 27 points.

Chandler equaled Henderson's performance with 29 points of his own.

Last Tuesday the Rams insured the championship with a 62-55 comeback victory over a fired-up Contra Costa five at Richmond.

Experiencing what must have been their coldest night of the season, the Rams, behind Adams managed to keep abreast of the Comets until, with 7:06 left in the half. Comets' Ted Bradley and Roosevelt Robinson hit a hot streak and pumped through three baskets apiece to give Contra Costa a six-point bulge, 27-19.

The deluge continued until at halftime the San Franciscans were looking up to a 33-20 halftime deficit.

Starting the second half, the Rams came back to within seven points, 35-28, as Ken Scalmanini and King sank lay-ups.

With 10:46 left in the game, the Rams were still down, 49-38. At this point Contra Costa suffered a lapse in teamwork which the Rams capitalized on.

Adams and Henderson brought their team to within four points at 52-48 before the final push began. With 3:06 left, Adams put the Rams up, 54-52, and then Chandler added four points to put the game out of reach.

Adams led both teams in scoring with 23 points, followed by Chandler with 17 and Henderson with 12.

"Due to the absence of the Spirit Award trophy and the lack of enthusiasm displayed by the clubs and organizations, the presentation of the Award was postponed until later in the semester," Bernard Mordret, newly elected Block SF society president, announced last Friday night.

The trophy was to be delivered before the start of the basketball game. However, the key that unlocks the trophy case in Smith Hall could not be found.

With the absence of the trophy and no organized group present, President Mordret decided to postpone the presentation until track or baseball season.

Basketball scorer Claudia Hoeft was to have presented the trophy following a spirit contest to be held during halftime of the game.

Rams, Menlo Vie For Tournament Berth On Friday

With their third Conference Championship tucked away, the Ram cagers will challenge Coast Conference champion, Menlo College, at 8 p.m. Friday at the College Heights Gymnasium in San Mateo.

The Rams will have to defeat Menlo in order to earn a berth in the State Tournament in Los Angeles next week.

Due to the excessive number of conferences in the state, every year different conference champions must have a playoff on a neutral court to decide which team earns the berth.

Menlo captured the Coast Conference title with a 63-58 victory over Vallejo last Friday.

Nichols, Odenweller, Hallett, Burke and Lance Lund compose Menlo's starting five.

Lund played center for Washington High School in 1963.

Olaya Makes All-American Junior College Soccer Team; Two Other Rams On Second String

By Peter Huebner

Hector Hugo Olaya added another triumph to his soccer career when he was selected for the left-half position of the All-American Junior College Soccer squad in January.

In addition to Olaya, two other Ram booters upheld the banner of the college's sports department; center-forward Waldon Hom and outside-right Peter Huebner were selected for the second string All-American team.

Soccer coach Roy Diederichsen, who year after year produces more All-American candidates than any other two-year college in the country, commented:

"Since we do not play in the big league any more, it has become extremely difficult for any of my players to be picked for the All-American selection, and under these circumstances, we can count ourselves fortunate that three of my boys made it this year."

As for Olaya, who was last season's Most Valuable Player and who headed the Rams All-Conference selection, the All-American recognition could not have come to a better qualified soccer player.

He is a rare product of skill and talent, or as the experts would call it, a natural baliplayer. Born July 16, 1942, in Tuayaquil, Ecuador, he started to kick a ball around as soon as his feet could hold him up.

"We have Pee-Wee teams back home," Olaya explained, "and when I was six years old I started to play in organized school teams."

In 1956 Olaya came to the United States where he continued his education in junior high school. During this time, he played soccer for the local Ecuadorian team; at 14 being the youngest member of any senior team in the city.

When Olaya entered Mission High School in 1958, he played for the Viking Athletic Club's junior team for two successive seasons.

During his senior year, in 1960, Olaya played for the Mission team when it took the city championship. Later, in a practice game, he injured his knee and was unable to play soccer for more than a year.

After graduation from high school, Olaya came to City College and in his second semester started playing ball.

In that year, the college took the Intercollegiate Championship. "I believe we had the best college soccer team in the country in 1961," Coach Diederichsen said at the time, adding, "Olaya and All-American Caesar Pina are the best halfbacks I ever had."

Olaya belongs to the Rio Guyas team, which was formed in 1961. It had to start off in the fourth division and now occupies third spot in the second division. "If everything goes well," Olaya says, "we have a good chance to move up into the first division this year."

Would Olaya consider becoming a professional ball player? "I have an engineering career ahead of me which I consider more important, and I play ball just for the fun of it."

Here, Olaya is enrolled in courses in general education, but after graduation he intends to transfer to San Jose State, where his major will be astronautical engineering.

Coach Diederichsen, naturally, is sorry to see him go. To him and many others, Olaya was the Rams' outstanding player of the season and the San Jose State soccermen are looking forward to seeing him on their squad.

Spikers Host Diablo Valley In Conference Tilt On Friday

With a practice meet yesterday at Modesto under their belts, Ram tracksters prepare to host Diablo Valley College at 3 p.m. Friday in the Ram stadium.

With five men returning, the team looks forward to a good showing in the conference meets, but Coach Lou Vasquez said,

"This is a tough league, and most of the top ranked competitors have also returned to their colleges, particularly to Contra Costa."

The high spot in the San Francisco team this year is held by Ozzie Norris, who has broken the college record for the half mile. In a preliminary meet, Norris turned in a 1:56.7, which bettered the previous mark of 1:57.2, set by Al Carlson in 1954.

In addition to Norris, returning spikers include Tom Gardner, 100 and 220-yard events; Gene Plotkin, mile and two-mile; Pat Lewis, shot and discus, and Mike Conroy, relays.

Gardner, who started last season with a .10:4 hundred, and whittled it down to .10:0 before the end of the year, starts this year with a 10 second flat edge.

Several new events have been added this year, including a 220 on the turn rather than the straightaway, and an extended hurdles event.

Expected to be a good event for the Rams is the 440 relay, in which a standing of second or third in the conference is expected.

Of the first four meets, San Francisco hosts three of them, which is an innovation. In recent track seasons, the Rams had little occasion to hold meets at home.

Golfers' Training Ends As Conference Opener Against Oakland Nears

Competition among the members of the Ram golf team for top five positioning is reaching a climax as the conference opener against Oakland next Wednesday, March 11, nears.

Golf coach Grover Klemmer said last week that although it is impossible to name those who will finally be the top five, because of the equal distribution of ability, the team may face the loss of its one hope for a standout, Mike Selsnik.

Selsnik, a veteran from last season, it was hoped, would be this year's strong man, but it appears that he may be lost to his job.

"Many of the golfers allegedly can hit around 80, and there is nothing wrong with that, but the lack of a top man could be a slight disadvantage, especially against teams like Chabot and San Mateo who will have a number of top men returning," Klemmer stated.

Local Nine Faces Final Practices

The Ram baseball squad, in its last days of training prior to its league opener against Oakland next Tuesday, plays three practice games this week, starting with San Francisco State's frosh at 3 p.m. today.

The club then faces the University of San Francisco frosh at 3 p.m. Friday and San Quentin at San Quentin at 10 a.m. this Saturday.

In recent nonconference action, the Rams have seen defeat as well as victory, though not as severely. The opening practice tilt found the local varsity on the short end of a 7-4 decision. The loss was handed to them by the University of California junior varsity.

The club bounced back, however, last Tuesday, by trouncing College of Marin, 13-4. Veteran pitcher Ron Bringuel was credited with the win, allowing two hits and walking four men in his four-inning start. Ken Dyer came in as relief in the fifth frame.

The crushing Ram romp was led by Bill Gianguinto, three for three with a three-run triple in the first inning, and returning shortstop Russ Kunkle, who blasted a grand-slam homer in the third.

"The starting lineup shows promise," coach Ernie Domecus commented, "and we have a pretty sturdy bench too." The lineup finds power in Butch Bussanick, first baseman returned from last season; Gianguinto, fresh from the Air Force; Sid Ancar, Kunkle, and good punch hitting in Galileo graduate Mike Dunne.

The infield is in the sure hands of Gus Geraldi returning second baseman and Alan Mould from Galileo.

Swimmers Meet USF In Practice Splash Friday

Improving with age, the small but mighty Ram swim team will stroke off with the University of San Francisco varsity in its sole practice meet at 3 p.m. Friday at McLaren Pool.

Using nine swimmers to fill 11 events and 2 relays, the Rams will rank as definite underdogs, but with such versatility, the nine could give USF some trouble.

Manning the 200 freestyle and 100 butterfly as well as the relays will be veteran Butch Gray. With him will be newcomer Dan Anthor, who will also be used in the breaststroker.

John Hamilton from Polytechnic will make his debut as a breaststroke as will Brian Eddie, a Lincoln High grad. The latter could also be in the backstroke, individual medley and freestyle events.

Jim Harris is another versatile swimmer who could debut in any event except butterfly.

Bob Barnes will take care of the 200 backstroke but not until his stitches mend from a skiing accident.

26 Representatives Attend Area Six Student Conference At San Mateo On Saturday

This college will be represented by 26 students at the Area Six Conference of the California Student Government Association Saturday, at the College of San Mateo, Associated Student President Bob Roddick announced last week.

Highlighting the conference will be a speech by Dr. Max Rafferty, superintendent of Public Instruction in California.

This will be the second general assembly of Area Six, which was formed in 1962 by the division of California's 70 two-year colleges into eight areas. The first general assembly was held here in October, 1963.

Ten worshops will be held during the day to provide an exchange of ideas in specific fields.

In attendance at the President's Worshop will be Roddick; at the Internal Communications Workshop will be Paul Coke, Barbara Kontis and Cecil Reichert; at the External Communications Workshop, Charlotte Wong, Wardene Oliver and Gail Pursley.

Terry Cloney, Gary Ettin and Mary Jane Super will represent San Francisco at the Social Activities Workshop while Lori Klein, Penny Brown and Bruce Thomas attend the Inter-Club Council Workshop.

Vince Contreras will serve as chairman of the Cultural Activities Workshop, which Lynn Goodrich and Nancy Wiegand will also attend. Present at the Finance Workshop will be George Quick, Jeff Kaufman and Loralee Lando; at the Judicial Systems Workshop will be Joe Miller, Roger Kaufman and Judi Beverly.

Chairman of the Organizations Workshop will be Phyllis Webb with Phyllis Amstein and Kathy Carsner also in attendance. Carol Wong will represent the college at the Foreign Students Workshop.

Moderating the workshops will be authorities in the respective fields.

More than 200 students from nine colleges are expected to attend the all-day conference. The other colleges in attendance will be Cabrillo, Monterey Peninsula, Foothill, Gavilan, Hartnell, San Benito and San Jose City.

AMS Aids AWS In Finding Dates For Shy Students

In an attempt to help shy persons bolster their chances of meeting with the opposite sex, the Associated Men Students will work with the Associated Women Students to establish a date bureau, Roger Kaufman AMS president, announced yesterday.

The date bureau will be functioning until the day of the leap year dance, scheduled for 9 p.m. to midnight Friday at the Forest Lodge, Kaufman emphasized.

"We've started this bureau because we feel that there are students who tend to avoid dances for the simple reason they are shy. If we can provide them with a date, our Leap Year dance will be a smashing success," Kaufman said.

The date bureau has set up a box in each gymnasium with application blanks beside the box. On the application are six questions that must be answered: name, hair color, eye color, height, weight and interests. Kaufman explained that when the application is compieted, it is to be dropped into the box.

"Once we receive the applications we will try our best to match individuals applying," Kaufman added.

Other projects for the AMS this semester will be the setting up of suggestion boxes, and the possible organization of an AMS class that would meet every Thursday, Kaufman also announced.

"The suggestion boxes will be set up in various locations around the college, starting next Monday. The idea behind the boxes is to promote greater interest in student activities, as well as an outlet for problems a person has concerning the campus.

"The possibility of an AMS class is still in the planning stages, but there are definite purposes for having one," Kaufman explained.

"One is to promote student activities; another to further the interest of an individual, and a third to seek as sincerely as possible solutions to the problems found in the suggestion boxes," he added.

Applications Due By March 30 For 50 Scholarships

Applications for approximately 50 scholarships, ranging in value from $25 to $500, are available in S-150 and must be filed by Monday, March 30 Dean of Women Mary Golding reported recently.

Students who enrolled here last September or in February are eligible to apply, Dean Golding indicated.

"Community service is an important asset to the applicant," she said.

Scholarships presented include one by the Academy of Art to an advertising art major, two by Alpha Phi Omega of $125 each to a man and woman student and one by the Flosita Badger Memorial Fund to a third semester music major.

Others are four from the Chinese Students club of $50 each, two from the Dr. A. J. Cloud Fund to a man and woman student, respectively, two from the Denman fund of $150 each to women graduates of San Francisco public high schools and several by the graduating class of 1963, of $50 each.

There are also 16 given by the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation of $100 to $500 each, two by the International Footprint Association of $25 each to criminology majors, one by Florence Louis and one by the Mercer Scholarship fund to an English major.

Completing the list are three given through the Ornamental Horticulture Department, two by Edith Pence for women students, six by the San Francisco Law School, one by the San Francisco Medical Assistants Society, one by Mary Roberts Scott's Fund and two by the Square and Circle Club of $50 each to Chinese-American students.

AS Card Sale Falls Short Of 2400 Goal

Associated Student card sales have fallen only 100 short of the goal of 2400 set for the semester, Phyllis Webb, card sales chairman, stated last week.

The two top salesmen were Art Gershman and Carol Wong, each selling about 200 cards.

"Both are quite close in the number of cards sold, and the top salesperson will be chosen from these two," Miss Webb stated. The first-place salesman will receive a prize of his choice, valued at about $30.00, she added.

Runners-up in the selling contest were Roger Kaufman, who sold more than 100 cards, and Wardene Oliver, who sold about 80 cards.

Student activities cost $35.000 per semester. Approximately 40 per cent of the funds come from card sales.

Contests For Art And Essays Begin At Nine Colleges

Two contests, one in essay writing and one in art, have been initiated recently by the nine member colleges of the Golden Gate Conference Presidents' Association, Associated Student Vice President Lynn Goodrich announced last week.

Purpose of the contests is to bring the colleges together in joint participation of the project. The art contest will also enable students to exhibit their work and to see what other students are doing, Miss Goodrich commented.

Named in honor of John F. Kennedy, the essay contest topics are a stand on a major controversial issue facing the United States today, and What Has Been The Impact Of The Modern Times On Our Morals?

Other topics include Have Business Ethics Declined In America; Are Americans' Values Too Involved With Materialism and Is There Any Justification For Segregation?

Essays must not exceed 1000 words and deadline for entries is April 6, Miss Goodrich said. The first-place winner will receive $200, second-place $100, and three third-place winners will receive $50 each.

Categories in the art contest include oil and water color painting, graphic art, ink-sketching, engraving, silk screen, photography and sculpture.

Deadline for these entries is April 15. The art festival is scheduled for May 2, when monetary awards will be presented to the winners.

Any interested students may sign up in the Associated Student office, S-134, or with essay contest subcommittee members Carol Harover, Nancy Wiegand and Charlotte Wong or with subcommittee members Ray Chezik, Macy Maurer and Jim Vance.

The presidents' conference meets monthly to promote intercollege cooperation and communication, to assist member colleges in the coordination of campus programs and to seek solutions to common problems.

The conference is composed of the Associated Student Presidents of nine colleges, among which are Chabot, City College of San Francisco, San Jose City College, College of San Mateo, Contra Costa, Diablo Valley, Foothill, Oakland City College—Merritt campus, and Oakland City College—Laney campus.

Each college appoints one judge.

Invitation To The New York World's Fair Supplements Ram Pep Band's Activities

By Don Patten

An invitation to the World's Fair in New York and a possible tour of Disneyland are among the activities of this semester's Ram Pep Band, John W. Dunn, faculty director of the group, announced last week.

Dunn stated that the band may attend the Cotton, Orange or Rose Bowl game next year.

The band will also support the Rams if they make the play-offs scheduled for tomorrow, Friday and Saturday in Los Angeles.

All these tours, Dunn added, are made possible by a budget which is authorized by the Student Council.

He also stressed that the band needs new uniforms. "We have more people than uniforms. One year ago, we had a 12-piece band, and now we have a 60-piece band."

During all athletic competition, the team is backed by an average of a 32-piece band, and all of these students are members of the Associated Students.

Dunn emphasized that students in the band who attend games receive no grade for their participation.

"The students enjoy it and want to go. They should be commended for this," he said, and also added, "I think we have the best disciplined group on campus."

This semester, Dunn added, five members of the band were on the Dean's Honor List.

He also invited students to join the band. "We open our doors to any student at any time.

"There is, however, a strict rule. All members must be AS card holders. The band is always among the first groups on campus to be 100 per cent in AS membership," Dunn said.

The band will possibly perform March 17 in the St. Patricks Day Parade in San Francisco and also on May 30, Memorial Day.

The Dance Band, a separate group from the Pep Band, has 32 members. It is the largest dance band the college has had, according to Dunn.

This group meets each Sunday night from 7 to 10 p.m. in Smith Hall. AS membership is not required for this group, Dunn said, "because we are a non-budgeted group."

The Dance Band, which plays original, professional, stock and other music, will perform on April 17 at Alpha Phi Omega's Ugly Man On Campus dance.

Fort Ord To Host Footlighters In Easter Melodrama

Fort Ord will host the Footlighters, campus drama group, for an Easter performance of New Faces of 1927 on March 28 and 29, performer-author Ken Bachtold said today.

Providing a bus to transport the 20 cast members, their costumes and props to the Monterey area, Fort Ord will also provide lodging for the two-day stay.

Performed earlier this semester during College Hour, the show was written and directed by three drama students, Mike Dobrinsky, Larry O'Leno and Bachtold.

Beginning with an academy award type introduction series, New Faces of 1927 features such characters as Lanceiot L'amour, Bachtold; Boots Truehart, O'Leno, and Hedda Lettuce, Jeannie Chieffo.

A melodrama, depicting the flight and experiences of "a girl cast out by daddy" is the highlight of the performance. Also included in the melodrama is a mass murder, executed by gangster Gat Grenade, played by Ray Lynch, who kills everybody except the pretty girl whom he wants to keep for himself.

Situations resolve themselves melodramatically, when the villains are pushed over the "cliff." The pretty girl is "saved" and returned to her rightful lover, and the show ends with the full cast dancing the Black Bottom to ragtime rhythm.

Although organized "for the purpose of offering College Hour performances," Bachtold explained that the Footlighters have now been asked to bring their show to Letterman Hospital and to the U.S.O.

AWS Establishes Date Bureau In Conjunction With Friday's 'Don't Say No' Leap Year Dance

The Associated Women Students are sponsoring a date bureau in conjunction with their Don't Say No leap year dance, to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday, at Forest Lodge, 266 Laguna Honda Boulevard, AWS President Wardene Oliver announced last week.

Headed by boardmembers Judy Allen, Marsha Marcotte and Carol Parnow, the date bureau is a means by which students may become better acquainted.

Working with the coeds will be Associated Men Student President Roger Kaufman, who will help match applicants according to their personalities and interests as listed on cards passed out on Council of Organizations "Day," last Friday.

Admission to the dance will be $1 for Associated Student card-holders and $1.50 to those without cards. Dress will be semiformal, and music by Maurice Wolohan and his orchestra.

Entertainment will be provided by Tulifau Joe Mauga, who will perform knife and fire dances, and by the University of San Francisco Pipes, a group of seven men who sing a cappella.

The names of the 12 Best-Dressed Coed Contest semifinalists will be announced at the dance. The women will be selected out of 20 entrants at the second tryouts, to be held during College Hour tomorrow in bungalow 5.

The 12 women will serve as models at the AWS fashion show-tea to be held starting at 3 p.m. Thursday, April 9, in Smith Hall.

Theme of the fashion show is Daisies Will Tell. Fashions will be provided by H. Liebes.

THE PRIVILEGES OF LEAP YEAR. AWS President Wardene Oliver zeros in on AWS President Roger Kaufman as she exercises the time-honored right of feminine aggressiveness expected every four years. Miss Oliver has in mind the "Don't Say No" Leap Year dance, ominously scheduled for Friday, the 13th. No word has been received as to whether she was able to keep her grip on her target.

Keep New Basketball Champs From Fate Of Predecessors

AS REPORTED in last week's issue of The Guardsman, the City College basketball team is second to none of its competition. The team is ranked number two in the nation for two-year colleges, and its members justly deserve the title of Champion. And just to top the whole matter off, City College's coach Sid Phelan was picked number one in the nation for basketball coaches in his category.

The team and "Numero Uno" deserve much more honor and recognition than they will probably receive on the campus. When the starting five walked out on the court for the first game of the season, they wanted nothing more than to play basketball. And play basketball they did. These men are heroes, so why don't we indulge in a little hero worship on their behalf?

The only trouble is that F. Scott Fitzgerald once wrote, "You show me a hero, and I'll write you a tragedy." This statement would seem to apply to our campus. Our champions and award winners seem to run into exceptionally bad luck from many quarters.

As an example, we once had a championship pistol team in our midst. The team was composed mostly of Campus Police personnel who went to various matches and wound up to be the California State Champions. They beat all comers, including pistol teams from the Armed Forces who naturally had more funds and experience to draw from.

They were only Pistol Champs for one year, however. Student Council refused to allocate them funds for further competition matches that would lead to the State Finals. They are now all but forgotten. The reputation of City College was probably knocked around a little bit in that skirmish too.

Another, though lesser, example is with this newspaper. Each semester The Guardsman receives a certificate from the Associated Collegiate Press, signifying its rating of the paper in relation to other two-year college newspapers in the United States. The top, "All American," has happened so often in the past that it is now almost expected of us. For the past three semesters The Guardsman has received the highest award, but it has been unable to secure the funds necessary to frame these certificates.

Splitting hairs? Possibly, but the people who worked hard for these certificates are tired of pulling them out of manila envelopes to look at them. Likewise, the members of the pistol team must have felt very weary when they saw their championship go down the drain through no fault of their own.

Well, once again we have champions on campus, and we hope the fate that befell their predecessors will not strike them. If they should happen to ask for the trophies they deserve, let us hope a suggestion is not made in the interests of economy to sand off some old trophies they won and re-engrave them.

Ridiculous? Some interesting and factual parallels could be drawn.

Last semester an attempt was made to revive what everybody knew the college was lacking, pride. The attempt, for all practical purposes, failed. Well, here is a championship basketball team, and here is a basis for collegiate pride. Let us sit back and bask in the increased honor and reputation which the basketball team won for us.

Success Story Series

Former Business Student Stresses Higher Education

By Bea Takeuchi

In 1936, when City College's enrollment was meager in comparison to the exorbitant enrollment of today, a sports-minded student registered and attended classes here. His major was business administration.

His minor, it seemed then, was tennis, golf and baseball. He was not interested either in politics or student government. However, he completed the courses necessary for transfer to Stanford University, where he received his B.A. degree in 1940.

After graduation, he served as a counter-intelligence officer for the United States. "During World War II, I took part in psychological warfare in New Guinea, the Philippines and Japan.

"My education enabled me to participate in this field of service," he said.

Today, 44-year-old Joseph Mignola, Jr. is Assistant Director of Public Health in San Francisco. He attributes his monthly salary of $1548 to having had the opportunity of higher education.

Mignola is holding one of the top public health posts in the city. Under his jurisdiction are the San Francisco General Hospital, Laguna Honda Home and Hassler Health (tuberculosis) Center in Redwood City.

"My motto is that a person needs to apply himself and really do his very best," Mignola said.

"Every student should get as much education as he can. I really got a lot out of City College. I was fortunate, because the classes were small at that time.

"A well-educated student, with dedication, can move forward more quickly beyond college than those persons who didn't have a college education," he emphasized.

Mignola commented that many students in college then were not too ambitious, as is the student's customary attitude today. There were also those who merely drifted along.

As to whether Mignola has reached the pinnacle of success yet, he said, "No. A person should always feel that he's always learning, and has a lot more to learn."

In addition to his present position, Mignola is active in civic affairs here in San Francisco. His pet charity is the United Crusade.

He is married, and the father of two children.

Monetary Middle Man

George Quick Coins Word, Promotes Candy Machines, Prepares Self For Ulcers

By Herm Kligerman

George Wright Quick, Associated Student Finance chairman this semester, has coined a new word to explain his job. It's Gigo!

"I don't think you'll find Gigo in the dictionary," Quick explained. "It's just my personal reflection on the job —Green-stuff In, Green-stuff Out."

He is the middle-man in all monetary transactions between the AS and budgeted campus organizations.

Does Quick take the job seriously? "How can I when most other aspects of student government are taken in a light vein around here?"

Although he professes to be light-hearted about his position, Quick has no patience with those who do not comply with finance rules. "For instance, I froze the funds of 14 campus organizations because they failed to submit an AS card list on time.

"I have no room for complaints, though," he added, "because I asked for the job of Finance Chairman." He stated that Associated Student President Bob Roddick gave him the choice of practically any cabinet post.

Quick is a political-science major, enrolled in 15 and one-half units this semester. However, he still finds ample time to do his duties and has "negotiated" his own personal "office," the outside room of S-147.

He is under close scrutiny there, since Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, shares the room with him.

Besides coining a new word, Quick has devised his own system of gaining more revenue for the AS. He is on a personal campaign to have students use the vending machines around campus more often.

"Every dime deposited in these machines means extra money for the AS," he remarked. Quick hopes to coax the administration into installing more vending machines on campus.

From all indications, Quick is dedicated to his job. When asked what he inevitably hoped to gain from the experience, he retorted: "Ulcers!"

War-Torn Hollywood's Smoothest

Joey Bishop Clowning Finds Television Spot

By Jacqui Hannaford

A visitor to the Joey Bishop television production set soon becomes convinced that it is one of the smoothest running production areas in the war-torn battleground commonly known as Hollywood.

Professionalism and good-humored camaraderie are typical of this working group—Bishop, Abby Dalton, Corbett Monica, Mary Treen, Joe Besser and the production crew.

Asked about his biggest break in show business, Bishop declared, "I think my biggest break in show business was when Frank Sinatra and I were working a club . . . and decided he would tell jokes and I would sing. I haven't seen him since."

Whatever the reason for Bishop's break with The Clan, his success has grown from night club clowning to television comedy, with perhaps more than one offer in musical comedy. While discussing his offer for a musical comedy, Bishop observed "I have the world's worst voice."

Bishop appears to a guest on his TV show production set as a pleasant, well-mannered man who works hard at his profession. His colleagues say that "Bishop's quick mind and delicious sense of humor have aided him in becoming one of the best ad-lib men in the business."

Five days are allotted for the production of one Saturday night show.

During this time, the stars are expected to learn the script(s), plan their blocking, determine the emotional action and connect the story-line motivations.

After the filming the tapes are worked over. Splicing, sound effects and other technical details are taken care of, and then the film is shown about six weeks later.

Script and blocking discrepancies are handled for the most part by the actors themselves. Bishop and Miss Dalton may discuss a scene for several minutes, adding or discarding ideas as each is presented, until reaching their decision.

Miss Dalton's favorite subjects of discourse are her husband and their son Matt, who is also a member of the show, playing the Joey Jr. role.

This combination of star and wife has been deplored by many movie persons as being unwise, but Miss Dalton is considered happily different in this respect.

The production schedule sets Friday for the filming, and Monica, a hard-working, quiet man, presides over the audience warm-up for the show.

Miss Treen and Besser, the two character stars, seem quite normal until they explode in front of the cameras. Both appear casual until the call, "action."

Miss Treen is a conscientious actress whose job it was this session to carry the script in her role of Hilda, the maid.

After-performance mop-up is as interesting as the rehearsal and the performance.

Running Around In Good Ol' Days Meant Just That

By Charlotte Wong

The college's physical fitness program today is nothing compared to that which existed between 1935 and 1940.

The current program requires the bare minimum of a daily run from one building to another, and since the campus includes only five buildings, students are little taxed.

Perhaps a few instructors remember the physical fitness program of the good old days, when the various departments were housed temporarily in from 16 to 21 buildings across town.

One can envision the fine physical condition of those breathless beings who rushed to their morning classes at the University of California Extension Building, 540 Powell Street, and thence to their afternoon classes at Galileo High School.

But in addition, floriculture classes were held at a greenhouse on 23rd avenue, business courses at the then Girls' High School on Scott street and radio-engineering classes at Samuel Gompers Trade School, 22nd and Barlett streets, while the hotel division learned butchering on Brannan street.

Location of the various physical education classes was even more diverse. College students rode horses on Stanyan street, played tennis at the Palace of Fine Arts, bowled on Jones street, rowed at the Marina Yacht Harbor and shot their arrows at Fort Mason. The men swam at a pool on Lombard street while the women dived at the YWCA.

To complete the fun program, one-half of the college library was housed in a Pacific Gas and Electric building while the other half was located at the campus book store on Powell Street; the executive offices and the student bank, meanwhile, were located at Galileo High School.

When this temporary arrangement was begun in Fall, 1935, the college enrollment had hit the 1467 mark, and there were 81 instructors. Today there are 8765 daytime students and more than 275 instructors who will never know the joy, the thrill and the sense of well-being offered by such a program.

Avant Guardsman!

HAVE YOU ever wondered whatever happened to the American spinster? Did you know that in a few years hence, it may be quite hard to find an American woman who has never been a bride? (These questions are — of course — directed to American males. Frenchmen, disregard.)

Right now, of all the nation's females still in their thirties, a whopping 93 per cent had had AT LEAST one husband. This is a record figure in the history of the United States and in the Western world today.

So says the Population Reference Bureau, a research organization specializing in demographic lore.

In contrast, 28 per cent of Frenchwomen between the ages of 25 to 34 are still unwed, as are 18 per cent of the British and a grim 45 per cent of the Irish.

Why then has the old fear of spinsterhood persisted into this age of emancipation? Where are the spinsters of yesteryear (Anne Bronte, Charlotte Bronte, Emily Jane Bronte, Annie Oakley) and why are they vanishing?

One reason for their disappearance is that the modern American woman has turned out to be champion husband-hunter of all times. Haunted — it would seem from the cradle — by the specter of spinsterhood, she gets off to an unprecedentedly early start.

Couples have been observed "going steady" (a term we haven't as yet fully understood) in kindergarten and those who are not so linked in their teens are considered freaks.

Actually, no woman can be classed as a chronic spinster so long as she can plausibly celebrate her 39th birthday, a circumstance which depends largely on the caliber of the beautician and plastic surgeon she can afford.

In order not to alarm any potential spinsters or their parents, we'll shift our conversation to a more pleasant subject, dancing, a topic City College students seem to enjoy tremendously as can be seen daily in the cafeteria, in classes and in the courtyard.

"You can't swim here," is the order being given teenagers these days in California, but it's not designed to keep the water-wings-only set out of the drink. Shocked school officials have banned the new dance craze, which one official describes as looking "awfully like reproducing the species."

Another school official describes the dance, done to the hard-driving "surfing music," as having "a considerable amount of body gyrations . . . pretty free-and-easy hip movement and shoving the pelvis back and forth at close range." Up above, hand movements are supposed to be pantomime versions of motions on a surfboard. Fortunately, say some observers, there's no body contact involved.

So far, the dance has been banned from school dances in Redwood City and Santa Clara. In Redwood City, students formed a protest picket line in front of the courthouse and announced they'd seek out private clubs to "swim" in. Students, baffled by all the fuss, say the new dance isn't half as bad as some their parents used to do.

Another new dance craze, this time in London, is "the shake," and like all dances, is hard to describe. Old Etonian jazzman Humphrey Lyttelton defines it this way: "Picture yourself with both feet in a tub of concrete; let the concrete set and then try to get out." The resulting head, arm and leg movements would be "the shake."

Two variations of this free-expression movement, "the zizzle," and "the loddy-lo" have a sensational, it-had-to-happen feature: the dancers actually touch each other — but only palm to palm.

Thespians Start Tartuffe Run

Moliere's Play Opens Four-Night Stand In Theater

Moliere's Tartuffe, a comedy depicting a hypocritical religious devotee, opens at 8 o'clock tonight in the theater, James Haran, director of the production, announced yesterday.

The show will run through Saturday.

Making his theater debut, Bill Gamble will portray the hypocrite Tartuffe. Gamble also painted the sets for the production.

Adding part of the feminine interest to the play, Andrea Fulton appears in the role of a witty and outspoken maid. Coming from Lowell High School, Miss Fulton is a second semester student.

Capturing major roles in all her dramatic endeavors, Miss Fulton was seen last semester as Mrs. Smith in The Bald Soprano and as Winifred in Impromptu.

Not unfamiliar to campus playgoers is Ken Bachtold who stepped in front of the college's footlights four semesters ago.

In Tartuffe, Bachtold is seen as Orgon, a man deceived by the pseudo-pious hypocrite.

PLAY TRYOUTS START MONDAY

Tryouts for the next drama production, Beggar On Horseback, are scheduled from 2 to 4 p.m. next Monday through Wednesday in the theater. The play calls for a cast of 40. Back stage help is also needed for this production.

Here from the New York intercollegiate scene is Jeannie Chieffo. Assuming the role of Orgon's wife, she plays Elmire who is the object of Tartuffe's attempted seduction.

Taking part in much drama in New York, Miss Chieffo has acting experience here as well. She was also seen in the Madwoman of Chaillot as the judge.

Lynn Goodrich, associated student vice president and no foreigner to the drama set, will play Madame Pernelle, Orgon's mother. She was seen recently in the college hour production, New Faces of 1927.

Miss Goodrich has had further drama experience. As Madame Pernelle she again carries the role of an older woman, but this time not an insane one.

A new face to be exposed for the first time in a play here is Al Hughes. Hughes, who comes from Missouri, will assume the part of the inevitable subpoena server, Loyall.

Angry and irrepressable is Damis, played by Ray Lynch. Damis, Orgon's son tries to inform his father of the true nature of the scoundrel, Tartuffe, who has deceived Orgon.

Mariane, the shy sweet and obedient daughter of Orgon, is played by Joan Grant, who appeared as one of the madwomen in the Madwoman of Chaillot.

Involved romantically with Mariane is Valare, portrayed by Larry O'Leno. Most recently appearing as Boots Truehearted in the New Faces of 1927, O'Leno has also taken part in other campus productions.

Playing Cleante is Lincoln Paine, who has also previously appeared on the theater stage.

Tartuffe will also introduce the face of a new actress, Grace Murphy, who is cast as the hand maid, Flopote, who has the shortest line in the play, consisting of "If . . ." Even so, Miss Murphy declared, "I just love being on stage."

Associated Student members can see Tartuffe for no charge; admission is $1 for non-AS members and the general public.

Horticulture Move May Be Delayed Until Fall Semester

Moving day for ornamental horticulture to its new building and adjoining greenhouses is not expected until next semester, Harry Nelson, head of the horticulture department, said in a recent interview.

The horticulture building has been completed and has passed city inspection. Three greenhouses and two lath houses, however, have not been finished.

"Not all work is at a standstill, and students are at present planting the slopes surrounding the new building and will soon start work on landscaping the section of land facing Judson avenue, Nelson said.

The horticulture students have also placed plants, flowers and shrubs in containers to be ready for moving.

"At present the horticulture part of the new building is not being used," Nelson said. "The only activities scheduled there are two classes in the building. Neither soil bins nor work rooms are open for use."

When moving is completed, Nelson estimates that his students and movers will have transported between 20,000 and 22,000 plants and shrubs. Last semester the horticulture department had many more plants, but because of moving schedules, they were forced to eut down to fit limited space.

Also expected to be housed in the new greenhouses are more than 3,000 orchids and other assorted plants.

14 Recruits Join Campus Police

Fourteen new recruits and three new officers have been admitted to the Campus Police force this semester, according to Larry Lawson, chairman of the criminology department.

Robert Sola has been appointed Campus Police Chief; James Aligo Deputy Chief and Charles Simms Assistant Deputy.

The 14 recruits are Benjamin Cademarti, Arcadio Carrillo, David Kanisto, Richard Longshore, Walter Potter, Arnold Rosales, James Rowland, George Rudometkin, Sylvester Tracy, Frank Villalon, Henry Wesch, Stephen Willis, Zed Wish, and Fred Mott.

Lawson stated last week, "We are to enforce rules and regulations of the campus, and we need cooperation of all."

Faculty Wives Attempt To Aid Foreign Students

An extensive interviewing campaign by faculty wives began here two weeks ago in an effort to determine interests and problems of foreign students enrolled at the college this semester.

All foreign students will eventually be questioned by the interviewing committee which, so far, is composed of Mrs. Walter Krumm and Mrs. William Rogers, members of the Faculty Wives Association.

Interviews are conducted on campus each Thursday morning.

When the committee becomes aware of a particular problem of an individual foreign student, it will attempt to solve this problem by working closely with local organizations interested in the welfare of international students, such as the Red Cross.

Attempts will be made to provide appropriate housing for students who may have found difficulty in this respect, in addition to planning social activities and suitable outlets for entertainment.

Joseph Jacobsen, faculty sponsor of the International Relations Club here, originated the idea of such a campaign because the foreign student population at the college is increasing semester after semester.

Sorry Gertrude, It's Barbara!

Contrary to a picture-story published on Page 3 of The Guardsman last week, Miss Reardon is actually the co-winner of the Bank of America award.

Miss Adams was erroneously named both in the picture caption and story as the recipient, along with Sophia Tso—picture and name correct.

As it turned out, Miss Adams gained some free publicity. Only Miss Reardon, herself, her acquaintances and the scholarship committee recognized the mistake. Unless, however, Miss Adams and Miss Reardon have a strikingly similar likeness.

SCTA Schedules Talk On Fisher Bill March 19

Dr. Charles Hamilton will speak to members of the Student California Teachers Association on provisions of the Fisher Bill during College Hour Thursday, March 19, in C-269, according to Bernard Liacuna, president of SCTA.

Hamilton, who is from the California Teachers Association, is in charge of Teacher's Education and Professional Standards.

The Fisher Bill is concerned with changes in public school teacher credentialing.

Sponsor of the SCTA is Bev Pasquaiettl, photography instructor.

Llacuna invited all students interested in the field of edncation to attend this event.

Council Elects Mike Garabedian, Arch Carrillo And Steve Willis To Vacant Frosh, Soph Seats

By Ann Wells

Student Council last week installed Mike Garabedian, Steve Willis and Arch Carrillo to vacant freshman and sophomore seats on council and recorded nine campus organizations still with frozen budgets.

Filling the freshman vacancy is Garabedian. Carrillo and Willis complete the list of sophomore members. They are presently serving their respective classes at the twice weekly meetings.

George Quick, finance chairman, reported that as of March 3, nine clubs had not yet filed their associated student membership lists. He also warned that budgets for all organizations on campus must be submitted by Tuesday, March 17. Failure to do so could cancel their finance requests for the fall semester, he warned.

Associated Women Student President Wardene Oliver announced that the seven officers of the organization have been elected.

They are Carol Parnow, vice president; Kathy Gonzales, recording secretary; Esther Szames, corresponding secretary; Miriam Petranker, treasurer; Mary Tejo, historian; Barbara Flahaven, fashion coordinator, and Virginia Young, public relations.

Mary Jane Super, freshman member of Student Council and Larry Casalengo, rally commissioner, urged council members as well as all other students to support the college teams at athletic events, whether on campus or at other colleges.

They stressed the fact that the various teams feel much more confident with a rooting section behind them.

Charles Simms, Campus Police representative, informed council that from now on, parking permits will be issued during College Hour only.

Terry Ellis, concert and lecture series chairman, announced that a lecture, concerned with alcohol and narcotic control, will be given today in health classes and again during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

Sophomore councilman Joe Miller requested that all students planning to participate in the formation of the Student-Faculty Relations committee inform him or Miss Ellis.

Alcohol Subject Of C-Hour Event

A. G. Hanners, director of Education for the Council on Alcohol Problems, will speak here during College Hour tomorrow in the theater on Alcohol and Young People.

"Hanners is one of the best authorities in the United States on alcohol problems," Roy Burkhead, of the college's health department, stated recently.

"This lecture will not be a mere recitation of facts and statistics," Burkhead said, "but a fresh, realistic appraisal of the alcohol problems of our young people."

Each year, Hanners speaks to hundreds of school assemblies, classes, community groups, service clubs, churches, Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and other groups.

A graduate of the Yale School of Alcohol Studies, and the Rutgers Alumni School, Hanners is also Vice President of the Association for the Advancement of Instruction on Alcohol and Narcotics. In addition, he is on the faculty of the University of California School of Alcoholism, and the Alcohol Education Institute in Washington, D.C.

Mile Of Dimes Drive Collection Totals $271

Phi Beta Delta fraternity, in cooperation with the March of Dimes, concluded its Mile of Dimes on February 27 with $271 collected, $59.00 short of last year's collection figure, Duane Underwood, Phi Beta Delta president, announced Friday.

A rally was also held in College Hour, during which members of the Ram basketball team and other students were photographed by San Francisco newspapers and local television stations.

Students were also photographed putting money on the tape which was strung from the Ramporium up the path leading to Cloud and Science Halls.

Coverage of the drive was shown that evening on news broadcasts.

THERE IS NOTHING abstract about a grade. An A is an A, and an F is an F. A grade never changes. It's either good or bad.

Once upon a time, not too long ago, it was possible for a person to look at a painting and pass judgment on it.

Granted, the person evaluating the painting was far from an expert in the field of art, but it was easy for him to decide in his mind whether a painting was good or bad.

In the good old days of art, a sky was painted blue with white clouds, and a tree had brown bark with green leaves.

Now, with the ultra-modern design in homes, furniture and cars, art also has gone ultra-modern or abstract as the artists prefer to refer to it.

The importance of art and the aesthetic value connected with it cannot be overlooked or underestimated. People love beauty, and art for the most part is beautiful.

The numerous art appreciation courses offered at the college testify to the fact that art is becoming increasingly important. Or is it? Is it really at all possible for a person to begin to evaluate abstract paintings?

No wonder so many students nowadays decide to major in art. It just about takes four years in college with an intensive study of the abstracts, for a person to figure out what the painting is!

Yes, sometimes the creators of these paintings have the courage to label their masterpieces, but after all, that is the least that they can do!

Four polka dot squares, a block of blue spots, and some odd symmetrical designs could just as easily be interpreted by the novice onlooker as a man walking his dog, an earthquake, a gorilla shaving, or some such other absurd thing.

With the increasing emphasis being placed on mathematics and science, where symbols have to be concrete, how does abstract art expect to last?

Some one of these days, a young aspiring senator trying to make a name for himself may just decide to have a senate fact-finding board investigate what abstract art really is!

Perhaps, there is some genuine therapeutic value attached to abstracts, but if this is the case, the paintings might confuse rather than help some poor defenseless person!

There must be someone somewhere, interested in startjng a movement to bring back the plain, simple and concrete paintings.

Or perhaps, with the constant race-for-space attitude prevailing, everything is supposed to be "way-out." In that case, abstract art is definitely in!

Yes, sometimes the creators of these paintings have the courage to label their masterpieces, but after all, that is the least that they can do!

Four polka dot squares, a block of blue spots, and some odd symmetrical designs could just as easily be interpreted by the novice onlooker as a man walking his dog, an earthquake, a gorilla shaving, or some such other absurd thing.

With the increasing emphasis being placed on mathematics and science, where symbols have to be concrete, how does abstract art expect to last?

Some one of these days, a young aspiring senator trying to make a name for himself may just decide to have a senate fact-finding board investigate what abstract art really is!

Perhaps, there is some genuine therapeutic value attached to abstracts, but if this is the case, the paintings might confuse rather than help some poor defenseless person!

There must be someone somewhere, interested in starting a movement to bring back the plain, simple and concrete paintings.

Or perhaps, with the constant race-for-space attitude prevailing, everything is supposed to be "way-out." In that case, abstract art is definitely in!

Netters Top San Mateo, 5-2, In Conference Opener, Face San Jose In Friday 13 Meet

By Mike Smith

Ram netters trounced the College of San Mateo Bulldogs, 5 to 2, last Friday on San Mateo's courts for their first victory of the 1964 conference season.

Last Friday, Coach Diederichsen's crew swept the singles 4 to 1 as the Rams won all the singles except the opener. The first match was lost by Vince Chinn who has been handicapped by a sore shoulder for a week.

Al Brambila took the second match from John Reid in the third set at 6-3. The next singles was won by Ben Levy, 6-3, 6-4. Lou Engelstein smeared his opponent 6-1 and 6-0 in the fourth match. The last singles was won by Fred Suessman.

Vince Chinn and Al Brambila lost the Rams' first conference doubles match of the season at 6-1 and 6-2. The second doubles was won by the Ben Levy-Fred Suessman combo.

This Friday, March 13, the Rams will be gunning for their second conference win at San Jose City College.

The City College netters won a respectable fifth place among 14 teams in intercollegiate tennis competition held on the San Jose State courts two weeks ago.

The four-day tournament, February 27 to March 1, was won by the Stanford Frosh led by singles champion John McCabe. Foothill College came in second with University of California Frosh placing third and San Mateo finishing fourth.

The Rams' rookie doubles team of Fred Suessman and Lou Engelstein went into the intercollegiate tournament semifinals only to lose to the Foothill College Owls' combo, Mac Grown and Rodney Kop.

The Rams, defending champs of the Golden Gate Conference, can expect a real threat to their title.

As coach Roy Diederichsen put it, "Foothill appears to be really tough this year, particularly since last month when the Owls beat American River, considered to have one of the finest teams in the state, 6-1."

In a tough match against an equally tough Santa Rosa squad, the Rams managed to squeak by to a 5-4 victory. Singles were won by Rams Engelstein, Vince Chinn and Mike Price. Victorious pairs in the doubles were Engelstein and Chinn, followed by Price and Suessman.

The Rams' only loss in the practice matches thus far was against an awesome Stanford Frosh, a 5-4 defeat.

The singles were split, 3-3, with Stanford's Craig Baise, Bryan Leck and McCabe taking the first half. The fourth, fifth, and sixth sets were taken by Rams Ben Levy, Engelstein, and Price.

In the doubles it was Baise-McCabe downing Chinn-Suessman, Leck-Marti topping Levy-Brambila, and Engelstein-Price defeating Horby-Murphy.

Spikers To Face Comets In Second Conference Meet

By Pete Franklin

Ram spikers, in their second conference meet of the 1964 season, host the Comets of Contra Costa at 3 p.m. Friday in the Ram stadium.

On the basis of the first nonconference outing against Modesto, the Ram club shows some prowess, although, as Coach Lou Vasquez put it, "Ram marks are nothing outstanding yet."

In the Modesto meet, Ram vet Tom Gardner turned in two firsts, showing :9.9 in the 100, and :22.7 in the 220. Ozzie Norris took first in the 440 with a :50.8, and Rich Klemmer ran the half mile in 2:01.6.

Returning miler Gene Plotkin took first in his event with 4:31.9, and placed third in the two-mile with 10:-38.0. The Rams, however, swept the event when Mike Conroy and Norris each ran 10:36.2

Modesto swept the low-hurdles event with 16 flat as the best time, and in the high-hurdles event the best Ram effort was Forest Keith's second-place :17.1.

Modesto also took all three places in the newly included 330-hurdles event.

In the 440-relay, the Rams barely edged Modesto, :44.7 to :45.0, and in the mile relay won only by the margin of 3:38 to 3:39.5.

Field events found Leroy Woods placing close second in the high jump with the same mark of 6'2", the same as the winner. Modesto took first and second in the broad jump with Ram Jim Dunson's third-place 19-foot-plus effort somewhat short of Modesto's 21'11" mark.

Pat Lewis heaved the shot 50'6" for a second to Modesto's 51'11", but got his own back in the discus, taking first with a lob of 154'11". Modesto swept the new triple jump (hop, skip, jump) event, and unanimously took the pole vault with a 12-foot top mark.

Meet final scores were Rams, 79, Modesto, 57. City College took nine first, ten second and four third places.

Rams Burn Oaks, 75-44, Off For State Tourney

By Fred Wales

Displaying their championship form, the Ram cagers buried the hapless Menlo Oaks, 75-44, last Friday before a capacity crowd of 2,500 at College of San Mateo's Gymnasium.

The win sends the Rams off to Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut, California, a suburb of Los Angeles, to represent the conference in the State Tournament which starts tomorrow and runs through Saturday.

Leaving tonight for Walnut, the Rams will have their toughest game tomorrow when they face powerful Riverside City College in the tourney opener.

Riverside is ranked No. 1 in the nation on the basis of their 30-0 record but will be hurting due to the injury of their 6-8 center, Bob Rule, in an automobile accident.

Should the Rams get by Riverside they will reign as Tourney favorites with their 27-2 record and No. 2 national ranking.

Friday night was all Rams as they peppered the basket with a blistering 70 percent of their shots in the first half.

Four of the starting five Rams scored within the first five minutes of what started out as a tight defensive ball game.

Rich Henderson started the scoring with a short jumper followed by Art Adams, Jerry Chandler, and Ken Scalmanini. At this point the Rams led 11-4, and had missed only one shot.

Menlo behind Dick Burke closed to 14-13 for their closest score of the long night.

When Menlo appeared to be coming to life, Adams and Henderson stole passes and made lay-ups to pile up the 34-20 halftime lead.

Adams led the first half scoring with 10 points followed by Chandler and Henderson with nine and Scalmanini with six.

Firing at will, the San Franciscans moved to 50-26, with 15 minutes in the game and 57-32 starting the final quarter.

Then the reserves, Brandon Chappell, Dennis Sweeney, Jim Smith, Rich Mertschie and Charlie Luke impressed as they maintained the huge point spread to the buzzer for the 75-44 rout.

Golfers Open Season With Oakland Tee-Off

The Ram golfers tee off against Oakland City College today after coming off a fairly successful practice schedule.

This year's team will have the services of three "old pros" returning from last year. Returnees include Bruce Bair, Rich Orme and Mike Selsnik, number one man on the team.

Coach Grover Klemmer is also counting on some promising freshmen, a few of whom are Pet Eden, Doug McCorkel, Mike Moore, Jim Schroder and Mike Soden.

"The team is expected to fair well this season, but it is still too early to make any real predictions," Klemmer stated.

Again this year, San Mateo and Chabot are expected to be the spoilers of the league as they both have top men returning.

Recreation Association Starts Bowling League

The Recreation Association is sponsoring a bowling league on Mondays at 3 p.m. at the Castle Lanes.

All fraternities, sororities, clubs and organizations are invited to enter teams. Details will be given by Frances Galloway, RA adviser, in the women's gymnasium.

RA clubs and activities began last week. Clubs include: bowling and modern dance, Mondays at 3 p.m.; fencing, Tuesday and Thurdays at 11 a.m.; folk dance, Tuesdays at 3 p.m., and social dance Thursdays at 3 p.m.

RA officers for this semester are: Fran Richardson, president; Donna Lleces, vice president; Irma Tabares, secretary; Rosemary Donaldson, treasurer, and Don Petersen, historian.

Local Nine Meets Vikings In Saturday Doubleheader

With the season opener against Oakland under their belts, the Ram nine warms up for its next three conference games, facing a double-header against Diablo Valley, starting at 10 a.m. at Balboa Park Saturday, followed next Tuesday by a tilt at Chabot College.

Playing time there will be 3 p.m.

This is the first year that doubleheaders will be played in the Golden Gate Conference, much to the dismay of the Rams. Double-headers should add to the Rams batting problems.

The Rams, successful only once in their first four preseason outings, last week found themselves unable to mesh as a team. Defeated all three times by one-run decisions, the club attributes its misfortune to a possible pitching deficit.

The team was downed by Stanford as the Braves, down 5-0 until the sixth inning, pummeled the local hurlers for eight runs in that frame. The Rams came back with four in their half of the seventh and held a 9-8 edge through the ninth.

The Ram seventh showed consecutive singles by Butch Bussanick, Clarence Jenkins and Bill Gianguinto. Al Mould was walked, and Pete Giovanola crashed a three bagger, the final Ram threat.

But Stanford, not through yet, banged out two more runs in the last of the ninth to win, 9-8. Pitcher Ken Dyer received the loss. Bussanick collected three hits on the day including a double. Russ Kunkle went two for four with a triple, and Gus Geraldi picked up a pair of singles.

Ram efforts included Mike Dunne three for four, Don Kunkle two for five, and Gianguinto who hit two in four trips.

"In the Stanford game we hit well enough, but they hit our pitchers too well," Coach Ernie Domecus commented, "and against San Jose the pitching was good, but we didn't hit the ball as well."

RAMBLINGS Owl Speakum With Forked Tongue

By Fred Wales

IN THE February 14 issue of the Foothill Sentinel, their paper's aspiring young sports editor, who shall remain anonymous to avoid embarrassment, began his column with these words, "We don't like to go around shooting arrows into sacred cows..."

From this point on his arrows hit the bull, calf and the barn door.

The column concerned recruiting in general, and City College of San Francisco's "recruiting" in particular.

According to this Sports Editor, "Many (sic.) CCSF starters (on the basketball team) are 'homesteading' here from across the nation." After a long tirade he sums it up, saying, "that the only reason he is not making any assertions is because he has no proof!" It just seems strange to him that men from New York and South Carolina should happen to appear both in San Francisco and at City College.

This may seem funny to him, but to anyone who has taken the time to find out the truth, it's ridiculous.

This college has maintained a policy of academic excellence combined with athletic achievement. As far as favoring athletes or recruiting is concerned, the record is clean.

San Francisco is a cosmopolitan city and as such draws students from all over the world, including the United States.

For athletes who arrive in San Francisco, City College offers a chance for a new life, and, if they choose, for a college education.

The fact that two members of the Ram championship basketball team happen to be from out of state is hardly a basis for charges of recruiting.

To stop this tale before it grows any larger, and for students interested, here is some background information on the athletes apparently in question by the Sentinel.

Art Adams, the Rams' veteran forward and leading scorer, was born and attended school in Greenville, South Carolina. In his senior year in high school, he was a starting guard on the basketball team and at season's end was the team's leading scorer with a 20-point game average.

After graduation from Sterling High School (in Greenville, South Carolina), he turned down numerous basketball scholarship offers and in 1959 came to Oakland, California, to live with a brother.

His main ambition was not to play basketball but to study art and become an artist.

In 1960 he came to San Francisco and attended the Academy of Arts. The following year he dropped out of the art school because of lack of funds and a need for an expanded educational background.

Forced to work for a year to build up sufficient reserve to return to school, Adams enrolled at City College in Spring, 1962, in the following semester tried out for the team—and Number 44 emerged.

Since then he has been a starter for the Rams and always a high scorer. A knee injury, sustained at the State Tourney, has often been noted as one of the reasons the team lost in the semifinals last year.

As to the future, Adams intends to return to the Art Academy next semester to pursue a career in commercial art.

While here, and not "drawing," he had time to play basketball, but once he starts drawing — NO MORE BASKETBALL.

Jerry Chandler is the other starter referred to as "homesteader."

Born in Bloomington, Indiana, Chandler attended Bloomington High School and in his senior year averaged 19-points a game. As a result, he was selected as All-Conference guard and ranked 12th in Indiana.

The next year he led Indiana State University to a 22-3 record and continued his 19-point average.

Uncle Sam beat out ISU the next season, and Chandler was stationed in the Far East as a member of the Air Force.

Two years later he was stationed at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The next year, at the World Air Force Tournament at Charleston AFB in South Carolina, his team won the title, and he was selected as the Most Valuable Player and as a member of the All-Air Force team.

In 1962 his enlistment expired, and he married a San Francisco girl and made the city his home.

In the spring of 1963 he enrolled at City College.

Talented is the word that best describes him as a basketball player. He can hit from outside and dribble like a guard, yet is gifted with a magic touch at tip-ins and follow-ups, when at center.

After leaving City College, Chandler will also be hanging up his basketball uniform. An edueation major, he is convinced that basketball offers would have to be exceptional to draw his time away from his wife, Kaye, and his teaching career.

At The Sentinel's charges, both players laughed and remarked that they could give The Sentinel a long list of hardships they suffered by playing basketball for the Rams.

Maybe the young Foothill sports chief should supplement his journalism with a course in archery.

Speech, Mandatory AS Card Move Climax Meet

By Charlotte Wong

A speech on the status quo of junior colleges and a resolution on the allowance of mandatory student associated cards on campus were subjects discussed at the Area Six Conference of the California Student Government Association Saturday at the College of San Mateo.

Dr. Max Rafferty, California superintendent of public instruction, emphasized in his speech the restlessness of junior college faculty due to organization and to snobbish attitudes of upper division colleges toward those of the lower division.

"The biggest single problem facing independent and district junior colleges is their inability thus far to reach a common, unifying ground," he said.

Solutions would include the formulation of a well-staffed, centralized agency which would coordinate and voice the colleges' views and the initiation of a method by which to gage the motivation of entering students and thus save wasted effort and money, he commented.

California's role as a pioneer in the innovation of junior colleges and their college preparatory and vocational programs was also stressed by Rafferty.

To provide for an exchange of ideas in specific fields, ten workshops were held during the day, from which resulted 14 suggested resolutions, 10 of which were passed.

Among those passed was a resolution from the Area Six Presidents' Workshop which resolved that the conference recommend that the CJCSGA recommend to the state legislature that mandatory AS cards be allowed on junior college campuses for full-time students.

Such an allowance would augment the colleges' AS funds and lessen the burden on taxpayers, members of the workshop reasoned. Another resolution recommended the establishment of a commissioner of academics in each college to advance cultural activities, seminars and student tutoring services.

"The conference enabled our 21 delegates to gain a broader insight into government. The delegates' ideas will be looked into later when their reports are turned in, and some suggestions will be applied to the everyday problems of the college," AS President Bob Roddick said.

Representing this college as chairman and moderator, respectively, were Phyllis Webb and Dean of Women Mary Golding at the Organizations Workshop and Vince Contreras and AS Adviser Sherm Elworthy at the Cultural Activities Workshop.

Other workshops concerned AS presidents, internal and external communications, social activities, inter-club councils, finance, judicial systems and foreign students.

This was the second general assembly of Area Six, which was formed in 1962 by the division of California's 70 two-year colleges into eight areas.

Conference chairman was Bob Coleman, AS president of the College of San Mateo. In attendance also were Cabrillo, Monterey Peninsula, Gavilan, Hartnell, San Benito, San Jose and Menlo Colleges.

Drama Department Features Two One-Act Plays Tomorrow

A pair of one-act comedies, Suppressed Desires and The Sandbox, will be presented by the drama department during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, drama instructor Walter Krumm announced Friday.

Suppressed Desires, by Susan Glaspell, is described by Krumm as a "comedy of Freudian-type psychoanalysis." The cast includes William Shattuck as Steven, Grace Murphy as Henrietta and Lynette Fishel in the role of Mabel.

The Sandbox, written by Edward Albee, is a theater-of-the-absurd comedy, according to Krumm.

It features Mike Dobrinski as Daddy; Sandra Turner portraying Mommy; Ray Lynch as the Young Man and Penny Klahn as Grandma.

A clarinetist is also included in the cast to provide certain mood music for this 14-minute drama.

Krumm urged all students to attend the one-day-only performance because he believes Albee to be "one of the best modern dramatists."

Meanwhile, thespians, and those inclined to be, were reminded by Krumm that today is the last day for try-outs for the next drama production, Beggar on Horseback, scheduled for four performances in May.

This Kaufman-Connolly comedy requires a cast of 40, and anyone may try out.

Production director Krumm said, "try-outs will be from 2 to 4 p.m. in the theater, for the last time today."

Also needed are students to assist in production by aiding in set construction and general behind-the-scenes tasks.

James Haran, director of Tartuffe, stated, "Beggar on Horseback is really funny, one of the greatest comedies written in the 20's."

Chamber Choir To Take Part In State Meet On Monday

Members of the Chamber Choir will give a presentation of 20th Century choral music at the California Music Educators' Association State Convention next Monday, March 23, in San Mateo.

Galen Marshall, choir director, said that 15 students chosen from the college's A Cappella Choir comprise the Chamber Choir.

"These students," Marshall said, "are concurrently enrolled in Music 14, a new course this semester at City College. It's an advanced course for members of the A Cappella Choir who wish to sing choral music in a smaller group.

"Our program at the convention meeting," Marshall added, "will include selections by Bartok, Poulenc, Martinu, Pinkham and Barber."

He also mentioned that Dr. John C. Tegnell, chairman of the choral music department at San Francisco State College, will speak at the meeting. His topic will be The Conductor's Obligation to Perform Contemporary Music.

The 15 members of the Chamber Choir are as follows:

Shirley Daigle, Terry Ellis, Kathleen Riley, Lenore Schnitzer, Kari Braehmann-Hanssen, Andrea Fulton, Gertrude Adams, Frances Richardson, Yashiko Nakamura, Ernest Furness, Jon Wood, Walter Hight, Maurice Shum, Donald Dudley and Leon Moniot.

Korean Classical Dancer Performs In College Hour

The music department, in cooperation with Korean students enrolled here, will present Won-Kyung Cho, Korean classical dancer during College Hour, Thursday, April 2, in the theater, Meyer M. Cahn, music department instructor, reported recently.

Cho, using a "dazzling" variety of traditional oriental costumes, will perform a series of classical Korean folk, court and religious dances.

Typical of the type and mood of Chois dances is the Kum Mu (sword dance). It is based on a legend telling of a young 17th century warrior who kills the enemy king, thus saving his country from invasion. The costume is that of an oriental warrior and is authentic even to the swords.

In addition to being a "recognized master" of Korean dance, Cho has received his master's degree from Yonsei University. He has also earned a professorship in Korean language and literature at Yonsei University.

Cho has given dance performances at the National Theater in Seoul, where he helped to teach the Korean classical dance, as well as modern western dance. Before coming to the United States in 1960, Cho served as dance critic for four major Korean newspapers.

In addition to this, Cho has given dance recitals at Carnegie Hall and also at the Seattle World's Fair.

According to the concert series schedule as published, four more concerts are planned, on April 16, May 7, May 14 and May 21.

Two Coeds To Accept Medical Assistant Scholarships Tonight

The recipients of two $50 Medical Assistants Association scholarships, Nancy Ashburn and Carol Parnow will receive their awards tonight.

A dinner-presentation will be held at the San Francisco Medical Association building on Masonic avenue, Harry Joan Tiesselinck, medical assisting instructor, disclosed today.

Miss Ashburn, a transfer student from Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska, hopes someday to be a medical assistant in a private office or a research center. She has had work experience as a nurse's aid and as an obstetrical technican.

A graduate of Mission High School, Miss Parnow is presently vice president of the Associated Women Students organization. Her ambition is to work for a doctor in a hospital, an office or a clinic. She is interested also in pediatrics.

The scholarship, won by Betty Chin, was first presented last June.

Easter Vacation Suspends Classes Until March 30

Easter vacation, the final "break" of this semester for students here, will begin after classes this Friday and continue through Easter Sunday, March 29.

Classes will resume, as usual, on Monday, March 30. From that time until after final examinations, there is a string of 55 college days.

Because of this vacation, too, The Guardsman will take a short break by not publishing its fifth issue of the spring semester until Wednesday, April 8.

Best Dressed Coed Finalists To Model At Fashion Show

Models at the Associated Women Student fashion show-tea will be the 12 semifinalists of the college's Best-Dressed Coed Contest, Wardene Oliver, AWS president, disclosed last week.

The tea will be held at 3 p.m. Thursday, April 9, in Smith Hall.

Final selection of models on March 12 was based on the individual's carriage, poise, expression and appearance.

The 12 are Cynthia Colt, Pat Flahavan, Brenda Goldstein, Lillian Goussen, Kathy Grable, Nina Jacobs, Adelle Kuchinski, Susan Ng, Susan Schwampe, Clara Silva, Ruby Suilivan and Constance Turner.

In the event that a coed might be unable to model, nine women will be on hand to substitute. Among the nine runnersup are Carol Anselmi, Nancy Gaskin, Dixine Gillispie, Ceciley Greene, Virginia Jeanminette, Barbara Kontis, Carol Landini, Judy Moss and Emma Salisbury.

Judging model entrants during the second tryouts last Friday were George Stewart and Kay Sloan, business instructors, and Lene Johnson, physical education instructor, among others. Also present were entrants in last spring's contest.

Held semi-annually in honor of the Bay Area's high school students, the fashion show-tea's theme is Daisies Will Tell. Commentator for the 11 Liebes fashions to be worn by the coeds is Maree Stuber, store representative.

The name of the Best-Dressed Coed will be announced at the function.

Working closely with H. Liebes will be coeds Barbara Flahavan, AWS fashion coordinator, and Margaret Wallace and Lilli Goussen, AWS dress coordinators.

Chairmen include Marsha Marcotte for programs, for serving Beryn Knoller, for models Claudette Fowler and for set-up Joanne Chiapani and Joyce Holeman. In charge of refreshments is Miss Anselmi.

Card Sales Contest Ends; Purchases Now Only At Student Bank

The Associated Student card sales contest has officially ended, but cards can still be purchased at the student bank in Smith Hall for the rest of the semester, Phyllis Webb, card sales chairman, stated last week.

The card sales to date total 2050, Miss Webb said.

This is 350 short of the goal of 2400 cards set by student government. All finances of the Associated Students are based on the assumption that the card sales will reach their quota. This means that the AS will have $1750 less than they counted on.

Peace Corps Seeks Experienced And Able Secretaries

The Peace Corps is now opening a new program to experienced secretaries.

Volunteers for the program should have secretarial training and at least two years of working experience.

Volunteer secretaries usually will be office managers and head secretaries for small overseas offices in more than 40 countries. In their assignments, secretaries can expect to meet foreign government and United States officials, a Corps source declared.

A three-month training period, which, he explained, will be conducted in the Washington, D.C. area is scheduled in June, where volunteer secretaries will receive training in administration and foreign languages.

Area studies in relation to other Peace Corps groups will also be covered.

Previously, the source said, the Peace Corps was forced to hire secretaries for overseas assignments. Recently, however, the Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver suggested this special program to Congress, where "it was approved with enthusiasm."

Regulations provide that Peace Corps volunteers must be United States citizens. Volunteers, including the new secretaries, receive living expenses, transportation, medical care, plus $75 per month during their service in the corps. The salary, however, is held for them in this country until they return.

Members of the Peace Corps are expected not only to live as do the natives of the countries to which they are sent, but also to adjust themselves to each country's standards.

Those interested in this special secretarial volunteer program may write for information to Secretary Recruitment, Peace, Washington, D.C., 20525. Anyone else interested in the Peace Corps, other than the secretarial program, may obtain questionnaires on the first floor of Science Hall near room 160.

Master Plan Sets Lower Quota For Transfer Students

Limitation of the number of students transferring to San Francisco State College with fewer than 60 units was set recently at 2100 for Fall, 1964, by the new Master Plan for Higher Education, John Brady, coordinator of student welfare here, announced last week.

The plan also will limit the number of transfer students to a maximum of 600 for the Spring, 1965, semester at the same college.

Although the exact figures are not available, this will be a considerable cutback for admission of transfer students in comparison with previous semesters.

The Master Plan for Higher Edueation was initiated at the November, 1963, meeting of the Trustees of the California State Colleges.

San Francisco State college will consider enrollees on a first-come, first-serve basis. Students at all admission levels were urged by Brady last week to submit applications, test scores, transcripts, application fees and all required admission materials before the deadline dates.

Deadline dates established for the 1964-65 academic year at San Francisco State are June 1 for lower division students planning to transfer next fall, and December 15 for filing of all admissions materials for transfer next spring.

Students here who will have completed 60 acceptable transfer units by the end of this semester are expected to file applications by December 15 for fall semester transfer and by January 4, 1965, for Spring semester transfer.

Mural Contest Ends This Week

The mural contest for advertising art and design students, sponsored by the California Seed Association, will end this week.

William Davis, chairman of the college's advertising art department, said that finished design entries must be submitted no later than Friday, March 20.

"Seeds For The World is the theme of the contest," Davis said. "The winning mural will be used as a decoration for the International Seed Growers Convention, to be held in June at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco.

"The mural itself is to be made entirely with seeds, which will be glued on to wood panels," he added. "It must be 8 feet by 12 feet in size, and any colors may be used, since seeds can be dyed; the California Seed Association emblem must be incorporated in the design in some minor way."

The contest is the result of a $500 commission for a mural, donated in January by the California Seed Association to the college's department of advertising art and design. First prize is $35, second prize, $10 and third prize, $5.

Success Story Series—Don Constine

Twist Of Fate Makes Him U. S. Commissioner

By Herm Kilgerman

If it hadn't been for a twist of fate while he was a student here in 1943, Donald B. Constine might never have gained the "valuable training which has aided me since graduation and continues to do so in my present position as United States Commissioner."

Constine is one of six full-time U.S. Commissioners in the nation.

"During registration in the fall of 1943, I was working on my class schedule and just by chance signed up for a beginning course in journalism," Constine recalled. His "sweetheart," now his wife, June Feigenbaum, was also on The Guardsman staff.

He enrolled in journalism in his second semester at City College. Previously, Constine was interested in dentistry.

"Some of my happiest days were spent in the journalism office," he continued. "The practical experience and training I received was invaluable to me.

"For instance, I learned how to present facts in a clear, concise manner which is very important in my job today since I must prepare reports that are easily comprehensible for juries and other bodies," Constine emphasized.

On the staff of the college's newspaper, The Guardsman, Constine served as Editor-In-Chief for three semesters.

"I did just about everything on the paper, from writing stories to making-up the news pages," Constine stated.

He also covered preliminary meetings of the then newly-formed United Nations and managed to keep his grade-point average high enough to become a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide scholastic honor society.

"I didn't participate in too many extracurricular activities on campus," Constine said, "because there weren't that many during the period of the war years when I was a student.

"At that time, students were not preoccupied with political and cultural changes. Their main interest was getting out into the world and making a living," he explained.

After being graduated from City College in 1945, Constine immediately entered Hastings School of Law. He graduated in June, 1949, took the bar examinations in October and was admitted into the profession in January, 1950, at the age of 23.

"I'm not sure if going directly into Hastings from City College was the wisest thing I could have done," Constine said. "I might have benefitted from more study at a four-year institution.

"I also think that in the beginning I might have been better accepted in the profession if I had had a more extensive educational background."

What was Constine's 'big break?' "To tell the truth I'm still waiting for it," he quipped; "but, if I had to choose something I would have to say my experience working as an assistant U. S. attorney in the Federal Courts was the turning point."

He held this position for the ten years prior to his appointment as U.S. Commissioner.

"I gained legal maturity and valuable experience in this job," he added.

Constine's present duties are similar to those of a Municipal Judge in state courts but on a Federal level. He is also one of the few full-time commissioners in the country, and therefore he does not conduct a private practice.

DON CONSTINE, U.S. Commissioner.

"I meet City College graduates frequently, especially in court," Constine said. "Don't get me wrong; they're not the defendants but good lawyers who began their higher education at City College."

Constine, when not in his office in the Post Office Building, is at home with his wife and two daughters, aged 10 and 15. For recreation, the family enjoys boating and skiing.

He is also editor of the Scottish Rite organization's monthly bulletin. "My journalistic training is valuable in this respect, too," he deelared. "Once in a while I write stories for the bulletin, but my biggest enjoyment comes in actually making up the pages."

Vacation Days Can Be Fun When Kept Within The Law

ANOTHER HOLIDAY stares us in the face, a holiday which is near and dear to the hearts of college students but whose very name strikes terror into the minds of law enforcement officers across the nation. Easter week is approaching.

According to most persons, Easter week is the time of the year traditionally set aside by many a college student to indulge in such extracurricular activity as disturbance of the peace in general. All of which is outside the law, naturally. But, according to some, the colleges must have a break and be able to relax, and this seems to be the most popular way of relaxing every Spring.

How such an irreligious tradition got started in a time of such religious significance is not quite understandable, but its origin is irrelevant. The important thing is that these happenings have occurred in the past, they will occur next week, and will no doubt occur next year.

Attempts are being made by various groups across the country to route the over-exuberance of the college student in the spring to more useful and less violent avenues. These attempts will probably fail but through no fault of their originators. These groups simply lack the organization needed to hold down a howling pack of animals.

This type of organization is only gained through time and experience and the problem of Easter week and college students has only been considered serious for the past several years. A few more seasons, and noticeable results will probably come about.

But we are concerned with the present, and the Department of Commerce Weather Bureau reports that the San Francisco Bay Area will enjoy clear skies and warm temperatures for the coming holiday. While this fact is welcomed by the majority of the population, the police are getting ready for a full-scale crusade.

College students will be flocking to the beaches by the thousands and, from past experience, this just might mean trouble.

If trouble is to be assumed, it must also be assumed that students from this college could be mixed up in it in some way or another. They might be in a crowd and they might feel a social obligation to go along with whatver might be happening. However, there have not been too many times in history when the crowd, or mob, has been on the right side of the law.

By the time a person enrolls in an institution of higher education, he is expected to know right from wrong. This same person is young, however, and he feels a compulsion to "blow off a little steam" now and then. We expect this person to have gained enough experience in life to know how to go out and have a good time and still stay within the limits of the law and accepted standards of conduct.

Some innocents will probably suffer this coming holiday also. Those concerned with the keeping of the peace will be wary of any young people and may harness them with seemingly unfair and unwarranted restrictions. We can only ask the people concerned to hold their tempers if confronted with this sort of situation.

For the person who plans to go off on a rampage in the coming week, we would say go ahead, it is your own neck, if he were the only person affected by his actions. Unfortunately, he is not. If a college student gets into trouble, the name of his college is invariably dragged into it, thereby throwing discredit upon the whole institution. The student usually has a family to consider, also, but rarely does.

Let us make the point clear that we are urging no student to go into seclusion for Easter week or to board himself up for fear he might get into trouble. Go to the beaches, to the mountains . . . anywhere and have fun! This is what holidays are for. But if a student does not think he will be able to have fun and stay within the law, he would be better off staying at home.

Skiing Fad On Upsurge Despite Broken Limbs

The popularity of skiing is in evidence everywhere around campus this semester. Students with bandaged and damaged limbs are gamely limping to classes. Cars, sporting ski racks with ski equipment attached, are often mud-splattered and dented.

Most of the owners of these cars and their various equipment belong to one of the newest clubs on campus, the Ram Ski Club.

Frannie Blum, ski club historian, stated recently that the membership at present exceeds 50 active members and 30 nonactive, and that more students are applying every day.

Cost is nominal, with a semesterly membership fee of only $1 plus a 50-cent initiation fee.

Activities include trips to the snow most every week-end plus swimming and skating parties. Next week, March 22 to 24, this club will join forces, skiing with International Relations Club and Engineering Club members.

Some sites for the skiers on week-ends are Soda Springs, Sugar Bowl and Squaw Valley.

In addition to skiing, the club offers many social activities. Coeds can take their "pick" of dates—the current ratio is two men to each woman member of the club.

These club members also save a considerable sum of money through group activity. A large discount is available at the local sports shop on Taraval street. Payment of as little as $4.50 a week rents poles, skis and boots.

Although many members are in the process of learning, two are ski patrol members in the Squaw Valley area. For students wishing to learn or improve their skiing, there is always someone who will coach them.

Through proper coaching, the casualty list is kept to a minimum.

So far this year there have been only two coeds in casts and one in need of surgery. This is considered a good record, because as many as 40 students may go skiing in one week-end.

Miss Blum added that the club is congenial and friendly. A local bus company, which transports these skiers, also supplies chaperones as an added help to these students. During meetings on campus, Robert Quigly, business instruetor, is faculty sponsor.

"Since this is a comparatively new organization," Miss Blum explained, "there will be many new activities held during this semester.

"Among them is a contest to select a club pin." The entrant winning this contest, she said, will receive a "substantial" prize. —By P. G.

College Confabs Lead To Ideas, Togetherness

As representatives from this college journeyed to San Mateo for the Area Six Conference last Saturday, some may have questioned the trip's value.

There is proof on campus, however, of the benefits to be gained from a free exchange of ideas with other colleges. The Ramporium, for example, was built as a result of a 1948 survey of 23 two-year colleges in California.

It was learned from this survey that college supplies provided 25 to 50 per cent of the gross sales at San Mateo, Santa Monica, Long Beach and Santa Rosa Colleges.

The study showed also that at the time a number of college bookstores had soda fountains, but this college was prevented from following suit by a Board of Education ruling which said that soda fountains were under the operations of the cafeteria.

When planned in 1948, John Brady, then assistant dean of men, now coordinator of student welfare, and a booster for the establishment of a campus store, told students that the prospect of selling books was not regarded favorably because of the large chanee of loss. As figured by Associated Student Finance Chairman George Quick, the bookstore today augments Associated Student funds by approximately $20,000.

The Ramporium is not the only projeet which developed from the example set by other colleges. The most reeent development has been the activities calendar, compiled and distributed by the AS Publicity Committee.

The incentive and inspiration for this project was partially provided by the calendar distributed by Foothill College at the Area Six Conference held here in October, 1963.

To fit the maxim, two heads are better than one. —By C. W.

Avant Guardsman!

By Michel Janicot

NEXT WEEK is set aside for vacation (what's that?) or simply, "extracurricular activities." Some students are talking of Fort Lauderdale, others of Ensenada, Squaw Valley, Oakland??? (Forget about Huntsville, Alabama: there are no bars or night clubs there.)

Actually, all this amounts to is a week of fresh air, green grass and blossoming flowers, wine, bread and cheese, blondes, brunettes and redheads; in other words, R & R.

Naturally, when the word Easter is used, some think of egg hunts, new chapeaux and frolicsome, pink-nosed rabbits.

Playboy magazine publisher Hugh Hefner, however, has entirely revolutionized the concept of this time of the year. For example, no longer do people associate the image of a rabbit solely with Easter. Rabbits now mean Playboy bunnies: frolicsome and pink-tailed.

To start out on the right paw, let us first define certain terms—useful only if one has or is in the process of obtaining a Playboy club key.

• • •

Playboy: an old journalistic word indicating green envy on the part of the newsman who used lt, and undeserved wealth on the part of the wastrel it was applied to. A playboy was expected to devote his life to philanthropy by distributing his money to headwaiters. The term is seldom used today, because headwaiters have all the money.

• • •

Playboy Magazine: a dream manual for workboys; the male equivalent of Seventeen. Reflecting the tastes of publisher Hugh Hefner, Playboy offers pictures of Ferraris (vroom, vroom), pictures of yachts (putt, putt), and pictures of seantily-clad women (zip, zip). Also, diagrams on how to tie a necktie.

• • •

Playboy Clubs: for Playboy readers; warm, reassuring places for coming in out of reality while waiting for next month's magazine. Also very good for showing Playboy cuff links and cigarette lighter (decorated with the wicked and sophisticated Playboy rabbit symbol) and for practicing the secret Playboy handshake and signaling with the secret Playboy secret-code ring.

• • •

Playboy Bunny: half geisha and half double-malted, in a satin swimsuit that shows what swimsuits usually show. To club members, a wiggling, giggling invitation to "let's pretend" sin; to Playboy promotion writers, a beautiful, personable, fun-loving woman who is working in the most exciting and glamorous setting in the world of show business."

It is quite fortunate that this year's scene is not in the Black Islands (Melanesia) since there, when the male dies, the female is put to death by strangling and placed in the grave with her husband, all because there are more women than men. (But never underestimate the abilities of a man.)

• • •

In reference to last week's notice of the student "robbed" of his attaehe ease. Rome's Night Poliee reeently published a list of unclaimed articles reeovered by its men.

The list includes 14 dead bodies, seven parcels of love letters, two donkeys, a cow, two pounds of nails, a bottle of cologne, a law book, a breviary, a bottle of red wine, a bed pan, 10 pairs of men's shorts and 25 pieces of lingerie.

CTA Executive In College Hour Talk Tomorrow

DR. CHARLES HAMILTON.

The Student California Teacher's Association Chapter of the college will host Dr. Charles E. Hamilton, Teacher Education executive for the California Teacher's Association during College Hour tomorrow in C-269.

Bernard Llaeuna, president of SCTA here, said that Hamilton will speak on the Fisher Bill which pertains to the changes in public school teacher credentialing.

Hamilton has major responsibility for maintaining liaison with teacher education institutions in this state.

Before joining CTA's staff in 1953, Hamilton was associate professor of edueation and director of the department of elementary education at University of Pacific in Stockton.

Hamilton received his B.A. degree from Chico State College in 1934, and his Ph.D. from the University of California. He has taught science in elementary and high schools and has been instruetor of edueation at the University of California and University of the Pacific.

CTA's Teacher Education Commission, with which Hamilton is associated as executive, focuses attention on the problems of recruitment and preparation and credentialing of personnel in California schools.

Hamilton recently spent three months with professional educators' associations in Europe and Russia, studying the professional standards movement in eight countries.

Aeeording to Llacuna, the SCTA "offers students preparing for the teaching profession an opportunity to learn more about the profession itself."

Llacuna also stated that the SCTA attempts to acquaint students with the teaching field. It also provides news of current interest in the field.

The SCTA is a state-wide organization affiliated with the National Education Association, a nation-wide organization.

Llacuna disclosed that several members of the SCTA attended the Northern Professional Problems Conference on March 7 at the University of the Pacific.

According to Llacuna, the theme of the conference was Social Problems and Edueation. At this conference, problems of education itself were discussed.

Llacuna stressed that the lecture tomorrow is open "to anyone interested in education."

C-Hour Lecture To Focus On Islam, Arab Contributions

Islam and Arab contributions to the Western Civilization is the topic to be discussed by Farouk A. Mawlawi, at the International Relations Club during tomorrow's College Hour in S-100, aeeording to Dave Louis, club president.

Mawlawi, director of the local Arab Information Center, came here from Lebanon in 1953 and has a considerable educational background, which includes a teaching job at a public school in Tripoli.

After attending universities in Lebanon, England and the United States, in 1959 he was appointed Assistant Director of the Arab Information Center in the Midwest.

In 1961, Mawlawi was transferred to the Arab States delegation office in New York where he served as public liaison officer, and a member of the Delegation of Lebanon to the United Nations.

He was appointed to his present position as Director of the Arab Information Center for the West Coast in October, 1962.

Mawlawi has lectured at many universities, churches and civic clubs, and has appeared on radio and television networks. His latest visit to the Middle East was two years ago, at which time he conferred with several high Arab officials.

"Mawlawi's topic should prove to be highly interesting," Louis commented.

Home Furnishing Program Makes Debut Next Semester

A new curriculum, designed to provide technical training for young persons interested in home furnishing and merchandising careers, will make its debut here in the fall semester.

The curriculum is being initiated at the request of the National Home Furnishings Education Foundation. Elizabeth Helseth, merchandising instructor here, will be in charge of the new home furnishing program.

Miss Helseth will work in conjunction with Frances Lloyd, who teaches interior decoration, and George Stewart, chairman of the business department.

Courses in advaneed selling and sales promotion in home furnishings will be a part of the two-year program.

A career in the home furnishing field offers numerous and diversified job opportunities. Upon completion of the two-year program, the home furnishing student may find employment in the fields of sales, purchasing, specialized work and management.

"Several stores in San Franeisco have expressed a desire to participate in the new program by acting as student training centers," she explained, adding that "many of the stores will sponsor a 15-hour work-week at paid employment for second-year students."

Carole Scrievers, a third semester merchandising major, is gaining experience by working at Leeds in conjunction with the college's merchandising program.

In addition to this college, Los Angeles City College, Chaffey College at Alta Loma and Cerritos College at Norwalk will initiate a home furnishing curriculum.

Three Band Members Take Part In All-State Musical Convention

Three members of the college's concert band have been invited to participate in the first annual all-state two-year college musical convention to be held in San Mateo Saturday and Sunday.

The trio are Dan LeBlanc, George Thompson and Art Linholm. The first two have been members of the all-city youth orchestra.

The convention will be attended by music instructors from colleges throughout the state and several from out-of-state.

The orchestra, which will appear in a program at San Mateo High School, at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, will be composed of outstanding student musicians from two-year colleges in the state.

Gerhart Samuels, conductor of the Oakland Symphony Orchestra, will be maestro at the event.

Rehearsals are scheduled Saturday and Sunday afternoons both at the high school and at College of San Mate.

The convention is expected to be a yearly event.

Council Turns Down Pep Band Request, Adopts Resolution To Help Solve Cafeteria Congestion

By Ann Welll

Student Council last week voted down a supplemental allocation of $1000 for the Pep Band and adopted a resolution asking for a solution to the congestion in Smith Hall.

According to George Quick, finance chairman, the band had originally requested $10,960 for this semester. Associated Student allocations, $36,443.63 thus far, could not be stretched to accommodate that request.

Therefore, band director John Dunn revised the band's request of $1000 to charter two buses to the State basketball championship playoffs in Walnut, near Los Angeles, last weekend.

AS President Bob Roddick informed council that simllar revisions had been made in previous semesters by the band. Dunn retaliated by saying he had proposed several money-making programs, such as a car raffle or a car wash, but "I was told by Dr. Anderson (controller) that they were all illegal."

A motion was made to allocate the money provided "the band promised to pay back at least half of it by the end of this semester." When a council member asked where this money would come from, Quick speculated, "Maybe from the Good Fairy."

The motion failed, 2-9-2, and the band did not attend the play-offs.

When the vote was told, Yell Leader Vince Contreras and other students left unexcused.

Concerning the Smith Hall congestion, Campus Police representatives reported that clubs, fraternities and sororities monopolize large portions of the eafeteria, obstructing traffic. One person often saves an entire table for a group.

James Aligo, deputy chief, said that "the situation is absolutely ridiculous." The police look for more cooperation from the students and council.

A resolution was then adopted to refer the matter to the administration.

The resolution is as follows:

WHEREAS, Smith Hall is inadequate, and,

WHEREAS, the congestion in Smith Hall is at an all-time high, and,

WHEREAS, the Campus Police are finding quite a bit of trouble meeting with the problems, and,

WHEREAS the Associated Students in the form of their elected representatives, Student Council of the Associated Students, feel that the administration should take some action to meet and solve this problem, and,

WHEREAS, with the present situation the students are being slighted by not receiving proper facilities:

THEREFORE, let it be resolved that the Associated Students of City College recommend to the administration of City College that the question be looked into and an answer and solution be sought and put into effect.

Rally commissioner Larry Casalegno announced that a rally is scheduled tomorrow in the football field or the men's gymnasium, depending on the weather. Professional entertainment and a probable appearanee of the San Francisco Warriors are expected, Casalegno said.

April 3 Last Day To Drop Classes Without Penalty

Last day to file petitions for withdrawal from individual courses will be Friday, April 3, according to Registrar Mary Jane Learnard.

To withdraw from a class, she explained, a certain procedure must be followed. First, a student must obtain approval from his counselor to drop a certain class.

Next, he must obtain dismissal from his instructor and last, he must file his withdrawal card in the registrar's office. If these three steps are properly carried out, Miss Learnard commented, confusion will be avoided.

Applicants For RIS Scholarship Must File By April 1

All men interested must file their applieations for the annual $1000 RIS scholarship in S-150 by April 1, Dean of Women Mary Golding said last week.

To qualify for the scholarship, offered only to men, one must have completed at least two years or the equivalent in a two-year college and be enrolled in division work in a four-year institution during the period of the grant.

There are no limitations regarding age, marital status, race or ereed, but all men must be majoring in business related fields such as business administration, law, radio, teaching of business subjects, journalism, advertising, sales commercial art and world trade.

A nonprofit educational foundation, RIS, Inc., takes its name from the belief of the founder, Fred D. Barton, in the "Right of the Individual to ereate and Sell his ideas and products."

The foundation awards at least ten $1000 initial and second-year scholarship grants per year.

Selection of award winners will be made by RIS's Board of Directors who will consider the applicant's financial need, high school and college grades and potential success in upper-division college work and in his chosen field.

Payment of the scholarship is in four parts; $350 is paid to the college or university in September, $150 in December, $350 in February and $150 in May.

Winners will be announeed by July 1, as was Alan Merrit, college winner of the award last year.

IFC 'Starves' Pledge Parents

By George Nelson

Parents of fraternity pledges will not get any dinner Mareh 31—not from the Inter-Fraternity Council, anyway. Because of a busy seheduie, the IFC has eancelled the dinner normally given each semester to parents of new pledges, Bruce Thomas, IFC president, explained last week.

What is keeping the IFC so busy that it turned the broilers off on the pledge parents? "Preparations for pledge week and the IFC-sponsored danee, At Last," Thomas said.

Pledge week begins at 7:30 a.m. Monday, April 6, and will continue until the following Friday.

During these five days, "beany sportin', Sunday suitin'" pledges may face the "prospect" of being indoctrinated, mandated, abrogated, intimidated, amalgamated, subjugated, humiliated, initiated and harrassed.

Not necessarily in that order.

Pledges will absolutely not be vitiated, aecording to Thomas.

He also pointed out that Pledge Week is the final "purifying element" in which the last of the poorer candidates are "weeded out."

"The pledges have to do things that may make them appear to be kind of crazy," Thomas said, rapidly circling his ear with his right index finger, "but it's all part of the tradition (of fraternities)."

The cafeteria will be the theater of initiation activities between 7:30 and 11:30 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, April 6, 8 and 10. This will give the non-fraternity students a chance to see what they are missing.

During College Hour, April 9, pledge activities will "move outdoors for the pledge games, a series of dubious athletic events never featured in the Olympic Games: accelerated-distance-egg-toss, speed pie-eating, three-legged sprint, the double-lunged balloon-speed-inflation, and more.

Pledge Week ceremonies end Friday, April 10. In celebration of the fiaseo's finale, the week will be climaxed by an IFC-sponsored dance.

The dance begins at 9 p.m. and lasts until midnight. The place? Smith Hall. And the Tony Kaun dance band will supply the musieal accompaniment, so essential to daneing.

At Last will be semiformal (men wearing coat, tie, shoes, etc.), for couples only, and tickets cost $2.50 a couple. They go on sale April 4, and may be purchased from IFC men until the night of the dance, and then at the door.

"At the dance," Thomas emphasized; "students will be able to see for themselves that the pledges are not really as crazy as they seemed while performing their designated duties during Pledge Week."

TO SAY the usual in the most unusual manner. Could this be the difference between a woman and a lady? Or is there really a difference?

Enrollment statistics released by the registrar's office in the fall showed that 262 women were attending day classes at the college, but unfortunately there are no statistics separating the ladies from the women!

Soeiety has placed many restrictions on the "fair sex," and what has the modern woman done? She has thrown these restrictions to the four winds and set up a new code of etiquette for herself. The fair sex? What a laugh! In many homes nowadays, the woman wears the pants in the family.

What tends to annoy a man most, is that he is being made a fool of in a new way by a new kind of woman. This is the woman who demands the status of a man while still insisting on all the ancient privileges accorded women by the etiquette of romantic chivalry.

THE NEW WOMAN

As an elderly gentleman observed a bit bitterly: "This new type of woman goes into an office and takes a man's job away from him, then if they both ride in the same elevator, she expects him to tip his hat to her before he goes to look for another job!"

Many men are convinced that the modern woman has lost her manners and charm of gentility, and is more arrogant toward than appreciative of the little gestures of knighthood that men still like to extend to her.

If a man steps aside to let a woman get into a bus ahead of him, or yields his place to let her take the first eab, she often rewards him with a regal indifference or chill disdain.

One fellow phrased it beautifully, "How rare indeed is becoming the woman who can accept such tributes to her sex gracefully or who bothers to acknowledge them with a smile or a thank you."

CHIVALRY DYING?

Is it any wonder that chivalry is dying? Obviously, equality of the sexes is replacing it.

Ironic as it may seem, the average woman expects a guy to push her through the revolving doors of this fast-moving world. And from a rear profile, the poor guy hardly knows what he's pushing!

After careful deliberation, perhaps Congress could enact a law whereby all women would have to make an honest attempt to act like ladies. If the law passed, it might read something like this:

Attention all women. Your plaee is in the home; work only if necessary. A lady always exhibits good manners. Wear the slacks in the family, and if married, leave the pants to your husband.

If for some reason, it is hard to live up to the qualities with which a lady should be endowed, do your best. In short, say the usual in the most unusual manner by lady-like behavior.

Coeds here will have a chance to see what separates the ladies from the women (apparel-wise), at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, April 9.

Chandler On All-Tourney Five As Rams Place Sixth After Riverside Wins Opening Game

By Fred Wales

With four seconds on the clock, Tom Ferraro sank a 30-foot jump shot to give Riverside a 42-40 comeback win and knock the Rams into the consolation round of the State Tournament last weekend at Mt. San Antonio College.

From their opening loss the Rams returned to knock off San Diego, 79-57, but just couldn't get up for their final game against Antelope Valley and as a consequence lost, 84-81.

The Rams ended up in a disappointing sixth place but still managed to prove two things — their No. 2 in the nation and Jerry Chandler is one of the best players in the State.

In Thursday night's game the Rams beat themselves but displayed all the talent that brought them there.

Riverside jumped at 6-1 in the opening minutes before Art Adams tanked a jumper and Rich Henderson sank a field goal and a charity to put the Rams on top 7-6.

Chandler embarrassed Riverside's Bob Rule and the score was 10-6 Rams.

With 14:13 left in the half Adams connected again and sank a charity for a 13-8 lead.

Riverside came back 14-13 via the free throw line as Chandler and Henderson missed and Riverside's Glasgow didn't.

At this point with 3:50 remaining in the first half Henderson came down court, tripped on someone's foot and sprained his ankle. Henderson left the game with five points and was lost for the remainder of the tourney.

Brandon Chappell replaced him, and the Rams with Henry King, Adams and Chandler scoring came back to take a 21-19 halftime lead.

In the first half the Rams hit 9 out of 18 shots for 50 percent from the floor compared to Riverside's 34 percent.

Starting the second half, Riverside pulled 27-22 on Randy Hoxie's field goals and Bob Rule's free throws.

Ken Scalmanini started the Rams back with two left-handers and King added two more as the Rams went ahead 30-29 with 11:44 in the game.

Chandler controlled Rule and combined with Adams for a 40-36 lead with 4:15 in the game.

Then the roof caved in on the Rams. Scalmanini missed a one and one free throw and Hoxie connected with two jumpers to tie the score at 40-40 with 1:49 in the game.

With less than a minute left Rule missed a free throw and King came down with the rebound. He was immediately tied up and fouled but the official signaled walking and the game was over. Ferraro got the ball with six seconds left moved in and hit the shot for the 42-40 win.

In the game against San Diego on Friday the Rams had little trouble once they woke up after falling behind, 42-36.

Chandler and King combined for 25 points in the second half to bury San Diego 79-57.

Saturday's game looked as if it would be the same story but Antelope Valley was not to be defeated.

Down 45-37, the Rams pulled to 66-63 with eight minutes remaining in the game but could never close the gap.

Antelope Valley set a tournament shooting record with 60.4 percent from the floor and the Rams fell 84-81.

Chappell was high point man for the Rams with 20 followed by Adams and King with 18.

Chandler was selected as a member of the All-Tourney five for his performance on both offense and defense.

In the first game he held 6-8 Rule to seven points after Rule had averaged 28 points during the season. Rule managed only one field goal off Chandler while sinking five free throws.

On the boards Chandler and King dominated the game as the big Riverside center was only credited with four rebounds.

Offensively Chandler hit 11 points against the Tigers and was credited with seven assists.

Phelan Calls His Shot As McGriff Saves Creighton

At the close of the 1962-63 basketball season, coach Sid Phelan said of his graduating center, Elton McGriff, "He is a great rebounder who could help any university team." Last Monday McGriff did just that when he led his Creighton team to the NCAA Regionals with an 89-78 victory over Oklahoma City University.

McGriff led Creighton's scoring with 25 points and helped his teammate, All-American candidate Paul Silas, with the rebounding chores.

In his first year with the Rams, the 6-8 center was second in scoring with 209 points and selected as a member of the old Big Eight All-Conference team.

Last year he led the Rams in scoring with 481 points and placed on the second team of the Golden Gate Conference selections.

Teammates Silas and Fritz Pointer are from McClymonds High in Oakland.

Netters To Host Diablo Vikings In Match Friday

Ram netters will host Diablo Valley College's Vikings in conference action at 2:30 p.m. Friday in Golden Gate Park.

This year's Vikings show more experience, but that appears to be their major asset, as their ability has yet to be proved and may not be much stronger.

In their tilt with the Bear Cubs of Santa Rosa, the Valleymen came up on the small end of a 7-2 score, after starting what could have been a close match.

Ram netters downed the same team 5-4, despite the absence of top stringers Vincent Chinn and Al Brambila, out because of early-season injuries.

The Rams are intent on winning over Diablo, and will play with the same power they hope to bring against the stronger teams in the conference.

"Every game is crucial," said coach Roy Diederichsen, "and when you lose one game in this conference, you're practically eliminated from the competition!"

The 1963 Vikings were short on experience and proved no match for the powerful Rams who devoured them 7-0.

Diablo, last year's conference doormats, won only one match at the expense of cellar-dwelling Chabot College.

Friday's encounter is expected to indicate not only the Diablo hut also the San Francisco potential.

Lack Of Student Interest Perils Formation Of Coed Bowling League

Formation by the Recreation Association of a coed bowling league this semester is periled because of a lack of student interest, RA Adviser Frances Galloway reported last week.

At the present time, there is no complete team formed and Miss Galloway is wondering what happened to the "active participants-to-be" who inaugurated the idea.

Once the league is organized, games will be played at 3 p.m. Mondays at L & L Castle Lanes, 1750 Geneva avenue.

Students interested in a bowling league can so inform Miss Galloway in the women's gymnasium as soon as possible.

In another phase of the RA program, the college men's and women's fencing teams participated in a sports-day at Foothill College on March 7. The local swordsmen placed third, tied with Stanford University, and behind the University of California and Humboldt State in the standings.

Local Nine Faces San Mateo Saturday At Balboa Stadium

By Pete Franklin

The Ram nine, now well into their conference season, faces the Bulldogs of San Mateo in a doubleheader starting at 11 a.m. Saturday in Balboa Stadium.

The Rams squeezed by Oakland in the conference opener, 3-2. In that encounter, the T-Birds jumped off to an early lead when Conolly blasted a round-tripper with one aboard off Ram hurler Brad Rothback in the first inning.

That, however, proved to be the end of Oakland's threat, for Rothback settled down and pitched shutout ball over the remaining eight frames.

In the third, the Rams cashed in on a Thunderbird error. Singles by Russ Kunkle, Gus Geraldi, Butch Bussanick and Don Kunkle, and a sacrifice for three runs gave them the lead and the game. From that time both teams played flawless ball, and Rothback notched seven strikeouts.

In the final pre-season nonconference action seen by the Rams, the club evidenced prowess, taking them all. San Francisco State College fell in ten by a score of 12-11.

Pete Giovanola's ninth inning triple put the Rams within sight of the Gators who led at the time. State's relief pitcher Gavali walked in the winning run in extra innings.

Bussaniek homered and doubled for the Rams, and Hugh Miller was the winner in relief.

The clash with University of San Francisco also went into extra innings. Miller, assigned mound chores in this game also, singled in the tenth to help his own winning cause. Giovanola was two for two on the day and Geraldi picked up a pair of singles in four trips.

San Quentin's best also fell to the Rams, 9-5, with Ken Dyer taking credit for the routing. Mike Dalton was two for two.

Intramural League Holds Four Games On Campus Tonight

Four games in the Associated Men Student sponsored intramural basketball competition are scheduled tonight, according to Roger Kaufman, AMS president.

The Divine Ones go against the NBA Rejects at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, followed by The Alils meeting The Saxons. At the same time in the women's gymnasium, Alpha Kappa Rho meets Alpha Phi Epsilon, followed at 8 p.m. by the Devenenians versus The Anonymous.

There are seven independent teams, seven fraternity teams and six club teams which make up the three intramural leagues. The basketball games are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday nights, with the first game starting at 7 p.m.

A complete list of playing dates of the teams is available in S-134, Kaufman said. According to Kaufman, game scorers and time keepers will be selected from various teams nightly as well as weekly.

Spikers Journey To Foothill To Meet Owls In Cinder Tilt

Ram spikers journey to Foothill this Friday to meet the Owls in their third meet of the conference season. This will be the last conference meet prior to the Golden Gate relays on March 26 and will begin at 4 p.m.

In their conference opener, the Rams were victorious over Diablo Valley to the tune of 71-65.

"Though none of the marks was sensational," Coach Lou Vasquez said, "they were enough to win despite nature's interference." A 25-mile wind varied in direction continually throughout the meet.

Tom Gardiner turned in a first place 9.9 in the 100-yard dash with the wind at his heels, while Vern Bradford bested Diablo's challengers in the 220 with a 23.1. Ozzie Norris came through with 52.2 in the 440, and Rich Klemmer ran the half mile in 2:03.3.

Middle distance man Gene Plotkin took first in the mile with a meager 4:34.8, and Mike Conroy placed second in the two mile event, 10:8.0. Diablo Valley swept both hurdles events.

"We seem to be having trouble with this new 330 hurdles event," Vasquez stated, "and the triple jump, which we also lost, isn't too great either."

In the broad jump, the Vikings took first and second, winning with a mark of 21'2". Leroy Woods of the Rams took the high jump with a 6'1" notch, and in the pole vault event, Jim Dunson placed second with the same mark as the winner of the event, 11'6".

Pat Lewis took both the discus and shot with distances of 138' and 49'8", respectively.

The Rams swept the relays, romping to a 3:34.0 mile and a 44.3 in the 440.

Foothill boasts a strong team even though it barely sneaked past San Jose City College, 69-67, in its conference opener. Even without last season's record-holding shot man, Don Castle, the Owls' best of 49'10¼" overruled Lewis' marks set against Diablo Valley.

Gary Hines high jumped 6'4" into a then prevailing icy wind, and teammate Bob Kentera managed 6'2", both better than the mark notched by Woods in the Ram opener.

The Owls also showed strength in the 440, with Bicker romping to first with 51.8.

Mermen Down USF, To Face T-Birds Friday

In their sole practice meet, Ram swimmers sank the University of San Francisco varsity, 58-27, two Fridays past at McLaren Pool.

With this practice win under their belts and the Foothill meet over, the Rams will again assume the underdog role when they travel to Oakland to take on the T-Birds at 3 p.m. Friday.

Finally picking on somebody their own size, the Ram mermen were outnumbered 9-8, or only one in the USF meet. Starting the meet right, the medley relay of Bob Barnes, Brian Edie, Rich Gray and Mark Haskell clipped off a 4:22.7 for a first place.

Fred Wales maintained the winning pace with first places in the 200 and 500 freestyle events as did Edie in the individual medley and 200 breaststroke.

Gray captured the 100 freestyle in 56.1 and Barnes the 200 backstroke in 2:35.8 while John Hamilton placed third.

Jim Harris and Roger Guidi placed second and third respectively in the 50 free, and Haskell won the 200 butterfly before he teamed with Barnes, Harris and Gray in the 400 freestyle relay win.

Cosch Roy Burkhead announced after the meet that the ineligibility of Harris, who will be unable to compete because of a conference districting rule, is a costly loss to the Rams.

Last season, the Rams lost a close meet to the T-Birds because backstroker Pete Nehribecki was unable to be excused from his science labs on Friday afternoons.

RAMBLINGS Rams Win Respect . . . Riverside A Game

By Fred Wales

OUR HEROES have fallen. The Ram championship basketball team was beaten by Riverside, 42-40, in their opener and by Antelope Valley 84-81 in the finals of the consolation round.

On the surface it would seem the Rams were a complete failure but it's just the opposite.

Riverside was ranked No. 1 in the nation with their 32-0 record and the Rams were ranked second with their 27-2 record. Last Thursday night San Francisco outplayed the number one Junior College team in the nation. Amid jeering fans and unfriendly scorers and personnel, the San Franciscans fought back to take the lead on three occasions.

When Rich Henderson sprained his ankle the crowd went wild with happiness. When Jerry Chandler was fouled and knocked down by Bob Rule the crowd went wild with joy.

It was only when San Francisco came back to take the 40-36 lead with minutes remaining that the crowd fell silent. Riverside was scared, Riverside had been out-played and Riverside knew it.

The hand of fate somehow saved Riverside, with some help, and they managed to win.

At first Riverside said they were cold; then they said it was Bob Rule's auto accident but when the tourney was finished everyone breathed a sigh and the one thing they said was "I never thought we'd get past Frisco."

Rule's illness was termed "Chandleritis" and the San Francisean was named All-Tournament. (Very rare since his team placed sixth.)

Now Riverside reigns as No. 1 and State Champions and the Rams No. 6 but out of nine games played at Mt. San Antonio this year all the Southlanders will remember the night "we got by Frisco."

H&R Sends Nine Students On Tour Of Southern California

Nine fourth semester students from the Hotel and Restaurant department returned Monday from a tour of plush Southern California Hotels.

These students, John Christian, John Battistone, Claude Boulware, Stanley Gershenson, Harley M. Gill, Richard Heins, Mike Mihaly, Blair Sawyer and Douglas Walker, were chosen for the trip by their fellow students.

During the tour they were guests of the California Southern and Northern Hotel and Restaurant Association and they were shown the inner workings of such well known hotels as the Santa Barbara Biltmore and the Hollywood Plaza.

They left March 31, and spent their first night at the Mark Thomas Inn, in Monterey. The next day was spent at a reception at La Playa in Carmel, followed by dinner as Casa Munras, Monterey.

On April 1, the students were served breakfast at Del Monte Lodge in Pebble Beach, and were guests of the manager, W. Hubbard.

For the next five days the H & R nine visited distinctive and varied spots such as Lawry's Foods Center, in Los Angeles, and Mannings, Inc., where breakfast was served. The tour ended at the Roma Winery where they enjoyed themselves as observers of wine processing.

The tour, which is scheduled annually, not only allowed students to observe the operation of large hotels and restaurants, but also took them behind the scenes where the managers showed them kitchens, the preparation and serving of food, Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal programs here, explained.

"The entire trip," he said, "afforded its participants an opportunity to see industry operations at first hand, an experience these students will never again encounter.

"They found hotel and restaurant men who opened their doors to them, permitted a close look into their operations and answered many and varied questions pertaining to the individual study interest."

Dan LeBlanc Stars In San Leandro Concert Saturday

A talented young violinist from the college's music department has been selected to appear as soloist in a San Leandro Symphony Orchestra concert Saturday in San Leandro.

Dan LeBlanc, a 17-year-old high freshman, won the honor two weeks ago when he auditioned for the solo. He has been studying violin for eight years.

This is not LeBlanc's first appearance with a big symphony orchestra, according to Meyer Cahn, music instructor here.

"Dan is quite a talented student," Cahn said. "While attending Balboa High School last year he appeared with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra and also with the San Francisco High School Honor Orchestra. So he's well on his way to becoming a great musician."

Cahn added that LeBlanc is currently trying to win the famous Kimber Award, a $3000 music scholarship.

He is competing with five other student violinists from all over California. The semifinals, judged by conductors and music teachers, are being held at Sherman Clay in San Francisco.

Last year, LeBlanc was offered a scholarship to San Francisco State College. He also was asked to audition for a scholarship to Stanford University.

Ben Bartholomew Wins Saber Competition At Annual Western Intercollege Fencing Conference

A member of the college's fencing team, Ben Bartholomew, won the individual saber competition March 14 and thereby gave City College the distinction of being the first two-year college to win such an event in the annual Western Intercollegiate Fencing Conference, held this year at San Fernando State College.

Bartholomew was the college's sole entry in the individual saber event.

Although three types of weapon competition were offered, City College fencers competed in only two, foil and saber.

As a foil team, Carlos Ciudad-Real, Vince Nocon and Wayne Spencer competed in two bouts and placed fifth as a team. The difference between third, fourth and fifth places was a matter of one bout.

The Western Intercollegiate Fencing Conference is open to teams from two and four-year colleges and universities west of the Rocky Mountains.

Two years ago, City College won first place as a foil team in the same conference, marking another first for a two-year college.

The conference's perpetual trophy, awarded to Bartholomew, is expected to be a major part of the exhibit, which will also include a display and description of weapons used in fencing.

The Fencing Club meets at 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays in the activity room of the women's gymnasium under the direction of Lene Johnson, fencing coach, who said last week that students interested are invited to meet with the club.

Ninth Annual Recruitment Day Set For May 13

The ninth annual engineering and business graduate reeruitment day will be held on Wednesday, May 13, on the City College campus, according to Joseph A. Amori, director of placement here.

Fifty-five leading employers from five San Francisco Bay Area counties will participate in this annual event which brings together City College's prospective graduates and employer recruitment teams. There will be approximately 250 students interviewed this year, including both the June 1964 and February 1965 graduates, Amori said.

California Packing Corporation, a firm which has hired City College graduates in many occupational categories over a period of 25 years, will be honored by the college at the traditional introductory breakfast.

A representative from California Packing Corporation is expected to be the featured speaker, representing the 50 employer groups.

Prospective graduates are now being processed by their respective major field advisers, Amori explained. Louis Batmale, coordinator of instruction for terminal training programs, William Mayo, dean of instruction for engineering and physical sciences, and Amori are coordinating the recruitment program.

Final Search For Campus Ugliest Starts Monday

Alpha Phi Omega is now in the midst of making final plans for the staging of its annual Ugly Man On Campus week, scheduled to begin next Monday and reach its climax during College Hour, Thursday, April 16, Leroy Padilla, fraternity treasurer, announced this week.

Deadline for any club or organization to sponsor an Ugly Man in the contest is today, Wednesday. A picture of the candidate must accompany each nomination.

"The only qualification is that the contestant be male and be sponsored by some recognized campus group," Padilla stated, adding, "the contest depends less on how 'ugly' the candidate is and more on how many votes he can gather during the week."

Voting will be conducted by the penny-a-vote method, according to Padilla. Ugly Man contestants will parade around campus looking their worst all week but will make their big effort during College Hour next Thursday.

Each will carry a container in which students may deposit their pennies, or any other denomination of coin to support their favorite UMOC, Padilla emphasized.

All proceeds from the contest will go into the fraternity scholarship fund, according to Padilla.

The drama department is expected to aid the UMOC contestants in making themselves ugly through makeup techniques.

Padilla stated that a bulletin hoard will be placed on campus indicating progress of each contestant in his quest to become ugliest.

Formal announcement time of the winner is still pending, since there is neither a rally nor a formal social gathering planned to climax the week. A dance had been considered, but it had to be cancelled because of conflict with the Inter-Fraternity Council dance slated for the following Friday night.

The UMOC winner will, however, receive a trophy from the fraternity.

Last year's winner was Pete Montonen, sponsored by Beta Tau fraternity. John Conlon of Alpha Kappa Rho placed second.

The annual UMOC contest is a tradition of Alpha Phi Omega, the national service fraternity. The University of California at Berkeley holds a similar contest which it calls Wrecks Ugly. An old car, a sledge hammer and a coronation ceremony play a part in the activities.

Seeds Make The Scene

With a little imagination and an awareness of this space age, a City College artist has illustrated how even a little seed can become an astronaut!

The careful artistry of 28-year-old Kunio Tsuneyoshi put a little seed on a launching pad, artistically blasting it through earth, where it would sprout to life.

He painted his design and entered it in the college advertising art and design department's seed mosaic competition. This design won first prize in 61 entries.

"It was chosen because it showed great vitality and strength. The striking colors and bold design exhibited sure-fire growth and strength," said William Davis, head of the advertising art department here.

The illustration will be reproduced in an 8-foot wide, 12-foot tall mural, to be made by students, Davis said.

It will be made entirely out of colored seeds, dyed and glued to three four by eight foot wood panels. The completed mural will be delivered for installation at the Fairmont Hotel, in time for the American Seed Growers' Convention in July.

It took two and one-half hours for five judges to choose the winning design. From 61 entries, 12 designs were selected by department instructors for the panel of judges.

Two of the judges were purposely flown to San Francisco to judge this contest. They included executives from different seed companies in California.

Tsuneyoshi received $35. Three other students were also honored for their efforts. Howard Gilbert, second place winner, received $10. Nancy Sciarra, a first semester student, was awarded $5.

Alexander Eng won special recognition for his design. The illustration will be used by the California Seed Association for advertising and decoration in their offices.

Five hundred dollars was donated by the California Seed Association for this contest. The bulk of this money, minus the awards, went into the William J. Eckert Art Scholarship Fund.

"The designs must tie in with the idea that seeds produced in California are considered to be the most disease-free and virile seeds produced anywhere in the world.

"The emblem, which must be incorporated in each design, shows that the sun never sets anywhere on earth that does not use California seeds," Davis explained.

The panel of judges included Richard McKenna, president of the California Seed Association; Herbert Walcott, head of Taylor-Walcott Seed Company; Richard Strelke, public relation manager for Taylor-Walcott Company; Ward Waterman, of Waterman-Loomis Company, Bakersfield, California; and Fred Rohnert, of Waldo Rohnert Company, Hollister, California.

State Should Realize Obligation To Support Two-Year Colleges

ONE OF THE most common vote-getting tactics of the politician is the promise of more money for education. He is on safe ground here because to be against the concept of education is to be against one of the most basic of all American concepts.

However, unlike most campaign promises, aid to education is usually fulfilled. Proof of this fact can be found in that the United States spends more money for educational purposes than does any other nation in the world. Free and compulsory education was advanced by our forefathers and is being ever-expanded today.

Dwight Eisenhower, while President of the United States, once stated that the compulsory level of education should be extended to the two-year college level so that the youth of the nation would be better fitted to assume its responsibilities when the time came.

In California today, the backbone of our higher schooling system is the two-year college. According to the latest available figures, 68 per cent of all college freshmen and sophomores in the state now attend this type of institution. Yet, when the state funds are being doled out, the two-year colleges are ending up on the short end of the deal.

Say spokesmen for the California Junior College Association, "Without significant increases in state aid now, the junior colleges may have to limit enrollment or sacrifice their nationally recognized reputation for quality."

They propose that state funds to two-year colleges be increased $18 million — from the present $39 million — to $57 million. State support proposed for the University of California operation in 1964-65 is $181.6 million and for the state colleges $118.7 million. A comparison of figures will show that they are not being unfair in their proposal.

The burden of finance for the two-year colleges is now falling on the already-harassed local taxpayer. This has been a steadily shifting trend for the last ten years. In 1954, state aid for our type of college was at the 40 per cent level. Today it is 25 per cent. At the same time, state colleges are now financed 87 per cent by the state, with the University of California getting 75 per cent. Again, the figures are out of proportion.

Two bond issues are now scheduled to go on the November ballot in California. They total $620 million for the construction of schools and colleges. Governor Edmund G. Brown called these bond issues "... the most important investment in the future the people of California can make this year."

Of the $620 million, $30 million are slated for two-year colleges. The university and state colleges will get $200 million, with the rest to be divided between elementary and high schools. This money, if the issues win, will be used for construction purposes only, but again, the two-year colleges come in last.

The value of the 72 two-year college campuses in California is valued at $400 million, of which less than $10 million has come from state funds. The CJCA believes, and we agree with them, that the state of California should pay for half of the costs of the construction of two-year colleges, and that all future state bond issues should fully recognize this obligation.

One of the outstanding achievements of California over the rest of the states is its system of higher education. Any magazine article about our state cannot fail to mention the fact that a college education is available to all who have the capabilities. The two-year college is responsible for this reputation and it is time that the responsibilities of financing were lightened from the local taxpayer and returned to the state.

For Airline Stewardesses Traveling Is Way Of Life

To the casual traveler, the airline stewardess is frequently envisioned as tall, well mannered, poised, efficient and attractive.

But these are only her external attributes. The modern stewardess is also well educated and completely qualified for her vigorous and demanding job.

Here, a two-year semi-professional course is offered to train coeds fully in the knowledge of flying demanded by the airlines.

Carmine Meyer, a major in this course, stated recently that after completing the two-year course of study, graduates must still try to find a job with one of the airlines.

When a girl finds a job with one of the airlines, she is required to study for another year in schools run by the companies themselves.

In addition to basic training, courses of study are followed concerned with the use of various equipment on board planes. Oxygen masks are used and first aid and health is practiced and taught.

"After becoming a stewardess, traveling becomes a way of life," Miss Meyer said.

The starting pay expected for a young stewardess is between $320 and $400 a month.

Besides the basic training involved, stewardesses have to learn other talents. Hostesses who travel in foreign countries are required to learn to speak another language fluently.

If the stewardess works on a flight that serves cocktails, she must know brands and be able to serve them. Mixing is not necessary, though, as all the drinks are mixed beforehand.

Like any other interesting job this too is crowded with applicants. Many a young and hopeful stewardess will have to find temporary work behind an airport desk until an opening "in the air" is available.

The only hopeful facet to this "calamity" is the fact that 75 per cent of the stewardesses are married .... before they retire from this job.

This then is the life for the coed who, like Miss Meyer, "loves to travel, visit interesting places and meet persons of international flair."

AND SO, this is April, when a young man's fancy turns to Spring. But then we ought to remember T. S. Eliot's picture of desiccation and gloom of The Waste Land: "April is the cruelest month, breeding lilacs out of the dead land, mixing memory and desire, stirring dull roots with Spring rain."

What does really happen to young men and women in Spring? We do not intend to study this problem that has puzzled man since the beginning of the world, but merely to give indication of some of the effects. The causes are — again — too numerous to be dealt with: we assume that everyone here has heard about the birds and the bees ...

Consider the Ford Motor Company, which has announced that it will use a new close-weave nylon upholstery for the interior of some of its 1965 cars.

After years of appealing to the customer's sight, the automobile designers are for the first time out to appeal to his sense of touch.

The new fabric doesn't last any longer than any other (but who cares?) nor does it come in more or different colors. But it does give an expensive feel. (At last, American designers are getting THE idea!)

Now that we are well on the way to self-psychoanalysis, we might as well confess that nut eaters have been the object of a Motivation Research Study by the Leavitt Corporation for the last two years. The findings of this research was that the public thinks there is something sinful about nuts.

Nuts suggest overindulgence — and the more sophisticated the nut eaten (cashew, almond, brazil), the deeper and more violent the eater's suppressed guilt feelings.

The researchers also discovered that people who do not eat peanuts consider those who do "square, plebeian, dull and unimaginative." Peanut eaters judge those who prefer cashews as being "very far up the social totem pole," the stockbroker type or introverts.

This prompted the Leavitt Corporation to wonder, "can a truck driving peanut muncher ever find happiness with the college-trained stockbroker's daughter who likes cashews?"

In an effort to answer the question affirmatively, the company has come up with a new nut mix: 55 per cent cashews and 45 per cent peanuts. Why? To meet both social strata halfway? Or, simply, will the stockbroker's daughter (the one who will be buying the nuts) come out on top?

The image of the stockbroker would not be complete without what the AMA describes as the Delta Type. It seems that the Madison Avenue's self image was bolstered by an AMA description of all men as Delta Type alcoholics last week.

"Deltas," says Dr. Marvin Block, "drink steadily all day long" on the morning commuter train, midmorning, lunch, midafternoon, pre-train, train, family cocktails, dinner, after dinner.

Success Story Series

One-Third Up In Business, Swiss Continues Climb

By Bea Takeuchi

George Bettosini, 35, has come a long way. When he first migrated to the western world from Switzerland, he had no idea of his potential.

In Europe, Bettosini worked in many elegant hotels and restaurants in the capacities of bus boy, waiter and Maitre D. He brought his know-how to Montreal, Canada, where he worked several years.

"I heard that America offered more opportunities, so I moved to Reno, Nevada, and worked there for a while. I observed, and learned that the field was wide open in management positions for hotel-restaurant chains.

"I knew that I would need further training if I wanted to get ahead. I heard that City College, Michigan State College and Cornell University had the best restaurant-hotel training programs in the U. S.

"Thanks to Dr. Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal instruction, I was accepted," he said. Bettosini attended City College and graduated in 1959.

He was honored twice during his training here. He won the Duncan Hines scholarship of $500, and later, the Food Service Executive Association scholarship of $1,000. "Both scholarships were monetary, and that was nice. I put the money in the bank," said Bettosini.

Now Bettosini is the catering manager for Del Webb's Towne House, San Francisco. Approximately 150 people come under his jurisdiction.

Employees in room service, the dining room, the banquet beverage department, chefs and table men are managed by Bettosini.

"I feel that I'm only one-third on the way up in this field. My ambition is general management. I'm constantly studying organizations and trade magazines.

"Qualified people can become hotel and restaurant executives and enjoy many advantages. One of them is to be able to live on the premises rent-free, and not worry about food bills either," Bettosini commented.

Bettosini is a gourmet who belongs to several local epicurean clubs. His favorite dish is Fondue Bourguignonne, a Swiss dish. "It is delicious. I'm looking forward to having some again when I return to Switzerland this month on a pleasure trip.

"The preparation consists of pieces of filet mignon cooked in melted butter, in a chafing dish. You take a long fork and dip the pieces of cooked filet in different special sauces, and enjoy it," he explained.

He said that his American wife does most of the cooking at home, and he enjoys plain American cooking.

"Of course, my children prefer hot dogs and hamburgers," he added.

More Money

Tax Cut Puts Extra Burden On Students

The Federal Administration's recent tax cut has affected many people in many ways, but with a common meaning to all — more money.

More money means something different to everybody, and a recent survey conducted on campus demonstrated the various ways the population has developed the means to relieve themselves of the burden of extra money.

Sophomore Penny Klahn answered the question with a question. "You mean my whole 75 cents extra? I guess I'll buy cigarettes."

An instructor who understandably wishes to remain unnamed said that he would use his extra money received from the Federal tax cut to pay his California state income tax. The instructor wished to remain nameless because he is getting a kickback from his state taxes. This is called salary.

A couple of students, like Judy Hollins, who works as a cashier, and Thomas Allan, who works as a hospital orderly, are determined to thwart the whole idea of the cut and save the money. (President Johnson, please note.)

Don Millan, a part-time clerk, took a sensible approach to the whole matter. "I'm going to spend it on girls." Unless he makes about $1000 a month, a reasonable estimate is that he will go on one date per decade.

Another student used the extra money to pay his rent for a month. He lives in a matchbox on Ocean avenue.

As was stated before, the tax cut opened many possibilities.

State officials are already toying with the idea of tax increases for residents, and the property tax in San Francisco will probably go up next year.

Then persons will fondly look back upon this situation and remember their funny, futile dreams of extra loot which never quite materialized.

Hollywood Holds No Lure For Twelve Coed Models

Men have always viewed the bizarre world of the fashion mannequin with a curious eye. Most men suppose that the lean look-alikes who grace the pages of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar are indicative of the entire modeling profession.

But like most sweeping generalizations, this one has its exceptions. The exceptions are the 12 coeds who were chosen to participate tomorrow in the Associated Women Student fashion show-tea.

The dozen coeds were chosen from amongst 28 contestants, all trying their utmost to walk, sit and pivot as gracefully as possible.

The 28 varying degrees of pulchritude were judged for poise, type and style of dress and their overall appearance. The judges were three instructors and three coeds who had modeled in previous AWS fashion shows.

One of the 12 coeds has been selected best-dressed-coed on campus, but her name will not be announced until tomorrow.

Most of the models wear size 9 and are 5-4. There are two blondes, no redheads, and eight of the twelve have had past modeling experience. Not one wants to be a Hollywood personality, three want to be nurses and one wants to be a teacher.

Pat Flahavan, brunette, brown eyes, 5-5, size 9, 115 pounds, has modeled for Pacific Telephone's employees' magazine and also in the Maiden Lane flower show. She is a nurse training major.

Brenda Goldstein, brunette, 5-9, size 11, is a drama major. She has had extensive training at the John Robert Powers school of modeling.

Also at the Powers' school she received some instruction in method acting, and has appeared in several production scenes at the school. She will soon be modeling at the White House.

A model from last semester's AWS fashion show-tea is blonde, blue-eyed Susan Schwampe. She is 5-7, size 9 and 130 pounds. She is a dance major and has danced with the San Francisco Ballet Company.

Nina Jacobs, brunette, 5-4, size 9, is a major in secretarial training. She has modeled for the White House, Emporium, Joseph Magnin, and Mr. G's in Stonestown.

Lillian Goussen, brunette, 5-3, size 8, has modeled for the House of Charm and H. Liebes. She is a merchandising major.

Constance Turner is a 5-4½ coed, size 11, who has gone to Patricia Stevens Finishing School, and has modeled for many social functions. Miss Turner is a major in history.

Tall, slender, Cynthia Colt is 5-6, blonde with gray eyes, size 8, and a secretarial major. Miss Colt has had no previous modeling experience.

Susan Ng, 5-4, 110 pound, size 5-7, is an education major. She was a popular song girl at Lowell High School.

Other models are Clara Silva, Kathy Grable, Adelle Kuchinski, and Ruby Sullivan.

Protest Over Appointment Of Student Delegates To State Convention Surprises Council

By Ann Weill

In a surprise move last week, a petition was presented to Student Council, protesting the manner in which delegates were appointed to the California Junior College Student Government Association conference, scheduled April 23 to 25 in Los Angeles.

With a total of 21 signatures, the text of the petition was read as follows:

"We, the interested students of City College of San Francisco, feel that the choice of delegates to the State Conference to be held in Los Angeles in April, should be brought up for reconsideration and complete re-evaluating of all eligible candidates."

Freshman council member Barbara Kontis asked when an Associated Women Student President had last been named to the conference. The reply was "about four years ago."

Yell Leader Vince Contreras took the floor and informed unenlightened council and cabinet members that "... well for one, Ray Chezik was picked for partisan reasons." Contreras said he thought the petition was a good idea in support of its purpose.

Associated Student President Bob Roddick retaliated with a detailed explanation of how the delegates were chosen. He explained that six persons were picked, five delegates and an officer, Cecil Reichert, State Information chairman.

Roddick and Activities Adviser Sherm Elworthy had selected AS Vice-president Lynn Goodrich to attend the conference. They then chose Finance Chairman George Quick because of his efficiency in the "job with the most work to it in the AS."

To round out the delegation, Associated Men Student President Roger Kaufman and council members Loralee Lando and Chezik were selected.

Sophomore member Joe Miller asked Elworthy about excessive numbers of absences from council meetings and their relation to the delegate appointments. Elworthy quieted Miller by saying that he was attending to the matter at the moment by taking the roll, and "being keeper of the rolls," he knows who does what.

Elworthy disposed of the petition discussion, declaring that he and Roddick are "far better qualified" to pick delegates than "popularity contests," a practice at other colleges.

Council also declared 12 campus organizations officially "off-campus."

The Council of Organizations, with Miller speaking for them, announced that the following clubs had been dropped by COO, and asked council approval of the decision:

Chess Club, Christian Science Organization, Hawaiian Club, Hillel Foundation, Veterans Association, Phi Rho Pi, Bio-Medical Society, Concert Band Association, Women's Treble Clef, Retail Floristry Club, Real Estate and Insurance and International Relations Club.

According to Miller, each of these organizations was notified at the beginning of the year as to their position in COO.

Chronicle Science Editor In College Hour Lecture

David Perlman, science editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, will speak on the Impact Of Science On Public Affairs during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

Perlman recently returned from a two month trip with the University of California's Galapagos Island expedition.

"He has a reputation for being a popular speaker," says Herbert Davis, science department spokesman here, "because he injects quite a bit of adventure into his talks on science.

"In his lecture tomorrow," Davis added, "Perlman will refer to his Galapagos trip quite frequently, but he will also concentrate on the responsibility of citizens in scientific decision making."

As the Chronicle's science editor, Perlman covers all areas of science in his articles.

Collegiate Press Awards Guardsman First Class Rating

The Guardsman was informed last week that its Fall, 1963, volume had been rated First-Class, the equivalent of excellent, by the Associated Collegiate Press.

This rating is second only to an All-American or superior rating. In 45 semesters of membership in the ACP, The Guardsman has earned 32 All-American awards and 13 First-Class ratings.

In his evaluation, the ACP judge particularly noted the excellence of the paper's main news page and the sports page. The editorial and feature page received a "superior" rating. The Guardsman was judged on these and 20 other categories.

Professional men and women journalists, working from ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota, evaluate member-college's newspapers semiannually.

The Fall 1963 volume was published under the editorship of Michel Janicot. Boyd Burtnett was managing editor, Patty Smith feature and news editor, Fred Wales sports editor and Dick Bullard staff editor.

College's Roster Of Peace Corps Volunteers Reaches 79

Seventy-nine students from this college have volunteered for work in the Peace Corps since its initiation in 1961, according to Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman.

Four have completed a two-year service and 17 are now on assignments.

"In each case there has been tremendous growth and fulfillment that only an experience like this could make possible," Hillsman said.

Thirty-five women have also been processed, through Mary Golding, dean of women.

Among those who have served the full two years and who completed service are Hershel Herzberg, with an Associate in Arts degree, worked in Nigeria; Gerald McMahon, AA, served in Colombia, Marion Morrison, in Ghana and Dean Wylie, a Guardsman staff managing editor when a student here who served in the Philippines.

Other City College volunteers currently on assignment include Donald Burt in Tanganyika; Mary Denny, an art major while here, now in Honduras; Kathleen Durham, a humanities major, now in Brazil; Maureen Fahey, a pre-medical major in Tunisia, and Norman Heise, a graphic arts graduate with an AA degree, serving in Nigeria.

Also on assignment are William Isbell in Colombia, Michael Jarnigan, a graduate in business administration in Peru, Jean Johnson in Bolivia. Lin Kam, with an AA in education, is also in Peru.

Barbara Karel, a humanities major, is serving in Pakistan, while Lloyd Latham is in Jamaica. Signe Mattson boasts an AA degree and is in Nigeria, and John O'Rourke, a geology major with an AA degree, is in Somalia.

Pakistan is the assignment for Donald Poindexter's applied engineering skills, and James Rigney, a student of liberal arts, is working in Ethiopia.

Jordan Safine won his AA degree in general education, and went to Indonesia, where he will complete his term of service, and Toshi Watanobe is stationed in the Philippines.

Offering an extensive training program, the Peace Corps is continually preparing accepted applicants for service, Dean Hillsman emphasized.

The influx of Peace Corps volunteers into foreign countries grows, as do the positions available to them, he added.

Interested students may obtain literature on Peace Corps opportunities in front of the counseling offices on the main floor of Science Hall.

SPRING HAS SPRUNG, and midterms are done — for a while anyway. Foiled again? The tried and not-so-true method of all play and no study is slowly going out of style Pity!

With the midterm grades painfully in mind, the college student realizes he has a problem, the answer to which cannot be found in any textbook — except maybe Logic!

How can the average collegian maintain a respectable grade point average with a minimum of study and a maximum of success?

The textbook on Logic probably offers many helpful suggestions, but what college student has the time to read nowadays?

Confronted with a problem that must be solved before the next midterm period, the desperate student frantically searches his mind in order that he may recall an article he read on Hypnosis.

In the early 50's, a Chicago hospital reported, "that over 600 babies were born under hypnosis, and reports indicated that this method was safe for both mother and child."

Convinced?

Perhaps the confidence the student received from the Chicago report was shaken by a not-so-pleasant hypnotic report he read in the newspapers recently.

"There is a known case, in which a man was told while in a state of hypnotically induced somnambulism on a stage, that he would fall asleep when he heard the tune of Annie Laurie.

"The man was brought out of his trance and returned to his seat in the audience. Later on in the show, the performer asked the orchestra to play Annie Laurie. As soon as the first bars of the song were played the man fell asleep. When the band stopped playing, he woke up again.

"The trick was harmless, but it could have had a tragic sequel, Two nights later, the man was driving along with his fiancee beside him, when from the car radio came the strains of Annie Laurie.

"Suddenly, the woman noticed the man's eyes beginning to close and his head slumping over the wheel. She quickly grabbed the steering wheel and managed to move the car out of the traffic.

"When the last notes of Annie Laurie were played, the man woke up, and asked why they had stopped.

"The girl said nothing but immediately consulted the stage hypnotist, who then completely removed the post-hypnotic suggestion ..."

Who is to say, what could have happened to this man if his fiancee had not been in the car with him?

Obviously the student reasons, it is essential that proper legislation be introduced to restrict the use of hypnosis to those medically qualified to practice it.

With all the facts clearly in mind, the student must chart his future course. Study or hypnotic study, which should he choose?

At the risk of surprising all his instructors with dazzling grades, he rationalizes as only a college student can ...

"Oh well, wait and see what happens next midterm."

It is a well known fact, that attendance at a Roller Derby game will ease the pain of a student's midterm grades. Try one and see!

IFC Pledge Week Ends With C-Hour Games In Ram Stadium, Smith Hall Dance Friday Night

Pledge games in the college stadium during College Hour tomorrow and a semi-formal dance Friday night in Smith Hall, will serve as a duo-climax to a three-day Inter-Fraternity Council Pledge Week which began on campus Monday.

Bruce Thomas, IFC president, stated that in the tradition of past Pledge Weeks here, fraternity pledges will be asked to perform some rather "silly" functions under the scrutiny of nonfraternity students.

The cafeteria will be the site of these activities from 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. "The pledges will have to do things that might make them look a little crazy," Thomas explained, "but that is all part of tradition."

Pledge games, including almost anything from accelerated distance egg-toss to three-legged races, will take place in the stadium during College Hour. Fraternity pledges will be the sole participants, under observance of fraternity members and the general student body.

Thomas invited all students to view these games — from the stands.

Friday night, as Thomas stated, "students will be able to see for themselves that pledges aren't entirely as crazy as they looked during the week," at the IFC-sponsored dance.

Again, all students are invited to this function as it is not limited to fraternity pledges, members and their dates.

The ball, whose theme is At Last, will be held between 9 p.m. and midnight in Smith Hall. Tickets, at $2.50 per couple, are now available from fraternity members or may be purchased at the door Friday night.

The Tony Kaun dance band is scheduled to provide the music, according to Thomas.

Following this activity, fraternity pledges will become "one of the men" — meaning they will be full-pledged fraternity members.

Applications For Scholarships Due

Applications for a $1000 Business Administration scholarship to the University of California at Berkeley, a Home Economics scholarship, two Denman Foundation scholarships for women and Dorothy Mercer scholarships are now being received.

The requirements for the scholarship to U.C. are grade point averages and registration for the university. Deadline for application is April 27, Dean Mary Golding said last week.

Although the Business Administration scholarship amount is $1000, the Home Economics scholarship, sponsored by the Bay District Home Economic workers, will be adjusted to need, Dean Golding said.

The Denman Foundation was set up for outstanding women students who are graduates of San Francisco high schools. The amount is $150 each.

The Dorothy Mercer scholarships are for coeds who are English majors and who are planning to transfer to U.C.

The scholarships will be presented at the awards assembly around the end of May. Students interested in the above-mentioned scholarships may apply to Dean Golding.

Pistol Team Ready For April Match

This semester's pistol team, which is experiencing "a building year," will have its first match Sunday at Richmond, Larry Lawson, criminology instructor, stated last week.

State matches will be held on April 24 through 26, at Fort Ord in Monterey county. "This is an open match for everyone. The team that shoots best is number one in the state," Lawson said.

On April 4, a meeting to establish intercollegiate pistol teams was held at the Berkeley Hall of Justice.

Tim Foley and Lawson, coaches of the pistol team here, represented the college at this meeting.

Lawson disclosed that at the present, the pistol team competes against service teams, four-year college teams and police departments.

"We have won state championships in the past. Our last one was in 1962. We hope to come back up and win this semester," Lawson said.

C-Hour Film Presents SF Seals Playoff Games

Highlights of the San Francisco Seals championship playoff games for the Western Hockey League title for the 1962-63 season is one of the films to be shown during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio visual aids instructor.

"The film has lots of action and will appeal to all hockey fans. It's a really good film," Devlin commented.

The second film to be shown is The Mood of Three Cities, San Francisco, New York, Dallas.

"This film is concerned with 'the startling changes that are occurring in most of the big cities of today," Devlin said.

Later in the semester, World Series films will be shown.

Pledge Games In C-Hour Precede End Of IFC Rushing

Spring sorority hopefuls are anxiously awaiting Friday which will signal the end of pledging, with the sorority games, slated for college hour tomorrow, their last hurdle.

Also included in the last round of pledge activities for campus coeds are three hours of serving and assisting at the semesterly Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, to be held tomorrow, starting at 3 p.m. in Smith Hall.

Climax of sorority activities will be the Spring Cotillion, slated for Friday, May 1, at 8 p.m. in Smith Hall.

"Live music by Morey Wolohan and his band will provide listening and dancing pleasure too," Inter-Sorority Council President Noreen Segerquist said.

This formal affair which is considered by the council to be the most gala event of the sorority social season, consists of dancing and entertainment. A similar function is held each semester at the end of pledge activities.

During the course of the evening, new sorority members are introduced to the guests at the dance.

Serving the "Three Sorority S's," sorority members meet definite obligations.

Scholarship, the first law of sorority, maintains that a C average must be achieved and continued, and in no less than 12 units.

Service is the second aspect of the sorority way. Members are required to donate at least five hours a semester to community service.

Phi Beta Rho members volunteer at Shriners Hospital, while Theta Tau tutors underprivileged children by helping them with their studies.

Social events, which sorority members say are an important phase of the triplet, provide members with organized activities.

Men's Glee Club Off To Music Festival

The Men's Glee Club will represent the college at the Solo and Ensemble Festival to be held Friday at the College of San Mateo, Galen Marshall, director, announced last week.

The festival, Marshall said, is sponsored by the Northern California Junior College Music Educators Association.

Officers of the Men's Glee Club for Spring 1964 include Jack Lyons, president, Richard Caniglia, secretary-treasurer, and Ernest Furness, librarian.

Marshall stated that the club has 20 members at present. Any student interested in singing is eligible to apply for club membership.

Dunne Collects Five Hits As Rams Split Twin Bill With Comets; Push Record To 4-4

By Pete Franklin

The Ram nine split last Saturday's doubleheader with Contra Costa dropping the first game, 6-5, but coming back in the nightcap, 7-2. The Comets squeezed by the Rams in the opener, tallying twice in their half of the ninth on clutch singles. Pitcher Hugh Miller went the distance for San Francisco to take the loss.

The Rams trailed, 4-0 in the sixth, but tied the score in that inning on five consecutive walks, a Comet error, and a sacrifice. San Francisco went ahead in the top of the ninth, 5-4, but the Comets bounced back with the winning two in their turn at bat.

In the second game, the Rams took an early lead, scoring one in the first, three in the second, and three in the fourth. Contra Costa's bid came in the fifth, when the Comets rallied briefly for their only two runs. Ram hurler Brad Rothback chalked up his fourth win of the season against no losses.

The keynote in the Ram effort was outfielder Mike Dunne's four for five day at the plate. Dunne's "big stick" has brought him 10 hits in his last 17 trips. He and Henry Scott tripled in the second game.

In San Francisco's clash with San Jose, the Jaguars dropped the Rams 4-2 in a three-hitter. Ronnie Bringuel, plagued all season by a stiff arm, took the pitching loss.

Rothback pitched the Rams to a 9-6 victory over San Mateo last Wednesday in the first of two re-scheduled games with the Bulldogs. At the end of Saturday's twin bill, San Francisco's season record stood at 4-4.

In other action, the Rams have been defeated as often as they have won, dropping both ends of a doubleheader to Diablo Valley, 5-1 and 6-2.

Their second win of the season came against Chabot College when they squeezed by, 5-4.

In the first half of the Diablo clash, the Vikings held a 1-0 lead until the eighth, when Ram hurler Miller was bombed for an additional four runs.

Bussanick and Don Kunkle were both two for four in the game.

The Rams led 1-0 until the fourth in the second game. Then Diablo went ahead 2-1, only to be tied by the Rams in their half of the inning.

Diablo belted pitcher Dyer for four in the sixth, and went on to win. Russ Kunkle was three for four with a triple in the game, and his brother Don, also three for four, doubled in the sixth.

Good fortune came to the Rams in their routing of Chabot. The Gladiators trailed 5-3 in the ninth, and then doubled off Dyer who had come on in relief in the seventh.

Outfielder Jenkins was responsible for four singles toward the Ram effort. Don Kunkle was three for five.

The doubleheader with San Mateo scheduled for March 21 was postponed by rain, and half of it is to be made up at 3 p.m. today in Balboa Stadium.

In the event that any postponed game is again rained out, the contest must be cancelled, according to league rules.

"It's too bad the games have to depend upon the weather," Coach Ernie Domecus commented.

Spikers Get Set For Chabot Clash Friday Afternoon

Boasting a 2-1 season record as of April 1, the Ram trackmen take on the Chabot College Gladiators here at 3 p.m. Friday.

The last pre-Easter conference meet found the Rams overcome by Foothill, 83-53.

Tom Gardner took the 100 event with a 10.3 and the 220 with a 22.7. In the 120 high hurdles, Foothill's time of 16.1 was up a full second on Ram Charles Gibson's 17.1 bid.

The Rams were less fortunate in the 330 intermediates, with Norm Kirby more than five seconds in back of Foothill's 42.2 time.

Rod Coleman placed second in the 440 with 51.1, and Mike Conroy ran third in the half mile, 2:03.4. Rich Klemmer and Gene Plotkin teamed to dominate the middle distance runs.

Klemmer took a 4:27.2 first in the mile, and Plotkin ran third, 4:47.8. In the two mile, Klemmer also took first, 10:16.3, to Plotkin's second of 10:27. Harry McCoy ran third as the Rams swept the event.

In field events, Foothill swept the pole vault, reaching a high of 12' 6". The best Ram attempt was Rich Modolo's 9' 6" vault. Leroy Woods placed second behind two other Owls in the high jump with a mark of 6' 0".

Pat Lewis took both the shot and discus events, posting marks of 50' 11" and 145' 5¾", respectively. In the discus, Lewis eked his triumph by a mere ½ inch, as second in the event was 145' 5¼".

Gibson placed second in the broad jump, 21' 7½". The Owls swept the triple jump with a top distance of 45' 8". The 440 relay went to Foothill only by a fraction of a second. The Owls ran 44.31 to the Rams' 44.62.

The Rams came back in the mile relay with 3:34.5 to a "no time" posted by Foothill.

In other conference action, the Rams stomped Contra Costa in their March 13 melee, 82-54.

In the Golden Gate Relays, the Rams placed only sixth, and were trounced in every event. The only places held by the Rams in the San Mateo-hosted meet, were Gardner's third place 9.7 100, his best mark in two seasons, Klemmer's 4:27.5 mile run, good for a fifth, and Lewis' third place 166' 6" discus bid.

"Our weak spots this year seem to be in the new triple jump, the new 330 hurdles, and the broad jump," coach Lou Vasquez said. "We haven't had any trouble with the 220 which I thought might be different since we run it on the turn now, but we might with the tougher teams."

Gray Breaks Ram Mark As Swimmers Fall To Jaguars

Despite Rick Gray's record breaking 24.1 in the 50 freestyle, the Ram swim team dropped their third straight conference meet, 67-27, at San Jose City College last Friday.

The loss keeps the Rams in the cellar with their 3-0 conference record.

Again outnumbered, the San Francisco seven lost 12 points in events which they could either not fill or could place only one swimmer. The absence of versatile Bob Barnes in the relays and backstroke events contributed to the manpower shortage.

After losing the 400 yard medley relay the Rams only managed a third in the 200 free with Dennis Harley's 2:30 clocking.

Gray came back with a quick five points by winning the 50 free in 24.1, which breaks the old record set by Schwartz in 1960 of 24.8.

Brian Edie placed second in the 200 individual medley and divers Bob Corsiglia and Dave Stone were second and third in the diving totals.

The Rams gave away eight points in the 200 butterfly as their age old problem of too many events for too few men was evident.

Fred Wales posted his season's best in the 500 freestyle for a first place and Edie pulled to a second in the 200 breaststroke.

Gray reeled off a 55.4 in the 100 free for his second win but Bill Anderson couldn't keep the streak going as he placed third in the 200 yard backstroke.

RA Pulls Out Of Bowling League

Because of lack of participation, the Recreation Association bowling league competition, which had been expected to meet other leagues this semester, has been cancelled, RA President Fran Richardson said today.

The league was established as a result of the popularity of two bowling classes held last semester.

Plans for the league had included participation in competition on college Sports Days against other Bay Area colleges and the election of league officers.

As to whether the league would be reopened at a later date, no one chose to comment.

Two Sports Days remain on the RA calendar this semester. One will be held Saturday, April 18, in Oakland, and the other will be held on Saturday, May 9, in Monterey, Miss Richardson added.

Volleyball, softball, badminton, tennis, swimming, fencing, folk and modern dance are currently offered to all interested participants as part of the RA program.

Those interested may sign up in the women's gymnasium.

The college has competed against others in the Bay Area at Cabrillo College and College of San Mateo, Miss Richardson emphasized.

Team Places 3-0 Record Against Comets Friday

By Mike Smith

City College's tennis team, with an 8-1 season record, walloped the San Jose City College netmen 6-1, and trounced the Diablo Valley Vikings 7-0 in two pre-Easter conference matches to gain the first place berth in the Golden Gate Conference with a 3-0 record.

Although there is only room at the top for one, the Foothill College Owls, who also have a 3-0 mark, are convinced that they are that ONE. The defending conference champion Rams will have a chance to dispose of the Owls Friday, April 24, at Golden Gate Park.

This may be the most crucial match of the season, winner take all. The Owls, who have a 7-2 mark compared with the Rams now 10-1 season record, are sure that they will not lose another meet.

In the Rams' March 13 match against San Jose, the Friday 13 jinx did not shower any of its bad luck over the local netters. Coach Roy Diederichsen's crew won all but one set.

They swept the singles at 5-0. Al Brambila won the starter over San Jose's Wes Clarks, 7-5, 6-1. Vince Chinn topped T. DeGuchi at identical scores of 6-3.

In the third and fourth singles it was Lou Engelstein over W. Haggstrom, 7-5, 6-0; and Fred Suessman routing G. Custard 6-2, 6-0. In the final and fifth singles, Mike Price downed M. Sorenson 6-1 and 8-6.

The doubles were split when San Jose's Clarks and Haggstrom defeated Suessman and Engelstein, 8-6, 4-1. The Brambila-Chinn combo topped the DeGuchi-Galin pair, 6-2 and 6-4.

The March 20 match against the lowly Diablo Valley Vikings was a "smear" job by the Rams. The City College netters swept all seven sets for their first conference blank of the 1964 season.

Chinn won the opening singles set at 6-1, 6-3. In the second and third sets, it was Suessman winning with a 6-1, 6-2 mark followed by Levy's 6-1, 6-3.

The Rams swept both doubles with Brambila and Chinn taking the first doubles at 6-2, 6-2. Levy-Suessman won the final set with a 6-3, 6-4.

This Friday at Golden Gate Park, City College's defending champs will take on the Contra Costa Comets at 3:30 p.m. In the five years the two teams have met, the Rams have won all five matches, with the last three at 7-0 scores.

Last year the Contra Costa tennis squad finished in the number 4 spot, tied with Oakland, of the Golden Gate Conference, with a 4-3 mark.

Devinessians, Divine Ones Post Intra Cage Victories

In the second week of the Associated Men Student sponsored intramural basketball action, The Devinessians buried The Aliis, 69-31, and the NBA Rejects fell to The Divine Ones 66-48.

Both games were played at the same time in the men's gymnasium because the women's gymnasium was unavailable.

Alvin Nesly was The Devinessian's high scorer with 27 points, while Avery Carter in the opposite court led The Divine Ones with 20.

Alpha Delta Sigma forfeited to Phi Beta Delta, and Alpha Phi Epsilon forfeited a rescheduled game to Alpha Kappa Rho in the fraternity league.

On March 17, Alpha Sigma Delta lost to Zeta Phi Sigma by a score of 36 to 24.

Hotel and Restaurant wiped out the Ram Ski Club by a score of 46 to 5 with the help of high scorer Rich Harder and the Lutheran Club outshot the Newman Club, 45-20.

The next day, March 18, the Saxons smeared the Aliis, 50-16, as Joe Geran scored 13 points for the winning Saxons.

Last week's games were as follows: the Hawaiian Club defeated the Lutheran Club, 39-30 and the Newman Club outnetted The Guardsman, 43-40.

The Filipino Club crushed Hotel and Restaurant with a score of 80-33; Larry Minasiam hit 28 of the winning points. Beta Tau was upset by Alpha Phi Epsilon, 27-26, while Alpha Phi Omega forfeited to Alpha Kappa Rho.

Annual Selection For Hall-Of-Famers Begins

Nominations for the annual selection of athletes to the college's Hall of Fame will be made next week. Several players are selected on the basis of former sports prowess and their eligibility according to Hall of Fame selection rules.

Eligibility is determined by the length of time elapsed since the nominee attended the college. He must have left the college at least two years before he is eligible for nomination.

The choices are turned over to a voting body composed of Jack Gaddy, physical education department, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, instructor Tom Wilson and counselor Bill Fischer.

Those elected are determined on a point-voting system; three for every first place vote, two for second, and one for third place.

Phelan Lauds Cagers' Drive

By Fred Wales

Commenting on his team's 28-won, 4-lost season mark, basketball mentor Sid Phelan stated, "They did a tremendous job and of all the teams I've coached they stood out as always playing up to their potential."

Their potential carried them to a 13-1 preseason record and third place in the Modesto Tourney. In Golden Gate Conference action, the Rams posted a 13-won 1-lost record, the best record in the Golden Gate Conference's history.

At the close of the conference season, the Rams met Menlo College in a playoff for the State Tournament, and the Rams blasted the Coast Conference Champion Oaks, 75-44.

In the State Tourney they faced the nation's number one team, Riverside, and fought to the wire before falling in the final seconds, 42-40. Coach Phelan described the game as an outstanding job and went on to say that with just a little luck the Rams would have won.

Along with always playing up to their potential, Phelan cited some of the team's other strong points.

"The drive and enthusiasm of the second club was a great help to the team and really came in handy at the end of the season. It was the best attitude displayed by any of my second strings."

He also praised their ability to keep going after they were down even as much as ten points which occurred on numerous occasions. "They never seemed to let down," Phelan said.

His final tribute was to the pride the team possessed in their ability. After the Riverside game any other team might have given up when down at halftime, but the Rams came back to take San Diego, 79-57.

Jerry Chandler and Art Adams were the leaders who carried the team in the opening games. Phelan terms the pair Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside because of Adams' ability to hit from outside and Chandler's moves inside the key.

Chandler is one of the most sought after players in the State and Phelan calls him one of the best two-year college players he has ever seen.

Adams, the team's leading scorer, does not plan to continue playing.

Thirty-two game season statistics:

Election Committee Tries For More Student Votes

Political campaigning, conventions and voting systems have been completely revised this semester in an attempt to foster student voting, according to Associated Student Election Commissioner Paul Coke.

Coke's duties include making sure that election rules are complied with, checking out candidate qualifications and enforcing poster and banner rules.

"Many students are under the assumption that they need an Associated Student card in order to vote," Coke said, "but a registration card is the only requirement."

The card serves a dual role then, since in addition to its use for library privileges, all students are actually registered voters too.

"Elections in the past have been a disgrace," he emphasized. "Last semester only 10 per cent or 800 students voted. The non-voters are an apathetic group."

He added that one of the main objectives of his office this semester is not only to get out the vote but also to make students aware of student government.

"There will be two voting days," Coke explained. "The dates are Tuesday, May 19, and Wednesday, May 20. Most precincts will remain open from 8:30 a.m. until 2 p.m."

He added that voting machines will not be used because they will be needed for the state primary elections.

The assigned precincts will be the arts building, library, Science Hall, Smith Hall and the two gymnasiums.

"The parties represented are basically similar to those on campus last semester," Coke reported. These are the United Students Party and the Student Representative Party.

He added that there is an indication of a third major party developing and expected soon to appear on campus.

According to Coke, "a political party is composed of three or more persons, mutually consenting to organize."

The main qualification for candidates is a matter of grade point averages and units completed. Under the AS Constitution, candidates for President and Vice President must have at least 42 and not more than 60 units completed and a grade point average of at least 2.3.

Candidates for Associated Men and Women Student Presidents must have completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units, with a grade point average of 2.2.

Sophomore Presidential candidates must have completed 28 and not more than 60 units, with an average of 2.0. Freshman Presidential candidates must have a minimum of 14 and a maximum of 27.5 units completed with an average of 2.0.

Candidates for sophomore and freshman seats on Student Council must have the same number of units completed as their respective class presidents and the same grade point average.

"Probably the biggest problem involving candidates is that they are nominated though unqualified and knowing they cannot run. This gives us a lot of trouble," Coke said.

Candidates also are required to file petitions, signed by 15 AS members. Coke set the date due at Friday, May 8.

Candidates nominated during convention-time, and their campaign fee paid to the student finance office in Smith Hall. The fee is $4 for presidential candidates and $2 for all other offices.

Coke asked that both the SRP and USP know that a candidate is eligible and sincerely interested in running for student government office.

He explained that "last semester several candidates from the USP were unqualified to run, therefore many offices were uncontested, which implies that Student Council candidates are the major violators disregarding qualification rules.

"The political campaign is the biggest change from last semester," he said. "The expenditures are probably my office's strongest concern."

Coke stipulates that the political party may spend no more than $125; the presidential candidate no more than $50 and all other office candidates only $25.

"Last semester there was a loose check and balance system," he commented.

"This semester all candidates must file a statement of all expenditures and all donations made to them. Those statements must be filed by Friday, May 15, and will be completely audited by a member of my staff," he emphasized.

"Falsification or petty embezzlement will result in the office under investigation being 'frozen' until the situation is corrected," he warned.

Coke also discussed the forthcoming political conventions, scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. April 21 to 23 in Smith Hall. The parties set the procedures. The first night is for the student convention, at which anyone may be nominated. It may be referred to as SRP convention night.

The second night is devoted to fraternal organizations, clubs and student nominations. This night is termed the USP convention night.

The third night is an open convention, open to any group that wishes to nominate a favorite aspiring politician. Coke has made it mandatory that future commissioners provide a third night so that all groups are assured representation.

Dinner, Show Open New Quarters Of Floral Department

The retail floristry department will open the doors of its new quarters to representatives from the floral industry, including wholesalers and growers, at 8 p.m. today, Maryhope Jacks, floristry instructor here, stated this week.

Presentation of a $200 scholarship award will be made to Larry Jenzen, who was selected as the most promising student in the college's retail floristry curriculum this semester.

Mrs. Jacks stated that this is the first such award given a student by the newly-formed retail floristry foundation here.

Last semester, this foundation made an initial $4000 investment in the program.

A full program has been planned beginning with dinner. Speeches are expected from industry personnel in attendance and from college administrators and students in the program.

More than 500 guests are expected to attend the Open House. Among those invited are the president of the National Florist Industry and Local Florist Industry, and San Francisco Mayor Jack Shelley.

Demonstrations will be conducted by advanced floristry students and several window displays have been arranged. The different exhibits will be judged by several representatives of the industry in attendance and trophies will be awarded to the "top three," Mrs. Jacks said.

An open house for students and faculty members here is planned for early May.

Susan Schwampe Wins Best-Dressed Coed Contest

Introduction of Susan Schwampe as the Best-Dressed Coed on campus climaxed the Associated Women Student fashion show-tea last Thursday.

One of 12 semifinalists who modeled in the fashion show, Miss Schwampe was selected from a total of 40 entrants on the basis of poise, walk and appearance by faculty and AWS board members. She was also a model in last semester's show.

The green-eyed blonde has danced with the San Francisco Ballet Company and plans to become a college dance instructor despite several Hollywood offers.

She is 5-7, weighs 130 pounds and wears a size 9 dress.

At the same function, Donna James won the Inter-Sorority Council Scholarship Award for the highest scholastic achievement among women in the first midterm period here.

On hearing the news of her achievement, the 18-year-old Miss James admitted no desire to "jump over things" and denied being excited. She qualified her seeming lack of emotion by several attempts to call her father stating, "I'm excited because I want to tell my father," adding "but that's all."

The grades that won her the award were two "A's" and four "B's."

Miss James is a graduate of Lowell High School but admits that awards are not the usual thing with her, although she made the high school honor roll and the more difficult California Scholarship Federation honor roll more than once.

Miss James is the first Lowell graduate to win. In the past the award has gone to graduates of St. Paul's, Washington and Lincoln High Schools.

Book Display Here For Library Week

City College's library will display outstanding books through Friday as a feature of National Library Week.

The books representing such fields as music, art and history, are in the display case at the main entrance to the library.

Reading Is The Key To Understanding will be the theme for this year's "week," and displays will be placed in major downtown stores with the cooperation of the San Francisco Council of the District Merchants Association.

National Library Week was begun in 1958, with the theme, Wake Up and Read.

It was the first concentrated nationwide effort to focus public attention on reading as a source of personal pleasure and enrichment, on the importance of reading in American life and on the nation's libraries.

Local events this week include, in addition to the college display, activities in the city's 26 branch libraries.

City Superintendent of Schools Harold Spears said, in reference to the event, "Our schools and libraries have demonstrated by working together that our common goal is education."

50 Try For Top Slots In Drama Production

Approximately 50 students tried out for the 12 major roles in the drama department's next production, Beggar on Horseback, a Connelly-Kaufman comedy.

The play is scheduled to open May 6 and continue through May 9, Walter Krumm, the play's director, stated.

The play requires an unusually large cast of 40, and students may still try out for roles as extras.

Considered nationally as a complicated and difficult endeavor, Beggar on Horseback is seldom performed by college groups and rarely by professional groups. An expressionistic play, it is also considered by producers and critics a rarity in itself.

Previously director of College Hour one-act plays, Krumm has chosen the play as the second major production of the drama department this semester.

Bill Gamble, student designer and veteran of the recent Tartuffe production, is designing the intricate set system for the show.

Because ten separate scenes are required, production will necessitate 19 separate sets.

Pledge Sustains Injuries During Night Of Initiation

An Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity pledge, freshman William Morris, suffered severe face injuries and a basal fracture when he plunged from a moving automobile during initiation rites on April 7 in Daly City.

When The Guardsman went to press, Morris was conscious but unable to recall the events that led to his fall. He is now recuperating at the Peninsula Hospital in Burlingame.

"No hazing activities are authorized by the college. Such incidents are not honorable with the college's attempt to provide a wholesome outlet for the students," Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman commented last week.

Driving the car at 30 miles an hour was Robert Stephens, fraternity president. In the car at the time of the accident were pledge Charles McGee, student Carol Robertson and fraternity member Warren Brooks.

After an evening of strenuous initiation rites, a total of six or seven blindfolded pledges was driven to spots remote from their homes and left to walk home.

As reconstructed by Daly City police, McGee and Morris were the last two pledges to be thus left. The two men were left near Lake Merced at 12:30 a.m. but climbed back into the car, removed their blindfolds and at Geneva avenue demanded to be driven no further from their homes.

McGee opened the side door and prepared to get out at the next red light.

"I told William to wait, but he wanted to get out right then and there. He said 'I'm going now' and jumped right past me," McGee said.

Alpha Phi Epsilon has been a fine group in its 11 years on campus, Hillsman commented, concerning the fraternity's program.

Inter-Fraternity Council President Bruce Thomas announced last week that the proceeds from the IFC dance, At Last, held Friday, will be given to the Morris family.

Bunnies And Band, Beef And Beatles At Hungry Ear Fest

A collegiate version of the Playboy Bunnies, a 34-piece dance band, steaks prepared to order, and the college's student Carol Robertson and fraternity member Warren Brooks.

The event is set for 8 p.m. to midnight Friday, April 24, in Smith Hall, dance band sponsor John Dunn announced last week.

"This is the greatest deal that could possibly be offered," Dunn said.

"For $2.50, a person will enjoy, among other things, a steak, or fish, cooked to order with French fries, salad, rolls, and a 34-piece dance band that will play for four hours.

"Then too, there will be two half-hour floor shows, which will include," Dunn emphasized, "such great acts as our versions of the Beatles and the Playboy Bunnies."

Tickets to the dinner-dance are being sold in advance only. No tickets will be sold at the door and the price is $2.50 for everyone.

Tickets can be purchased from any one of 50 student sales persons around campus or in Smith Hall. All sales persons are wearing gold badges on which is printed "Hungry Ear Dance." Ticket sales end Friday.

"We want to sell 500 tickets, and we have already sold 350 which means we have only 150 tickets remaining. We are closing ticket sales Friday," Dunn explained, "because we need sufficient time to order the food."

Reservations for the dance for a group of six or more persons can be made through Dunn in Smith Hall.

"We want everybody to come, especially parents. We will have a night-club atmosphere; notice the name of the dance. Where else could a person go at our prices and get all of this," Dunn said.

Dining and dancing will be by candlelight in the fountain and cafeteria areas of Smith Hall. Dinner will be served from 8 to 9 p.m. Any persons coming in after 9 p.m. will not be served.

All waiters, busboys, hosts, hostesses and hat-check girls are members of the Pep Band.

Dunn said that proceeds will be used for band equipment.

Peace Corps Speaker Seeks Recruits Today

James McKay, special assistant in the technical professional division of the Peace Corps in Washington, D. C., will make his second visit to the campus today to discuss the corps' program with students here.

He will be assigned to S-147 and will be available from approximately 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman said last week.

McKay was one of the first to submit his application for overseas service when the late President Kennedy issued his executive order in March, 1961. He was then invited to join a group of corps volunteers in West Pakistan.

Prior to this assignment, he was trained at Colorado State University.

McKay plans to return to college next year.

Success Story Series

College's Miss America, Lee Meriwether, Today

BEFORE: Lee Meriwether, Miss America, 1954.

By Bea Takeuchi

Humility and sincerity are rare characteristics for many young persons who have experienced some success in their chosen fields. However, Lee Meriwether, City College's Miss America 1955, has retained those admirable qualities.

As proof, The Guardsman keeps a handwritten letter from Lee, with answers to a 1964 letter-interview. This, many reporters must agree, is rare reward for a journalist's efforts. Lee also sent a photograph of herself, with a written apology and an explanation for her "tardiness."

"Lee Ann was the person who would wash all the dishes at a social," said Dean Mary Golding. "Even when we gave her a lifetime Associated Student card, she said, 'Now that I have all this money, they give me a free card!' Lee was always so sweet and unaffected," Dean Golding added.

When questioned as to her idea of how to remain this way, Lee answered, "I love people and God, and believe in kindness. I pray for a happy world filled with peace."

Lee Meriwether attended this college in 1954, as a drama major. She carried 20 units, maintained an "A" average and was elected to Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

She was 5-8, weighed 124, wore a size 12 dress, and measured 34½-22-35½.

A City College fraternity sponsored her as a contestant for the Miss San Francisco competition in 1954. She competed at the Fairmont Hotel and won the city title.

As Miss San Francisco, she went on to Santa Cruz to compete for the title of Miss California. She won that also and proceeded to Atlantic City under the sponsorship of the Santa Cruz Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The rest is history.

"For me, the most important present was a $5000 scholarship, which I used in New York to study all phases of theater. The other gifts included a wardrobe of cottons, a car, a TV set, a radio and two appearances on the Philco TV Playhouse," she wrote.

A Guardsman interview in October, 1954, mentioned that Lee said that the new Christian Dior "look" of that time had "arrived just in time to save her." This statement earned a letter to Lee from the French ambassador. He sent his congratulations and commented that he looked forward to meeting her.

Lee's attitude towards cheesecake photos has not changed. She was asked for a bathing suit photo, and The Guardsman received the following reply: "It was a necessity to appear in a swimsuit at that time, but I disliked it then as I do now. Cheesecake is not an art, no matter how many photographers say so."

Because of the Miss America contest, Lee dropped out of this college. From San Francisco to Atlantic City, and from there, Lee has enjoyed the fame and fortune accorded those endowed with such rare beauty. However, the story doesn't end there.

Today Lee is Mrs. Frank Aletter, wife and mother. She has two daughters, Kyle Kathleen, 3 and Lesley Anne, 4 months. Her husband is an actor on the Cara Williams television series, which is scheduled to begin this month.

Lee is the same beauty, with the same measurements. She still participates in drama workshops. She keeps her own house, and works on mosaics, hand crafts and woodblock cuts.

Her advice to eager drama students is to "study hard, not only the theater courses, and to listen to their instructors."

Mrs. Aletter further wrote that "as soon as my little ones are old enough, back to school I go. I realize now there was so much I missed."

The lucky spouse of Lee's indicated in his own handwriting, that being married to this Miss America is sublime. "She's the prettiest and most competent roommate I've ever had," he boasted.

Peace Corps Promises Travel, Worthwhile Work To Recruits

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Peace Corps is on campus today in an effort to interest students in a chance for adventure, a broader education, and an effective way of serving the United States in a time of need.

The fact that the Peace Corps offers adventure and a broader education to the young American can go without saying. The corpsmen have a chance to view other peoples and cultures in a way no branch of the armed forces can offer. If the cry of distant lands gets into a person's bones, a tour of duty in the Peace Corps should never be overlooked.

Another fact about the corps is that it accomplishes exactly what it was set up for, the raising of American prestige overseas. The supporters of the Kennedy Administration may not be able to hold up the Bay of Pigs or Medicare when the history books are being written, but there will always be the Peace Corps.

However, there are several things which the representative is not offering when he points out the laurels of his organization. He offers no get-rich-quick scheme, no draft-dodging setup or no skylarking tour of the world at the expense of the government.

The salary of the Peace Corps volunteer is $75 a month, which is held for him until he completes his tour of duty. He cannot touch it until then. While he is in a foreign country, he is expected to live at the same standard as those around him, and those around him usually do not even have the luxury of a roof over their head.

A male volunteer receives the benefit of a draft deferment, be that as it may. A soldier in the armed forces makes just about as much money as an office manager in Japan, and that country has such a high standard of living that its people do not need the help of the Peace Corps. They are doing fine by themselves.

As far as a government-paid jaunt of irresponsibility, let us please remember what wide-eyed girl and a misplaced postcard as an African nation did for the American image in that area. The Peace Corps wants only mature and responsible persons; others need not apply.

The Peace Corps promises fun, travel and worthwhile work for those who qualify. The news story concerning when and where the corps representative is to speak is on page 1 of The Guardsman. It is strongly suggested that all interested persons go hear what the man has to say. They might learn something.

Who Can Say What Hazing Is?

LAST WEEK a student from this college was badly hurt, falling from a moving automobile. This fact would not have rated a three-inch story on page 32 of the metropolitan newspapers except that this story was concerned with the ominious words "fraternity initiation" and "hazing."

A semanticist would have a field day with the word "hazing" because of the many and varied connotations. Every person has a different opinion on where legal initiation practices stop and hazing, forbidden by California law, begins. One incident will bring out these opinions.

Because of what happened and the publicity received, the fraternities and sororities of this college, and possibly all of the colleges in California, are going to suffer. This could have been avoided by a complete abandonment of all initiation practices, but the organizations are reluctant to do this because the "practices" have become tradition.

Traditions are started by somebody, and if fraternities and sororities feel it is necessary to cause their pledges some discomfort before membership, they should route the energies expended on these activities to more useful and entirely safe campus projects.

Franciscans Use 'Apartment' To Launch Singing Career

By Jerry Howard

John and Marsha are out on their first date. Naturally, John wants to make a good impression, so he turns to Marsha and says,

"Why don't we go over to my apartment for a while? We'll have a couple of drinks and hear some great folk music, okay?"

"Why John, you big fern!" replies Marsha. "Do you really think I'd fall for a corny old line like that? Take me home!"

Alas; what did poor John do wrong?

Well, perhaps he forgot to mention that "My Apartment" is the name of a nightclub in downtown San Francisco, where two electrifying young men from City College are successfully launching a folk singing career.

Tucker Spolter, education major, and Dennis Chelini, real estate major, both 22, and both high sophomores here, have been appearing at several clubs throughout the city for the past three months.

Calling themselves The Franciscans, they specialize in non-ethnic, contemporary folk and spiritual songs. They write much of their own material.

Not strictly nightclub entertainers, The Franciscans sing at private parties and perform many charity shows for no pay in the San Francisco area.

Spolter, red-headed and talkative, plays guitar and banjo. He spent a year traveling in Europe, and studied for a short time at the Sorbonne in Paris, before attending City College.

Chelini, tall, and a bit more reserved in conversation, plays both six and twelve string guitars. He was a merchant seaman before coming here, and during his travels, picked up many folk songs from all over the world.

In addition to his courses and singing, Chelini finds time to work in a service station.

Last month The Franciscans auditioned for Enrico Banducci, owner of San Francisco's famed hungry i club.

"Mr. Banducci described us as diamonds in the rough," says Spolter. "He liked our singing and arrangements, but said that we could use a little more polish. He made us a tentative offer for a job at the hungry i in June."

These, then, are The Franciscans. And it would seem that they have a bright future ahead of them; that is, if the Johns in this world would be a little more explicit when inviting the Marshas to "my apartment."

Foley Fulfills Teaching Aim, Fills Gap Here

Tim Foley, an experienced police administrator, is the latest addition to the college criminology department.

Foley, recently with the Livermore Police department where he served six years as an administrator, is now co-chairman here with senior instructor Larry Lawson.

A student at City College in 1946, Foley worked under the late Fred Fitzgerald and attests that he has desired to teach criminology at the college since that time.

"I have always hoped to teach here, but it is unfortunate that it was the loss of Mr. Fitzgerald that brought me here."

Foley continued his education at the University of California, Berkeley, from which he was graduated with a bachelor's degree in psychology. "I also took education courses as electives so that I would be qualified to teach," he said.

With post-graduate work in criminology also added to his credits, Foley left UC and began practical police work from the bottom up, first on a beat and then as a patrolman working at the Mission station.

Promotions were rapid, and in the five of his total of 11 years in police work spent with the San Francisco department, Foley taught at the Police Academy, had many special administrative assignments and worked in the chief's office as a planning researcher.

From the San Francisco department he was rotated to Livermore where he became second in command. He says he hopes to stay here indefinitely.

AFTER: Mrs. Frank Aletter, 1964.

Avant Guardsman!

By Michel Janicot

WITH THE coming of Spring, a new crisis has erupted on campus. Actually, it is more a vicissitude than a crisis: the annual race to who is who in collegiate clothing style is IN.

This can only mean sobering news for parents. People who think that their sons can make it on a keen wit and a change of slacks are on the wrong track.

It is now a known fact that experts in campus affairs have found that the clothes a man needs when he gets into college are "almost as important as the college he chooses and . . . his weekly allowance."

$1100 WARDROBE

The minimum wardrobe requirements of today's college man are considerable. Not so long ago, such a wardrobe would have been thought adequate for a president of United States Steel. Now, by the most conservative estimate, it will cost $1100 to dress the collegian.

Many parents will doubtless feel that they have done their share by borrowing on the insurance, mortgaging the house and sacrificing Saturday night beer to scrape up for their son's welfare. All they have to do now is to brace themselves again for this additional $1100.

Start with two suits, six to eight pairs of slacks and an equal number of dress shirts. However, not any old suits will do. Suits must be in the classic natural-shoulder model (preferably with a vest), with a three-button front — no side vents — in dark shades of navy blue, deep gray or deep olive.

Anyone planning to send a son away in two of his father's old double-breasted plaids is asking for trouble.

Then he will need a blue blazer — practically a must for college life — a tweed or Shetland sports jacket and a jacket of soft camel's hair. Add half a dozen sports shirts from batik prints, bold checks and India madras prints. Also add a car coat, a raincoat with zip-out lining and a pair of dressy shoes and mocassins.

FERRARI OR DUSENBERG?

But some parents will note some expensive implications hidden in this wardrobe. What is the point of the car coat if their son doesn't own a car? And what kind of car can their son, dressed in such a wardrobe, drive on campus? Surely nothing less than a Ferrari or a Dusenberg Classic.

And what about those India madras prints? India madras prints are men as just one thing — vacation in Jamaica with bankers' daughters. The camel's hair is also suspicious. Camel's hair means Montgomery Street and big bar tabs.

What may trouble a parent most, however, is the absence of any clothing suitable for classroom or study wear. Where are the trousers with iron seats whose shine is a proud badge of a scholar?

Obviously, times have changed. Of course, this wardrobe surely doesn't apply to City College students. Because chances are that, if one such well-dressed student did attend classes in his custom-made Brooks Brothers suit, Italian shoes and Freneh necktie, he'd be mistaken for an instructor or a Harvard flunk-out.

Instead, City College students display the usual haberdashery of levis, sweatshirts and sneakers and grease-smeared ski nylon jackets.

Who wants to "blow" $1100 just to keep up with the Joneses' son?

Think of all the Saturday night beer parents can drink! Think of the family house which doesn't need to be mortgaged! Think of the insurance which doesn't have to be borrowed upon!

And one doesn't need a camel's hair jacket to have a big bar tab. That $1100 saved on that wardrobe will undoubtedly be invested in that big bar tab.

Student Council Hears IFC President Express Regret Over Pledge Week Incident

By Ann Weill

Inter-Fraternity Council President Bruce Thomas expressed regret to student council last Thursday over the initiation incident that resulted in a fraternity pledge being seriously injured.

Thomas stated that all proceeds from the IFC dance last week will go toward the medical care of William Morris, now at Peninsula Hospital in Burlingame. Associated Student President Bob Roddick urged all students to contribute to the fund for Morris, particularly those who had not purchased a ticket to the dance.

Finance Chairman George Quick reported that although approximately $36,000 in AS funds has been used thus far this semester, he is concerned as to how certain groups, such as College Hour Concert and Lecture Series, have received their money because he has not given money to the series sponsors.

Quick also commented, "Across the street at Riordan High School, there's a new car being raffled off!" Since he had been told that it was illegal to make revenue in that way, he is wondering why it's legal on that side of the street but not on this side.

Roddick announced that circumstances will prevent him from attending the California State Junior College Conference, and that Freshman President Terry Cloney will attend in his place.

Freshman member Charlotte Wong reported that she had sent a letter to San Jose City College to the effect that this college would not participate in the essay contest sponsored by that college. Nonparticipation resulted because of an apparent lack of interest among students here.

Associated Women Student President Wardene Oliver brought a sample of a starter set of dishes to the meeting. She was requested to do so after the AWS asked for $125 to purchase a starter set of dishes for formal college affairs.

A motion to allocate the funds was passed, 8-1-5.

There was also discussion concerning revenue for the current semester, and Quick suggested mandatory parking permits for all motorcycles parked in the "A" lot.

Freshman member Mike Garabedian moved that all motorcycles on campus be registered with the police department in two weeks. The motion was amended to read that the permits be effective in the Fall, 1964, semester.

Former Student Receives UC Scholastic Honors

Undergraduate honors last week were bestowed upon City College graduate Marie Annette Dafau by the University of California at Berkeley.

A student here from September, 1961 through January, 1963, and a president of the Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society, Miss Dafau was awarded honors in the College of Agriculture at the Berkeley campus.

"This honor is bestowed upon students who achieve a cumulative B average or better. I am sure that you are as pleased as we are with the progress that this student has made at the University of California," William F. Shepard, associate university dean, said in a letter to President Louis G. Conlan.

Miss Dafau was graduated from Abraham Lincoln High School.

Chronicle Writer Says 'Big Science' Invading Colleges

By Bea Takeuchi

David Perlman, science editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, told how "big science" is invading this country's universities, in a lecture here last Thursday.

Perlman said that there "is a grave danger of professors of science becoming involved with 'big science' and thereby converted to publicists and professors of administration."

He said that the United States spends billions on new tools, technical gadgets and space research. Sometimes these sums are given to universities for research, and the sums often exceed their operating budgets.

"Exploring the universe has its price, and the bitter price is freedom, sometimes," Perlman said. "Scientific progress is absolutely dependent on freedom of thought," he added.

Perlman then spoke of his recent "wild adventure of strange animals and humans," which he made with scientists on the Galapagos Expedition.

The expedition cost $130,000, a paltry sum in comparison with the billions that are poured into space research in today's arms race. It was made by scientists from the University of California under a National Science Foundation grant.

Perlman said that the unusual and sometimes comical experiments used by biologists, ornithologists and botanists intrigued him. He became an avid bird-watcher, and before long, was conducting little experiments on his own.

Without realizing it, Perlman conducted scientific experiments of his own. When he left the Galapagos, he was able to distinguish between the "Whiffler" and the "Squawker." He observed the blue footed Booby bird, and made scientific experiments of his own.

He went through a series of painstaking and accurate observations, and learned that the birds that "whiffled" had smaller irises than those Boobies who "squawked."

He returned here with his written hypothesis and submitted a report of his investigation. However, his efforts were turned down because scientists already "knew about this."

"The Galapagos Islands is the origin of all of Darwin's view of 'natural selection,' or 'the survival of the fittest'," said Perlman. "This research trip will contribute more to science than people realize," he added.

"It was intriguing, and lots of fun. All animal life there had an extraordinary lack of fear for humans. The first thing I did when we landed on Ecuador was to eat a cultivated steak and shave, though," Perlman said.

'Ugly' Men Vie For Campus Title In C-Hour Activities

The college's ugliest male students will be on display during College Hour tomorrow at the Ram.

"Not only will the students be able to get a good look at all the ugly contestants," explained Leroy Padilla, Alpha Phi Omega treasurer, "but they will have the opportunity to bid for cream-throwing pies. The highest bidder gets to push the pie in the face of the ugly man of his choice.

"Proceeds from the pie purchase will be counted as votes for the victim," Padilla added.

The ugliest man will be determined by the amount of money he has managed to accumulate during the week. One penny counts as one vote. The man with the most pennies, and not necessarily the ugliest, will be UMOC.

Voting will end at the close of College Hour tomorrow. Alpha Phi Omega, sponsors of the contest, will tally the results and announce the winner during next week's college hour and also over Campus Carrier.

The newly crowned UMOC will receive an enscribed trophy suitable for hanging and an all-expense paid dinner for two at the Tonga Room in the Fairmont Hotel.

The organization sponsoring the winner will receive the prestige of having as one of its members the ugliest man on campus.

"A trophy may also be awarded to the organization," Padilla said, "but it has been lost and not yet found. If we can find it before the winner is announced, the organization will get it."

The Ugly Man On Campus contest is held by chapters of Alpha Phi Omega in colleges in the United States.

Proceeds will go to William Morris, Alpha Phi Epsilon pledge who was involved in an accident on April 6.

Television Series To Have Counseling Purpose In Mind

City College Close Up, a series of 13 half-hour weekly television programs produced by the college, is now being taped at KPIX for release next fall.

The series will have a "definite counseling purpose," as determined by the administration, according to Sylvia R. Leff, faculty producer of the series, who explained that high school counselors will be encouraged to advise students to watch programs specifically concerned with their field of interest.

Format of programs pertaining to many of the college's technical-terminal curricula, Mrs. Leff said, will include discussion by industry representatives of job requirements and opportunities.

A visual explanation of specialized course content will follow.

In the final segment of each program, graduates of the college, employed in the field, discuss their jobs and how their training here prepared them for these jobs.

"The series, however," Mrs. Leff emphasized, "is designed to be informative rather than for instruction."

In addition to the technical-training programs selected for the series, two programs will be directed toward the curricula offered students studying for transfer to universities or four-year colleges.

Information of the academic courses required in technical curricula, such as English, science and political science, is also presented.

Starting date for the series has not yet been determined, but Mrs. Leff emphasized that it will not begin until after the fall semester is underway.

Forum Deadline Set For April 24

Tentative deadline for submitting material to Forum, the annual spring student literary magazine, is set for Friday, April 24, and material should be turned in at the Forum office, C-331-A, Vikki Powers, secretary of Forum, said recently.

Manuscripts submitted should be on 8½ by 11 inch paper and typewritten double-spaced.

Contributions in any literary form, short stories, one-act plays, serious and humorous essays under 1500 words, criticisms of books and authors, articles of current interest and poetry may be submitted.

Satirical and humorous material in any form is also encouraged, Miss Powers added, as well as works representative of music, painting, pottery and photography.

Forum, which appears in the Spring, offers all students interested in writing and art an opportunity to have their work published.

Date of publication is June 1.

C-Hour Features Chamber Music Trio

The chamber music trio of Margery Tede, George Nagata and Tania Agins will appear in concert in College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Meyer Cahn, music department instruetor, announced last week.

Miss Tede, the trio's singer, is a mezzo-soprano.

She earned a degree in music from the University of Montana, and after a year of graduate work with the New England Conservatory of Music, traveled to Europe where she performed on both radio and television.

Miss Tede has sung with the San Francisco Children's Opera as well as the San Francisco Opera Ring.

Nagata, the group's violinist, was born in Tokyo. He is a graduate of the University of the Pacific and has been for the last 14 years studying with San Francisco's Naoum Blinder.

This summer, Nagata has been invited to perform as soloist with the Arthur Fiedler pops orchestra, and just recently he has become a member of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra.

Pianist Agins was a student at the Julliard School of Music where she studied with Irwin Freundlich. Miss Agins received her masters degree in music from the University of Southern California.

Miss Agins has already presented a solo concert, and is currently the co-head of the piano department at the Peninsula Conservatory of Music.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

WEDNESDAY has often been referred to as Woden's day, but there is scarcely an income tax filer who would debate that today is Uncle Sam's Day!

To the individual who is experienced in the ways of the tax world, today is just another day, but to the person who is filing his tax for the first time, this is a big day . . . especially if he has decided to live dangerously and start filling out his income tax today.

He may have rationalized that today is as good as any day to file that tax form, but that point can be argued far into the night.

ONLY THE INEXPERIENCED

Of course, it is clearly understood, that only a person inexperienced in the ways of income tax would take such a chance.

To the average college student, income tax filing is as painful as pouring salt on an open wound, especially when the student discovers he must reimburse Uncle Sam!

One student here, filing his tax for the first time, summed up his feelings on the subject this way.

"I've been eating peanut butter sandwiches every day since Christmas in order to get my finances straightened out. When I found out that I owed Uncle Sam, I realized that I would be eating peanut butter until the beginning of the summer . . . if I last that long!"

Aside from the unpleasant side effects which can result from error and miscalculation, the preparation of the card or the long form is a mighty task.

It's really not the questions that are confusing, it's the thinking and the finagling that goes along with it. Of course it goes without saying, if a person has never done any serious thinking or finagling the process is doubly confusing!

In return for a small fee, which usually turns out to be more than the student's budget allows, all the unattractive and nasty complications which can and do result may be completely eliminated merely by consulting a CPA, but as any college student will testify, this is the easy way out.

LEARN BY MISTAKES

Besides, it is a well known fact that students learn by their mistakes . . . . sometimes!

As one young lady on the campus put it, "I've been filing income tax for the last few years, and because I don't look very good in stripes, I go to great lengths in order that my return will be accurate."

It seems that the only kind, decent and humane comment that can be made about today is, thank goodness April 15 comes but once a year!

And for those individuals who find little consolation in that statement, heed well the old adage: "If you can't beat them, and who can, then you may as well join them . . . and file, file, file!"

Arts Join Forces

By George Nelson

Since the founding of the college 29 years ago, four of the arts — literature, painting, sculpture, music and their related fields — have had little or no representation in or encouragement from student government.

No mention is given them in the Associated Student Constitution.

Rick Abao, student in the arts department here, is in the process of correcting this oversight. With the approval of Dean Ralph Hillsman, Abao is petitioning for names in an effort to have the cultural interests of students become an integral part of the constitution.

Three hundred names are needed. When, and if, acquired, the petition for constitutional amendment, containing the new "cultural clause," will be put on the next election ballot for ratifieation by the members of the Associated Students.

When, and if, the new amendment is ratified, a new organization will be formed. It will be called the Allied Arts Council.

The AAC would have its own constitution which would be registered with the Council of Organizations. It would also become a member of COO.

The functions of the proposed council would be to maintain regular avenues of communication with The Guardsman and metropolitan newspapers, to encourage attendance at the many proposed artistic functions, and to make possible an exposition of all the arts concomitantly, giving students the opportunity to demonstrate their talent.

Members of the faculty would act as a nonvoting advisory board, Abao's proposal states.

The AAC would be open to all those students in any of the four arts and their related fields. And the purpose of the organization will be to promote the arts, especially the work of the students and also to build interest among fellow students.

Optimistic that the organization will be formed, students and members of the staff are already looking forward to an Allied Arts exposition some time in the early future.

"Perhaps late in the semester," Abao hopes.

"The exposition," he predicted, "would be a tour de force of the accomplishment of college students currently enrolled in the creative arts departments, thus giving them the opportunity to show their work."

Netters Still Undefeated

Chabot, Contra Costa Push Ram Tennis Mark To 5-0

By Fred Wales

Continuing their winning ways, the Ram tennis team stretched its Golden Gate Conference mark to 5-0, with shut-out wins in successive weekends over Chabot and Contra Costa.

The wins give the Rams a 9 win, 1 loss season record and first place ranking in over-all records.

Contra Costa proved no problem to the win hungry netters as the comets fell in order to register a ther 7-0 Ram victory.

Vince Chinn led off the singles for the San Franciscans with a 6-0, 6-3, trouncing of Dennis Lang. Al Brambila followed it up with a tough 7-5, 6-4, match with Dan Mikulich.

Ben Levy had less trouble beating Loydd Dickenson, 6-1, 6-1. Engelstein dropped Al Pulko 6-1, 6-4, and Fred Suessman shut out Dan Rounds in two six-love sets.

In doubles action the Chinn-Brambila team wiped Lang and Mikulich 6-1, 6-0, while Levy and Suessman stopped Dickenson and Pulko 6-1, 6-2.

On April 3 the defending champs traveled to San Leandro where they embarrassed their host Chabot with a 7-0 blanking.

Chinn led the singles onslaught as he took Dan Wilson in two sets, 6-1, 6-4. Brambila followed with a 6-1, 6-3 match over Jim Coover while Engelstein shut out Rich Vallejo, 6-0, 6-0.

Levy also kept his opponent scoreless as Keith Stoltenberg fell, 6-0, 6-0. Suessman finished off the singles with two 6-1 sets over Dave Kilpatrick.

In doubles, Chinn-Brambila had little trouble in their 6-1, 6-4 win over Wilson and Coover while Levy and Suessman had less trouble downing Vallejo and Kilpatrick, 6-0, 6-4.

Commenting on the team's string of wins, Coach Roy Diederichsen stated that the team was playing up to their ability and shouldn't have any trouble in any of their conference matches except for Foothill.

Ram netters will have the opportunity to stretch their win streak to six on Friday when they travel to Oakland to match points with the T-Birds.

Golfers Fail To Jell After Good Preseason Record

Ram golfers are finding themselves in the frustrating situation of winning all their practice games but losing the conference matches.

The San Francisco golfers had not lost a single practice match since they defeated Santa Rosa Junior College, 15½-14½, and the University of San Francisco, 29-7, early last March at the season's start.

But in the matches that count, coach Grover Klemmer's golfers have not done too well. They are in last place in the Golden Gate Conference with an 0-3 mark.

Their first two defeats came at the hands of the Oakland City College Thunderbirds, 17½-12½, and the Chabot College Gladiators, one of the two undefeated conference golf teams, 22½-7½, respectively.

Two weeks ago, April 3, the Rams met the other undefeated golf squad, the College of San Mateo Bulldogs. The local golfers lost that one, 20½-9½.

The Rams shot in the middle and high eighties as they have been doing throughout most of the season.

In conference play thus far, Jim Schroeder has the best Ram score with a 79.

The Rams' individual scores in the San Mateo meet were as follows:

Mike Selsnik, 84½; Mike Soden, 89; Steve Parish, 80; Pete Eden, 84, and Mike Moore, 82.

Bulldog scores saw Glen Pollex with 82; Len Studinger with 76; Jim Fair, 79, and Bob Vaughn, 78.

This Friday, at Harding Park, City College golfers will try to gain their first win against the Contra Costa College Comets. Tee-off time is 1 p.m.

At the Richmond Golf Course last season, Contra Costa won the match against Ram golfers, 18½-11½. If the Rams win this one, their conference mark will rise to 1-3.

Next month, May 10, the Ram golf team will compete in a league tournament to be held at Contra Costa.

College Swordsmen Win More Honors

The college's fencing team provided some stiff competition for swordsmen from 11 other area colleges at the Northern Intercollegiate Fencing competition held April 4 at the University of California.

Carlos Cuidad-Real took third place in the individual foil competition and third fencing as a foil team with Wayne Spencer and Ben Bartholomew. The team of three fenced to the semi-finals in the competition, and Ciudad-Real went on to take third in the finals.

Next competition is the Northern California team championships to take place April 25 at San Francisco State.

Rams Down Arch Rival Owls, 5-1, In Riotous Ninth

By Pete Franklin

Long-sought revenge came last Tuesday to the Ram baseball nine when they downed arch-rival Foothill, 5-1, in a highly disputed nine-inning melee.

As a result, the Rams moved to within three games of league-leading San Mateo in the Golden Gate Conference race.

The Owls went ahead in the second on a triple and a Ram throwing error which let the runner score from third. San Francisco stayed under 1-0 until the fifth inning when Pete Giovanola singled with two aboard for a pair of runs.

With masterful pitching by Ron Bringuel through six and a third innings, the Owls were held to five hits and the single run. Brad Rothback came on in the seventh to relieve Bringuel, who complained of arm stiffness.

Rothback preserved the win by retiring the next eight batters in order, fanning three in the process. Bringuel had struck out five while walking one.

The Rams added a run to their two in the seventh, and then the disputes began.

Foothill questioned several decisions in a row. When Butch Bussanick tripled for two more runs in the eighth, a furious protest over the call at third broke out, and in the ensuing dispute, the Foothill manager was ejected for "physical contact with an official."

Ram catcher Pete Giovanola, who was tossed out in the crucial game with the Owls last season, said, "I've waited a year for this game, and I feel great. Now they know how it tastes."

Last year's underdog Rams, rated to finish fifth in the conference of eight teams, fought it down to the wire with the then "prestige" team, Foothill, but lost the championship game in a riot-studded fiasco.

"Questionable calls," and multiple ejection threats by the umpires were the order of that day, and the Rams were on the receiving end of both.

San Francisco dropped the game, 9-6, after leading over the first six and a half innings and loading the bases in the ninth.

"Despite the dissention, the Owls played heads up ball," Ram Coach Ernie Domecus said, "but we just got the breaks, and kept our mouths shut this time."

Foothill used five pitchers, held the Rams to seven hits and completed five double plays, four of which occurred in the first five innings.

Wrestlers Go Under, Try Again Next Year

Although the college wrestling team began the semester with one foot on the mat and the other in the grave, with the season ended, the entire team, feet and all, is buried.

The wrestling team was an experiment to see whether wrestling would be added to the Ram sports roster. The experiment failed, and the team is folded indefinitely.

"There weren't enough interested or qualified students," Dutch Elston, coach and moderator of the pilot team, explained.

"It's difficult to form a wrestling team when the local high schools don't have wrestling programs," he added.

The season began with 18 wrestlers. It ended with two.

"Well," says Elston, "most of the men were disqualified because of the school zoning regulation. Some resigned, and others were not qualified."

Bernard Mordret and Frank Pratt were all that remained of the team at the time of the state semifinals at Cabrillo College in Santa Cruz.

At the semifinals, Mordret won a fourth place, thus qualifying for the state finals at Diablo Valley.

Pratt was unable to qualify — then there was one.

Mordret wrestled in the finals, but he was beaten, and that marked the end of the Ram experimental wrestling team.

Will there be another attempt to form a wrestling team next semester? "It's doubtful," says Elston, "but we won't know until some later date." —G. N.

WRESTLING sponsor Art 'Dutch' Elston, shown in football coaching garb, hopes for more of a turn-out next year. This year was a flop.

Spikers In Tie For Fourth As Jaguars Take Meet, 71-65

By Mike Smith

The City College track team dropped out of third place into a fourth place tie with the same team, the San Jose Jaguars, who defeated them, 71-65, two weeks ago.

The local spikers met third-place College of San Mateo at the college field yesterday. It was the Rams next-to-the-last meet, and their last chance to get back into the third place berth of the Golden Gate Conference.

The following meet, to be held this Saturday, will be with first place Oakland City College Thunderbirds at Berkeley. The T-Birds clinched the track title a couple of weeks ago when they defeated the now second place Foothill College Owls, 93½-42½.

In the April 3 meet with the Jaguars, the Rams placed first in eight of fourteen events, although they lost the meet.

But the lack of depth and weakness in the field events led to their second conference defeat in four meets.

Ram vet Tom Gardner, who has been consistent all season, placed first in the 100 and 220, with 9.9 and 22.7, duplicating the marks he scored against Modesto early in March.

The 440 top spot was taken by Dennis of the Jaguars with 50.6 followed by Ram Rod Coleman's 51.3. The 880 saw Ram Rich Klemmer take first place with 1:58.4.

Ozzie Norris ran the mile in 4:36.3 to take the high spot in that event. He was closely followed by another Ram, Gene Plotkin, with a two-tenths of a second difference. Norris also finished first in the two mile running 10:06.1.

San Jose's Sullivan finished second, 10:07.0, and Plotkin placed third, 10:06.5.

The Rams' downfall came in the field events, even though Lewis took both the discus and shot with distances of 51' 0" and 154'10", respectively. The rest of the field events went to San Jose.

In the high jump, Jaguars Steengraff and Bridewell both leaped an identical six. Rich Modolo and John Helms of the Rams, placed fourth in this event with 5'6" marks.

The relays were divided, with San Francisco winning the 440 in 43.7, and San Jose taking the mile-relay, 3:27.7.

Zeta Phi Edges Alpha Kappa Rho

With the Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition in full swing, the fraternity league action last week found Zeta Phi Sigma over Alpha Kappa Rho, 27-24 and Beta Tau over Phi Beta Delta, 21-12.

In the club league, Hotel and Restaurant upset the Newman Club, 51-48, with the help of Mark White's 28 points.

The Hawaiian Club ran over The Guardsman with a score of 48-27, and Darrel Mattos hit 19 points.

The Filipino Club won by forfeit, when the Ram Ski Club failed to muster a team.

Last night in club competition, the Saxons topped the Anonymous, 36-32, with Chris Smith hitting 10 points for the winners and Alex Reese potting 18 points for the Anonymous.

The Devinessians outscored the criminology department, 58-36, with Joe De Jean making 18 Devinessian points while the NBA Rejects narrowly beat the Allis, 41-37. Joe Kerwin boasted 10 of the Rejects' points and James Dunham 11 of the Allis.

The Alpha Phi Epsilon - Alpha Phi Omega tilt was postponed.

Winless Swimmers At San Mateo Friday

Still looking for their first conference win, the Ram Swim team will travel to San Mateo on Friday to take on the Bulldogs in their last dual meet of the season.

Last Friday the Rams fell to Chabot 58-37 in their best effort so far. Rich Gray led the way with his record breaking 23.6 50 freestyle win followed up with a 53.8 100 freestyle victory. Gray's firsts were the sole wins for the Rams.

Fred Wales copped two seconds in the 200 and 500 freestyle events as did Brian Edie in the 200 individual medley and 200 breaststroke.

Other swimmers grabbing seconds were: Dave Stone in diving, Dennis Harley in the 200 fly and Bob Barnes in the 200 backstroke.

Roger Guidi managed thirds in the 50 free, 100 free and 200 back as did John Hamilton in the 200 IM and Bob Corsiglia in diving.

The Rams will compete in the Golden Gate Conference meet April 23-25 at San Mateo.

Pam Maul Bowls 232 To Win RA Sportsday

In a Recreation Association sportsday at Cabrillo College April 4, Pam Maul won first place in women's bowling with a score of 232 and the college volleyball team placed first.

Other colleges participating were Diablo Valley, Foothill, Hartnell, Monterey Peninsula, San Jose City, Oakland City, College of San Mateo and Cabrillo.

The next scheduled sports day will be at Monterey Peninsula College on May 9. Tennis players interested in competing in the coming sportsday were urged by Frances Galloway to consult her in the gymnasium.

Adams, Chandler Top All-Conference Cage Team

Pair Accounts For Half Of Scoring

Tallying the highest number of votes in the Golden Gate Conference, Ram cage stars Art Adams and Jerry Chandler paced the selections to the 1964 All-Conference team.

The pair finished third and fourth in conference scoring, with 302 and 300 points, respectively.

In game averages, Adams compiled a 21.6, and Chandler 21.4 in the conference while falling to 20 and 19.3 respectively in 32 games.

All totaled, the pair combined for 602 points, more than half the Rams' total offensive output of 1057.

Adams is a high-jumping forward whom Coach Sid Phelan terms "Mr. Outside" for his shooting ability from the corner.

Last year, Adams was a member of the All-Conference second team and hit 202 points in conference play for a career total of 504.

Chandler is the versatile "Mr. Inside," whose moves underneath the basket enabled him to score over centers who were much taller.

Other members, selected by league coaches for the honor list, were Donnie Hicks and Clarence White, from San Jose and Roosevelt Robinson from Contra Costa.

ART ADAMS shows his ability to hit the basket from in close as well as from far out. He is the leading scorer of the team.

Six Student Leaders To Leave For Los Angeles Tomorrow To Attend State-Wide Conference

Six college delegates head southward tomorrow for Los Angeles and the annual three-day State Conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association, student government adviser Sherm Elworthy announced today.

Student leaders attending the conference along with Elworthy include State Information Chairman Cecil Reichert, Associated Student Vice President Lynn Goodrich, Finance Chairman George Quick, Associated Men Student President Roger Kaufman, Freshman Class President Terry Cloney and council member Loralee Lando.

AS President Bob Roddick will be unable to attend.

After a traditional "send-off" breakfast with college President Dr. Louis G. Conlan and Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman in Smith Hall, the delegates will leave for Los Angeles on a 9:45 a.m. flight. They expect to return here Saturday at 3:45 p.m.

The conference agenda includes four or five workshop sessions, a formal banquet, a dance, a presidents' caucus and special advisers' and presidents' breakfasts.

There will be a special workshop for AS presidents and four others on campus attitudes, organizations, activities and communications. Kaufman will be coordinator of the Communications Workshop. Each workshop is expected to have some 70 students in attendance.

This college is a member of Area Six, formed in 1962 by the division of California's two-year colleges into eight areas. The first Area Six Conference was held here last fall and the second in March at the College of San Mateo.

At the San Mateo meeting various resolutions were passed to be brought up later at the State Conference, one of the most important motions being a resolution that the CJCSGA recommend to the State legislature that AS cards be mandatory on two-year college campuses for full-time students.

Service, Booklet Chief Functions Of State Office

Function of the State Information Chairman, permanently held by this college, is to publish an annual information handbook.

Cecil Reichert, who holds the office this semester and will accompany the delegates to the state-wide convention meeting in Los Angeles tomorrow through Saturday, compiles handbook information from each of the 75 two-year colleges in California.

These questions include facts about Associated Student card prices, the name of the student president and the president of the college, student government and the name of the activities adviser.

Other questions include the name of the mascot, the newspaper, the college yearbook, the grade point average necessary for qualification to hold a student government office and the overall athletic program.

After these questions are compiled, Miss Reichert types them and puts them into a booklet to be available for use by other colleges.

Each of the two-year colleges in the state receives four copies of this booklet. If one college wants to call another college or mail a letter, addresses and/or the telephone numbers are included in the Student Information Handbook.

Miss Reichert explained that in addition, a college that might have one election a year can study the handbook and find the advantages, if any, provided by colleges that hold two elections a year.

Science Rooms To Be Converted Into X-Ray Laboratory

Science Hall's rooms 311 and 312 are in the midst of a face lifting which will convert both rooms into one X-ray laboratory.

The new laboratory, to be used jointly by dental and medical assisting students, is expected to have all the newest facilities which are available in the field of X-ray.

Total cost of the project will be $30,000. These funds were allotted by the Board of Education and the State of California.

The main purpose of the new lab will be for on-the-job training of dental assistants, Dean William Mayo stated recently. To date, training has been given in regular type classrooms with limited equipment.

William E. Hoskins, chemistry and X-ray technology instructor, will be the head of this department, as he is "probably the top man in the field of X-ray technology," Dean Mayo said.

Planning began more than two years ago on this project. Dean Mayo said that careful planning is responsible for what will probably be the safest facility of its type in San Francisco.

In addition to the lab, there will also be a new developing room for quick checks of X-rays.

The new project, bearing the stamp of approval from the board of health, has as its slogan, "Safety is the first order of business." Every worker in the lab will be protected by lead shields which are all around radioactive materials in the lab.

Students as well as instructors will also wear buttons which glow if one has been overexposed to radiation.

Each year, the course turns out about 20 technicians who help staff the many hospitals in and around San Francisco. At present, Dean Mayo emphasized, more X-ray technicians in San Francisco hospitals have received training at City College than from any other college in the area.

Soph Royalty Contest Starts

Students interested in entering the Sophomore Ball King and Queen contest, which began Monday, may obtain petitions in the Associated Student office, S-134, according to Gary Ettin, sophomore president.

The ball, at which the Ray Hackett band will play, is to be held Friday, May 29 at the Fairmont Hotel. AS card holders will be admitted free while non-card holders must pay $2.50, Ettin said.

Deadline for single entries in the contest is Tuesday, May 5, while couple entries may be submitted after that date.

All entrants will have a chance to win money from the Soph-y fund, which will consist of profits from several projects including an ice cream machine. Ettin explained that whoever is ahead in the contest at various periods will receive whatever sum is in the fund, named after the class publicity manager, at that time.

The main purpose of the new lab will be for on-the-job training of dental assistants, Dean William Mayo stated recently. To date, training has been given in regular type classrooms with limited equipment.

Plans are also being made to invite several celebrities to the ball.

Hill 29 Invincible

Hill 29, better known to students here as the site of City College, was assaulted April 13 by two "mountaineers," and although they failed, they still upheld the traditions of Sir Edmund Hillary and Maurice Herzog.

If they had been caught, they also would have earned the wrath of the Campus Police force.

As it was, the two stalwart "adventurers" became bored with the standard, everyday assaults by foot undertaken by thousands of college students. They had an idea! Climb the hill via auto!

The means was a white, stock Chevrolet, not equipped in any way for competition climbing.

In a misguided attempt at the Olympics, young man number one (the driver) gunned the motor of his car and roared up the hill-path from the vicinity of Smith Hall to the top and then, with some difficulty, up the first flight of steps leading to the courtyard.

The second flight was too much, though. Their car was defeated and their egos deflated.

To the tune of clanking and scraping noises, the adventuresome pair acknowledged defeat and guided the car down the steps and finally to the street below.

Young man number two then sprinted back up the hill — in Olympic style — to retrieve part of the car which emerged as a casualty in the war against the steps.

The pair — car intact as far as they knew—then managed to sneak off quietly, possibly wondering where the local Campus Police were during their ascent, but undoubtedly thankful that the gendarmes were not in the wrong place at the right time.

Hungry Ear Ticket Sales Reach Goal

Band To Benefit From Proceeds Of Dinner-Dance

Ticket sales to the college Pep Band's Hungry Ear dinner-dance were closed last Friday after 50 student sales persons met the stipulation of 500 tickets sold or no dinner-dance.

Dinner by candlelight and mood music by a 34-piece band are just two of the ingredients listed as part of the event scheduled from 8 p.m. to midnight Friday in Smith Hall, Pep Band sponsor John Dunn declared last week.

"The Pep Band members wanted this show, so my agreement with them was that they had to sell 500 tickets, not 475, or I would call the entire program off. They came through," Dunn said.

Ticket sales ended a week before the dance because sufficient time was needed for food order and dinner preparation. For this reason no tickets will be sold at the door.

Dunn said that proceeds from the dinner-dance will be used for band equipment such as new music stands, new music and new uniforms for the band.

Persons attending the dinner-dance will have their choice of steak or fish prepared to order, French fries, salad and rolls. Dinner will be served by waiters.

The dining and dancing will be in the fountain and cafeteria areas of Smith Hall. Dinner will be served from 8 to 9 p.m. and Dunn emphasized that persons arriving after 9 p.m. will not be served.

The dance band will start playing at 8 p.m. and will perform continuously, except for two half-hour periods when, Dunn explained, two floor shows are scheduled.

Among the acts in the floor shows are the college's version of the Playboy Bunnies and the Beatles.

All of the help, including waiters, busboys, hosts, hostesses and hat-check girls are members of the Pep Band.

Phi Beta Delta Lightens Load Of Ram With Paint Chipper

After seven years of abuse and desecration, some 12 layers of paint will be removed from the Redwood Ram.

The task has been undertaken as a service project by members of Phi Beta Delta fraternity, who began work on the statue with hammers and scrapers at 7:30 a.m. last Wednesday.

"It has been painted so many times, we thought it had lost any indication that it was redwood, so we asked Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman how it looked originally, and we're going to try to restore the Ram to its original wood condition," a fraternity member commented.

The restoration process will comprise of removal of the numerous layers of old paint, sanding the surface, staining the wood, and finally adding a coat of varnish.

Introduced at the 1939 World's Fair on Treasure Island as a handicraft exhibit by wood sculptor Dudley Carter, the Ram was presented to the college by Timothy Pflueger, designer and architect of the campus buildings.

The Ram was stored in the men's gymnasium for five years before an appropriate site was found at the north entrance to the then newly acquired west campus.

Formal ceremonies were held on March 12, 1947, at the site where the 3000-pound statue was placed.

It is considered especially fitting that Phi Beta Delta fraternity undertake the project since one of its members, Jim Fernhoff, created the personality of Sammy the Ram, college mascot, in 1948.

Restorative action on the Ram has been pending for some time. Last semester Emmett Smith, college photography instructor, proposed that the Ram be restored, placed inside and "a concrete mold be made of the Ram and placed in the present spot so it can be painted."

Injured Student Gets UMOC Fund

William Morris, injured when he plunged from a moving car two weeks ago, is being given the profits of both the Inter-Fraternity Council dance of April 10 and the Ugly Man On Campus contest, held last week.

"The fraternities hope that the money will help pay the hospital bills," Bruce Thomas, IFC president said.

"It is expected that more than $300 will be collected. That's not much, but it should make things a little easier financially for the Morris family," he added.

Phi Beta Delta donated a transistor radio as a prize at the IFC dance, and the proceeds from the donation will also go to the Morris family. Bob Aviani won the radio.

In addition, Alpha Phi Omega is contributing all money received from students as votes in the UMOC contest to the Morris family. The money has traditionally gone to college scholarship funds.

Morris suffered severe facial injuries and a basal skull fracture in the accident which occurred April 7, during Pledge Week.

Morris and other pledges were being driven to locations remote from their homes and left to get home as best they could. As the car approached a red light, Morris jumped out.

The initiating fraternity, Alpha Phi Epsilon, has been suspended from the campus until investigation is completed.

Morris is now recuperating at the Peninsula Hospital in Burlingame.

Summer Registration Starts On May 11

Registration for the summer session will begin Monday, May 11, and last through Friday, June 5, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, said last week.

The summer session, open only to students currently enrolled here or graduates of San Francisco high schools who have not attended another college, will start on Monday, June 22 and continue through July 31.

Students planning to attend classes in the summer should get forms from their counselors before June 5, Miss Learnard said, and report to the registrar's office to fill out registration forms.

Informality Key To Schools Week Observance Here

Public Schools Week, April 19-26, at the college will be no different from any other week.

"We want visitors to see us as we are, in actual, 'informal' operation," Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, said yesterday.

According to Anderson, not many persons are expected to visit the campus, because parents usually prefer to visit the younger children's schools.

However, the college administration suggested that students bring parents to the campus to show them what facilities are available. "Everything is open to see," Anderson said.

The public can observe regular classes during breaks or while in session. Anderson emphasized that if classes are to be observed while in session, instructors should be notified beforehand.

"Just say I am interested in the class and would like to watch," Anderson stated.

Although student accompaniment is not necessary, Anderson explained that anyone planning to visit a class should be present at the start of the class.

The public may also observe evening classes in session.

At 8 p.m. tomorrow, The Seven Deadly Sins will be presented in the campus theater as a part of the spring movie series. Parents are invited to attend with students.

Although no cost is involved, tickets, available at the theater office, are required for admission.

The campus is open to visitors this week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Public Schools Week—A View Of Educational Opportunities

ONCE AGAIN with the blessing of the state of California, the city of San Francisco takes the time to honor one of the most revered institutions: free and compulsory education for all.

Public Schools Week in San Francisco has been proclaimed by Mayor John Shelley to be from April 19 through 25. During this time the population is invited to attend "open house" at schools in the area and acquaint themselves with the public school system in action. Many persons are thereby provided with the chance to see how at least part of their tax money is being spent.

Teaching methods in the American system of education change from time to time as public attitudes change from conservatism to liberalism. These methods encompass either the Progressive ideology or the three "R's", the Little Red School House concept. The system itself remains basically unchanged.

Now this system has come under fire many times in the past but never more so than when the Russians succeeded in launching Sputnik I in 1957.

Following the old tradition of never wanting to admit that anybody was ahead of us in a certain field on his own merits, we immediately blamed ourselves for not being first. We said, in effect, the reason we did not get a chunk of iron up there before they did was because of the way we taught our children in school.

But the system weathered all the cries of indignation and today it is still substantially the same. The reason, while not perfect, is that the American system of education offers the average student the best all-around education available in the world today.

Such a stand is an extremely unpopular one to take these days when everybody and his brother is a critic of education, and the main point brought out will be that the average European student, particularly on the college level, is superior, educationally-speaking, to the average American student. Many surveys have proved this to be true, and so how then can we say that our way is the best?

The European college population is extremely selective, with less fortunate students weeded out in crash programs in the earlier grades and by extremely difficult competitive exams for entrance to the universities. The student who passes these hurdles is the cream of the crop. If this country had a comparable method for sorting out our elite at the same level, the two would be quite similar.

It could be said that the Americans have applied the concept of mass production to education while still turning out a high quality product. For this we should be eternally grateful. Many of us would not have had the chance of higher education otherwise.

And so, while Public Schools Week is mainly for the parents and population as a whole, we, who are a part of the system, would be wise to take a look at ourselves and realize just how lucky we are.

Aide Finds Headaches Sharing Mayor's Problems

By Bea Takeuchi

The use of public funds for family planning is the concern of many civic-minded citizens in San Francisco these days. Among these citizens is a young bachelor and former City College student, who worries not only about birth control, but also about sit-ins, school integration and other problems in need of solution.

That young man with so many worries is 33-year-old William Geraint Thomas, a journalism major while here. He shares the many problems that confront the Honorable Mayor of San Francisco, John F. Shelley.

Thomas is the mayor's confidential secretary. He is responsible for the mayor's "published image." He writes speeches for the mayor, maintains good press relations, and attends important conferences. His office is right outside of the mayor's door.

Bill Thomas, former City College student, is a V.I.P.

He was born in Colombo, Ceylon. That his father was the British Consul of Honduras, indicates that his brush with politics is not new. Beneath that sophisticated exterior is a frantic worrier, for Thomas is fully aware of the current problems that shouider his boss.

"I might be a plumber, if I had to do it all over again," he said.

Thomas attended City College in 1950 and1951, then transferred to the University of California at Berkeley, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1952. After that, he spent two years in the army.

He worked with the San Francisco News from 1945 to 1952, and was employed by the San Francisco Chronicle from 1952 to 1963.

The promotion from Room 238, City Hall, into the carpeted offices of the Mayor happened after only six months on the "City Hall beat for The Chronicle."

Thomas reminisces about the times he harassed his Chronicle buddies with his fondness for the good old days. "I remember when the city editor got mad at me, and took me off a beat for a couple of months. Then he'd forgive me and I'd go back to the office and get an assignment," he said.

"It's much more frantic now; as a newspaper reporter, you worry about just one thing," he explained.

As for the future, Thomas said, "I can't think beyond next week."

When things go "haywire," Thomas usually takes a walk. He is not on tranquillizers yet, but remembers vividly a former confidential secretary who landed in the hospital with a painful ailment.

Sociology Major Dedicates Self To Blind Persons

By Jim Loveland

A belief held by many is that today's college student is detached from moral purpose, that he judges the inner worth of others by their exterior facade and that he himself is shrouded in the images of an inexperienced mind.

To these three positions, Arthur Beyer represents an opposite concept. Beyer, a 23-year-old student here, majoring in Sociology works part time for the Lighthouse for the Blind.

He chooses not to judge persons by appearance and he realizes that life in a dream world does not provide, for the handicapped, an escape from reality.

Last summer, Beyer applied for a job at the Lighthouse for the Blind. He was sent to Enchanted Hills, in Napa county, to a camp for the blind. At summer's end, he chose to continue working with blind persons at their main school in San Francisco.

He applied and was hired. For the next three months, September through November, he was extensively trained in all phases of prevocational and mobility training.

Throughout his instruction period he was required to wear a blindfold, in order to understand the handicap of those he would soon be training.

"They trained me by putting a blindfold over my eyes, so I could experience, as closely as possible, the experience of a blind person. But I always knew that by simply pulling off the blindfold, I had the sight they would never have," Beyer said.

Beyer's instruction in prevocational training consisted of various projects in wood and metal work, the use of several tools and machinery, and work in disassembling and reassembling motors.

As a part of his experience, Beyer has shown a blind coed here, how to go from Cloud Hall to a nearby bus stop. After many days of practice, she is now able to commute from home to college, and back again, without any difficulty.

Beyer is currently working in prevocational training and helps one person regularly.

Beyer does not believe that the blind behave differently from persons with sight.

"They act just like anybody else. You treat them exactly the same. After training, a blind person can cook, make his own bed, and all in all, can function just as a person with sight.

"Of course, there are always a few who panic and have tantrums, but that reaction is just a defense mechanism," he added.

Arthur Beyer is a person with a rare sense of purpose and perception, whose dedication to the handicapped will remain unchallenged.

Avant Guardsman!

By Michel Janicot

LAST WEEK in San Francisco, the talk of the town concerned the fate of the so-called "erotic" sculptures displayed at the Vorpal Gallery in North Beach. The welded steel sculptures, made from junkyard automobiles and based on Indian Kama Sutra themes, were declared obseene after plain clothes policemen photographed the exhibit a la CIA.

The irony lies in the fact that these sculptures had been on exhibit at the gallery for almost a month before the police moved in—obviously after reading the metropolitan newspapers' excellent coverage of the exhibit!

In Paris, the talk of the town was somewhat in a lighter vein (for some unknown reason). A fortnight ago, it was the discovery that the recently approved tunnel under the English Channel had one strange twist: the Freneh end of the tunnel will be on land that belongs to the de Gaulle family. The spot is three miles inland on a 100-acre farm inherited by Mme. de Gaulle.

In Honolulu, the talk of the town was that of the police breaking up a rolling crap game among off-duty bus drivers cruising in a Honolulu Rapid Transit Co. bus. The bus was No. 711.

Last week, however, the talk of the town in Paris centered on secret but not so dangerous societies.

DUNCAN ACADEMY

One such society is the Duncan Academy. One has hardly entered the building when someone accosts the visitor and asks: "Aren't you tormented by your impurity?" The usual answer is "yes . . . but what about you?" To which the man answers, "As for myself, it is women in uniform. When I see one, I lose my mind."

This secret group practices the adoration of the navel.

What do the members do? Well, they meditate by observing their own navels. They believe that the umbilical cord is the only link that unites man to Adam, who was for them a pure man. The question whether Adam had a navel is still a controversial one but the society believes he did have one.

Meditating on one's own navel can however be hard to achieve if one is not used to such uninhibited behavior. The main drawback being that a naked navel ALWAYS itches and therefore hampers meditating in a sacred place among other navel observers.

WISDOM OF ONIONS

Another secret society is that of the onion lovers. To the onion lovers, the belief is that man does not die if he has the "wisdom of imitating onions." That is, when an onion is left to grow, it will eventually die and the seeds are used again to plant new onions.

However, if the stem is cut, the plant grows another stem again. This principle, the society claims, applies to man in the same way as the onion does. Unbelievable as it seems, onion lovers number over 4000 in France!

VIRILE MUSICAL NOTE

Perhaps the most bizarre secret society is the bass-clef lovers. They are not worshippers of the bass-clef, only admirers. To them, the bass-clef is a very dangerous note; all creation, they claim, accompanies itself with a bass-clef. It is therefore a virile note.

The cure is simple: members listen to bass-clef for an hour or so on the harmonium.

NOTE OF THE WEEK: Miles Davis' two-week engagement at The Jazz Workshop caused the nightspot to temporarily lose its liquor license (during this engagement only), because Miles' drummer, Anthony Williams, is a minor. Admission has soared to $2 and alcohol is not served.

Ironically, when Miles was playing in Los Angeles recently, the band was nevertheless permitted to perform . . .

Modern Fencer Par Excellence

Ancient Warfare Now A Competitive Sport

En garde! Swish. Klank. Klank. Swish. Klank, thunk.

This is the sound of a fencing match, a combat sport, the object of which is to "touch" the oppenent and to "keep from being touched."

"Prior to the invention of gun powder, when the sword was the ultimate close combat weapon, a touch was a kill or at the very least, a wound," Lene Johnson, fencing instructor here, explained in an interview last week.

When the etiquette of war was altered with the invention of gunpowder, the now more civilized people began to fence for sport rather than for mortal combat.

The college has a four-man fencing team, Ben Bartholomew, Wayne Spencer, Vince Nocon and Carlos Ciudad-Real.

In the recent Western Inter-Collegiate Conference, Bartholomew, this college's sole entry, won the individual saber competition.

It was the first time a two-year college student won such an event in the annual Western Intereollegiate Fencing Conferenee, which was held this year at San Fernando State College.

As a foil team, Ciudad-Real, Nocon and Spencer competed in two bouts and placed fifth as a team. The difference between third, fourth and fifth places was a matter of one bout.

In addition to the team, there is also a fencing class, whose instruetor is Frances Galloway, Recreation Association adviser.

"Advance. Advance. Retreat. Advance. Lunge!" Miss Galloway "barks" to her fencing class.

Students here are introduced to fencing, and the myths created by late-late-show Hollywood swashbucklers, are destroyed.

"Fencing is not a ballet exercise," Miss Galloway explained. "It is a combat sport. The strange style and form is functional, not asthetic. In fencing, touching your opponent is more important than the form one uses," she added.

In Europe, fencing is a major sport and Sala, fencing clubs, are numerous. The military academies in the United States have fencing as one of its physical education requirements.

IN DAYS OF OLD, a man used to duel for his lady fair. As the first line in the trophy would seem to indicate, Ben Bartholomew got his.
—Guardsman photo by George Champagne.

The point of the sword, more correctly called the foil, has been blunted for safety. Thick jackets and heavy mesh masks are also used.

The kill has been replaced by the touch.

However, the high degree of mastery of movement, speed and coordination has not been sacrificed.

Two fencing classes will be available to students next semester, and the classes meet as part of the physical education requirement.

AS Election Campaigns Start Here

Parties Nominate Candidates For Fall Offices This Week

This week has been set aside as the time for the two- and possibly three-student conventions in order to nominate candidates for Fall, 1964, Associated Student offices, Election Commissioner Paul Coke stated today.

Last night, the Students Representative Party, representing clubs and organizations on campus, held its meeting in Smith Hall to nominate officers. Joe Miller, chairman of the party, presided.

Tonight, at 7:30 p.m., in Smith Hall, the United Students Party, under the chairmanship of Inter-Fraternity Couneil President Bruce Thomas, is expected to nominate its candidates for AS offices. Representatives from campus fraternities and sororities are scheduled to attend.

A special open convention was slated for tomorrow night, but because of the state conference in Los Angeles this weekend, it had to be cancelled. Coke explained that if a student expresses interest in acting as chairman of such a convention, he may choose some convenient open date for the meeting.

As of late last week, no definite plans were announced for this third convention.

The AS elections are slated for Tuesday, May 19, and Wednesday, May 20. Coke emphasized that all registered students here are eligible to vote and the possession of an AS card is not necessary.

SRP is expected to "stress an increase in participation of students at the college in activities" in their platform. Miller declared that SRP can best reach students through "four areas, namely the political committee, the academic committee, the cultural committee and the social committee" which his party will organize.

When USP was reorganized last semester, it represented only the fraternities and sororities here. Now, Coke said, the party has branched out and welcomes the participation of all students.

Two prospective candidates for the Fall AS Presidency, prior to the official conventions this week, appeared to be Gary Ettin and Roger Kaufman.

Coke announced that although conventions are being held now, students have until Friday, May 8, to file official petitions to run for any AS office.

He further urged that students wishing to run for an office determine in advance whether they are qualified under the rules outlined in the AS Constitution.

Ballet Dancing Scene Adds Twist To 'Beggar' Play

Beggar on Horseback, a Kaufman-Connelly comedy and the next production of the drama department, offers a new twist for campus playgoers.

"It includes an entire scene of ballet," director Walter Krumm, said.

Lene Johnson, women's physical and health education department instructor, will be the choreographer for the 10 to 15-minute fairy tale ballet, entitled A Kiss At Xanadu.

Beggar On Horseback not ofily calls for a cast of 40 but requires a "quick change" of 14 sets and 98 costumes, Krumm said.

Performances are scheduled Wednesday through Saturday, May 6 to 9.

Krumm explained that the show will be run four nights in one week rather than on several successive weekends to save time that students might otherwise lose from classes.

Last month's production, Tartuffe, was presented on a similar schedule, and more than 1000 attended.

Beggar, in its entirety, is expressionistic and, with the exception of the beginning and end, is composed of a dream sequence.

It describes the dream of a struggling musician who plans to marry a wealthy girl, whom he does not love, for her money.

In the dream, he visualizes himself as unhappy and aggravated with his bride. He also realizes his love for another woman.

After many bizarre occurrences, typical of a dream, the hero commits a quadruple murder, thus ridding himself of his unwanted wife and her family.

Pistol Team Prepares For State Matches Tomorrow

With their trigger fingers tuned up from a recent and successful match, the Campus Police pistol team is preparing to bear arms against all contenders at the State matches tomorrow, Friday and Saturday at Fort Ord, Larry Lawson, criminology department adviser, announced today.

Unlike last semester, the Associated Students have allocated funds for the trip, plus money for ammunition expenditures and the like.

The team is divided into two squads, the first composed of James Dean, Dave Kannisto, Sherwood Zamitt and James Juarez. The second includes James Aligo, Walter Bowsher, Robert Nasise and John Conlon.

Only two shooters, Dean and Zamit, were on last semester's pistol team.

The team took second place in a match at the Richmond Rod and Gun Club in Richmond April 12. It ranked higher in the competition than the service teams from Moffett Field, Treasure Island and Hamilton Air Force Base.

Lawson reported that the "pistoleros" netted eight individual awards at this match. Kannisto and Zammit took three awards each, and Dean took two.

SCTA Schedules C-Hour Talks On Credentials

Two faculty members from San Francisco State College will be on campus during College Hour tomorrow to discuss the requirements for elementary and secondary education credentials, Bernard Llacuna, Student California Teachers Association president here, announced today.

Speakers are Robert Moore and Richard Axen, and the meeting site is C-269.

Also scheduled this week-end is an SCTA meeting in Los Angeles.

Those representing this campus chapter with Llacuna are treasurer Ted Hodahl and faculty adviser Bev Pasqualetti.

Art Student's Design Wins Special Award

Alexander Eng did not win first prize in the recent California Seed Association-sponsored mural contest here.

As a matter of fact, he did not place second or third either.

But when the results of the judging were made public, he was a very surprised and happy commercial art student.

Eng's mural design did not adhere strictly to the rules of the contest, but the judges were so impressed with it that they singled it out for a "Special Award."

The judges included executives of the California Seed Association. They offered to buy Eng's design, which they would use as a promotion device or as an office painting.

In two weeks, Eng put together the ideas for his design.

Eng, who is in his third semester here, attended Balboa High School. Surprisingly enough, he was an engineering major at that time, and only took two art courses during his high school years. He plans to continue his studies next year at San Jose State College.

John O'Brien, one of Eng's advertising art instructors, commenting on Eng's mural design said,

"Alex Eng is one of the most promising commercial art students whom I've known. No one can predict what his future will be, but his mural design in every way indicates the brilliance with which he will approach his future."

Council Makes It Official; Motor-Driven Bike Needs Permit To Park On Campus

By Ann Weill

Student Council last week passed a motion making permits mandatory, starting next fall for motor-scooter and motorcycle parking on campus.

The motion, proposed by freshman member Mike Garabedian, also implies that since students must have a permit, in order to obtain it, they must purchase an Associated Student card.

Campus Police representative Charles Simms stated that the Campus Police is studying the manner in which scooters and cyeles will be cheeked to enforce the ruling next semester.

Inter-Fraternity Council President Bruce Thomas informed council that several organizations are raising funds for William Morris, injured pledge of Alpha Phi Epsilon.

Phi Beta Delta raised $70, Alpha Sigma Delta collected $18.50 and Alpha Phi Omega will donate all proceeds from the Ugly Man On Campus contest.

Thomas also reported that 102 couples attended the IFC dance, and that the Blood Drive will be held next month, May 7 and 8.

Council also heard an interested student read a petition requesting that one-third of the addition to Smith Hall be used for a student lounge.

"There's nothing to do at the college," the student stated. "We need a lounge pretty badly."

A few semesters ago the college had a student lounge, but because of misuse, it was closed.

The petition was first presented to council so that campus leaders would be the first to sign. It is now in the process of being circulated around the campus so that all interested students may sign it.

Finance Chairman George Quiek reeorded that as of April 14 requests totaling $54,525.25 have been received by him for the fall budget.

He revealed that the AS could only allocate $40,000 at this time.

As additional information, Quiek said that members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, state-wide scholastic honor society, made a trip to Disneyland, and an honor student here, Betsy Erkkila, won the Loly Scholarship of $400.

IFC Holds Annual Blood Drive On Campus May 7, 8

The annual Blood Drive here, a service project of the Inter-Fraternity Couneil, will be held this semester from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday and Friday, May 7 and 8, in C-249.

Bruce Thomas, IFC president, said that for the past three years, City College has had the largest single donation of any college on the Pacific Coast.

"We donated more than 500 pints of blood last year," Thomas said, "and this year we're trying to top that mark."

Any student, faculty member, college employee, or alumnus may donate blood, which will go to the City College section of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

In the event that a student here needs blood, and if he has donated blood in the past year, he can draw an unlimited supply for himself or his immediate family, or, he can draw up to eight pints for any person of his choosing who needs blood.

A rally will be held during the Blood Drive in the mens' gymnasium. Professional entertainment, as yet unannounced, will be supplied, Thomas said.

Students in the college's nurse training program will assist the registered nurses collecting the blood. Any person under 21 must have parental permission to donate. Students under 18 are not allowed to donate.

By P.H.D.

IT'S ABOUT that time again. Time to decide what illustrious courses to study in the fall semester.

Under the assumption that every student has memorized the names of all the courses in the college catalogue and can now reeite them backward and forward, the process of elimination method is the next step on the student's agenda.

In the process of elimination method, the student first eliminates all the courses that are difficult, time consuming, painstaking and boring.

With more than half of the courses eliminated by this dazzling method, the student then discards all the subjeets he has failed, will fail, and/or can very easily fail!

The situation now well in hand, the student jots down on a piece of paper, which he usually misplaces, the courses he thinks he might enjoy studying.

For those students who have already completed their tentative schedules and may be dissatisfied with them, the following courses could brighten an otherwise dull, routine program.

The art of learning the proper technique of underwater basket-weaving is a must for every student interested in pursuing a liberal arts program. No prerequisites necessary!

Painting a Dagwood sandwich in good taste, is first on the list of any student majoring in art. Prerequisite: A good appetite!

At the risk of a few broken bones, students interested in staying in top physical condition may enjoy a course in the secret art of learning to skate in the Roller Derby.

Classes for beginners and intermediates will be offered. This course is designed for those students with a strong constitution, who have always had a desire to live dangerously!

How to make the pen mightier than the sword will most certainly attract any true blue aspiring journalist. It has been whispered that only grabby students need apply!

Speech with a Brooklyn accent is open to all San Franciscans who can produce proof that they have no intention of moving East.

A simplified course in the study of understanding yourself will accept only confused persons. (It is assumed that everyone else understands himself.)

And for those students who wish to discipline their minds by taking a difficult course, a detailed study of why blondes have more fun will be offered to brunettes and redheads only! For some strange reason, this course is accepting coeds only!

Another new course, this one in criminology, deals with interpretation of new stickers on San Francisco parking meters:

Lock car AND remove keys.

The above courses are subject to change without notice, so if a student is unable to register in one of these courses, his counselor may be able to suggest some alternate subjects.

As one student who had just come out of the counseling office remarked, "Thank Heaven for counselors; without them, what would confused students do!"

Ram Netters To Place Title On Line

Ailing Spikers Prepare For Trip To NorCal Relays

City College's spikers, stilll nursing wounds from their recent defeats by Chabot and San Mateo respectively, journey to Foothill College in Los Altos Hills this Saturday for the annual Northern California Junior College Relays.

In recent outings, the Rams dropped one to Chabot College, 72-64, and another to College of San Mateo, 99-37.

In the clash with the Gladiators, Tom Gardner took both the 100 in 10.1 seconds, and the 220 in 22.9 seconds, with teammate Paul Richard following closely at 10.2, and 23.4.

Ram Chris Ferrigno took first in the 440, 51.0, and Rod Coleman placed third with a time of 52.1.

The Rams' top middle distance man, Rich Klemmer, fell to a 2:04.4 third place in the 880, while Gene Plotkin won the mile in 4:27.5.

Plotkin placed second in the two-mile event, a full 12 seconds off the winning time of 10:02.5. Chabot swept both the hurdles events. The Rams made no show in the triple jump but Mac Smith took the high jump with 6 feet even.

Don Davis leaped 19 feet 10 inches for a second in the broad jump, and Rich Modolo vaulted 9-6, almost three feet off the winning mark. Pat Lewis placed first in the discus, 154-5, and also in the shot, 51-11.

San Francisco took the 440 relay by one second, 43.7, but dumped the mile relay to the Gladiators who romped to a 3:33.1 as compared with the Ram mark of 3:40.8.

In the San Mateo meet, although the Rams fell in almost every event, they came through with four individual firsts.

Gardner won the 100 in 9.7, and the 220 in 22.5; Coleman took the 440 in 51.2, and Lewis heaved the shot to a first place 51-1½. The 440 relay team won that event in 43.6.

Ozzie Norris placed second in the mile, 4:26.3, just three seconds off the pace, and Gardner's running mate, Richard, took a second in the 100, at 10.1, and a third in the 220, 23.1.

Other Ram marks and times were, as Coach Lou Vasquez phrased it, "pretty much below par."

Vasquez summarized the results, saying, "We just didn't click that day, and that's all there was to it." —P. F.

Block SF Cracks Down On Lack Of Participation

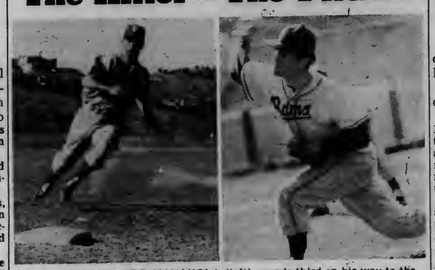
After the Block SF Society had practically become nonexistent, society sponsor Art "Dutch" Elston announced at a special meeting last Thursday that from now on no athlete will receive any Block SF award until he is certified as a member in good standing.

As a result of the ruling, only certificates will be presented at Block SF banquets and actual blocks and jackets will not be awarded until proof of dues paid can be presented.

The move was made in an attempt to enforce the payment of dues and with the hope that it will arouse members to participation in the organization's activities.

At the meeting Elston also announced the creation of a board of representatives to be appointed by the coaches. Representatives will be chosen from each sport and will be responsible for the other members of the sport.

All this came after the attendance at meetings had dropped off to nothing and not a cent in dues had been collected with the Block SF banquet less than six weeks away.



In the past movies and tickets to sports events were offered to members who attended meetings.

At the showing of one movie, Elston quipped that he had 20 students but only one was a Block SF member, and he was there without knowledge that a meeting was to follow.

Another meeting of the Block SF organization is scheduled for College Hour next Tuesday in C-260.

The Hitter—The Pitcher

Home Nine Trudges Through Tough Week To 6-6 Record

By Pete Franklin

The Ram baseball club broke a two-game losing streak last Tuesday when it squeezed by Diablo Valley, 5-4, in 11 innings to end one of the hardest fought contests of the season.

In their recent outing against Oakland, the San Franciscans came up on the short end in both halves of the doubleheader. Oakland shut out the Rams twice, 5-0, and 1-0.

In the second game, T-Bird hurler Bob Nichols pitched his team to a no-hit victory, at the expense of the Rams. Hugh Miller went the distance for the Rams, taking the loss.

Oakland scored the only run of the contest in the fourth inning.

In the first nine, San Francisco was held to only five hits, as pitcher Brad Rothback of the locals trudged the distance for his first loss of the year against four wins.

Last Tuesday the Rams journeyed to Concord to face the Diablo Valley Vikings and returned victorious after a tense climax in the extra-inning battle.

The Rams, trailing 3-0 going into the eighth, rallied for three on two hits and two walks to tie the score, then added a run in their half of the ninth, combining three successive singles for the tally.

Diablo bounced back in the bottom of the last for the tying run that sent the game into extra innings.

Ram hurler Bill Booth who had come on in the fifth to relieve starter Ken Dyer, pitched confidently through the tenth but lost his control with two down in the eleventh.

San Francisco had scored the go-ahead run in the top of the inning on Pete Giavanola's clutch single. But Booth hit a batter and gave up a single to put men on first and third.

With the top of the order coming up for the Vikings, Ram coach Ernie Domeeus sent Rothback in to quell the rally.

The Rams travel to San Jose for a double bill on Saturday.

At the end of the Diablo game, the Ram season record stood at 6-6.

Golfers Take To Cellar With Loss To Foothill

Ram golfers slipped deeper into the conference cellar April 13 with a 23-7 loss to the Foothill College Owls.

In keeping with an old and depressing pattern, the Rams, who lost a fourth straight league match, won another practice meet to keep their non-conference loss slate clean.

In the nonleague match, the Rams topped Marin 212-187. In the first round, City College golfer Jim Schroder edged Marin's Terry Van Buskirk, 79-80. Ram's Mike Selsnik's 87 and Mike Soden's 80 were topped by Rubb Shultz's 76 and Lee Hoddy's 87.

The last two rounds were won by San Francisco golfers Steve Parish, who checked Marinite John McGaughey, 85-90, and Pete Eden who trounced Lon MacAuley, 82-103.

The Ram golfers' scores with Foothill were as follows: Schroder-82, Selsnik-85, Soden-84, Parish-90 and Moore-84.

Swimmers Hope To Score Upset In Conference Meet

With a winless conference season behind them, the Ram swim team will be out to upset somebody tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, in the Golden Gate Conference meet to be held at College of San Mateo pool.

Leading the uphill climb will be veteran freestyler, Rick Gray. At present Gray holds the college's record in the following events: 50, 100 and 200 yard freestyle, and 100 yard butterfly.

In the conference meet, Gray will be entered in three individual events and a relay with all hopes of an upset resting on his shoulders.

Backing up Gray will be freshmen Brian Edie and Bob Barnes backstroke, and veteran Fred Wales in the 200 and 500 freestyle events.

Other swimmers slated for meet action are freestylers Dennis Harley and Roger Guidi, breaststroker John Hamilton and diver Bob Corsiglia.

Midterms Postpone Foothill Crucial Until Next Week

City College's undefeated tennis team's bid for a third straight conference net title will be challenged by the also undefeated Foothill College Owls next week at the Golden Gate Park tennis courts.

The Owls have two of the outstanding tennis players in the state on their squad, Rodney Kop and Dale Macgowan.

Recently, however, Foothill coach Dick Gould has been saving Kop for bigger and better things (like the Ram match) and using Macgowan as his number one man. The Owl's number two man would by far be top man on any of the other conference teams.

Originally the Foothill crucial was scheduled for this Friday but midterms forced the postponement of the match until early next week. No definite date was given.

Last year the Foothill net club placed third in the Golden Gate Conference with a 5-2 record, losing only to San Francisco and San Mateo, and this was without the services of rookies Kop and Macgowan.

Ram coach Roy Diederichsen had some speculations to make on this upcoming San Francisco-Foothill classic. "I saw Foothill last week, and they look tough. I can tell you that the score is going to be 4-3. But who will win? I reeally don't know. It's going to be tough, very tough."

The Rams will be ready for the Owls come April 24. Vince Chinn, the sole Ram netter who has not won all of his singles matches, has lost only one, and that defeat came at a time when he was suffering from a sore shoulder.

In the doubles, Chinn and Al Brambila have lost only one league match. Thus far, there has not been a regular second doubles team. Ben Levy and Fred Suessman have been the latter half of the doubles more so than any other pair.

The City College Netters increased their conference record last Friday to 6-0 with a 6-1 victory over the Oakland Thunderbirds despite injuries to Lou Englestein, Levy and Brambila.

Chinn won the opening singles, in the third set 6-3 with Brambila following up in the second singles taking a straight set. Englestein took the third match at 8-6, 3-6, and 6-1 although he was suffering from a pulled leg muscle.

In the next singles, Levy is usually scheduled in this spot, but he was unable to go that day due to a pulled forearm muscle. He was replaced by sub Mike Price who turned to a fine 7-5 and 6-1 victory. Suessman took the final singles 6-1, 6-2.

The Rams' top doubles team of Chinn and Brambila ran into serious trouble in this match when Brambila sprained his ankle and was unable to continue. The match was defaulted to the T-Birds for their only victory of the day. Englestein and Suessman won the second doubles 6-1, 6-2.

Filipinos Romp To Third Victory In Intramurals

Action in the Associated Men Students intramural basketball tournament last Tuesday night saw the Filipino Club romp to its third straight victory, maintaining a perfect record, and keeping a firm hold on first place in the club division.

The Filipinos dumped the Lutheran Club, 44-36, as Bernie Piper paced the winners with 14 points. The Lutherans now stand 2-1.

In other club division highlights, the Newman Club defeated the Ram Skiers, 31-5, and Hotel and Restaurant met defeat at the hands of the Hawaiians, 31-29.

In fraternity division contests, Zeta Phi Sigma dropped Beta Tau, 30-28 in a tight one. Alpha Phi Omega forfeited to Alpha Sigma Delta, and the Phi Beta Delta - Alpha Phi Epsilon game was cancelled because of pledge week problems.

At the end of three weeks of play, Zeta Phi Sigma stands first, undefeated in its league, followed closely by Alpha Kappa Rho, 2-1.

In the independent league, the Divine Ones and the NBA Rejects remain undefeated.

The Divine Ones massacred the Anonymous, 55-33, and Ed Parker hit 17 of the Divine Ones' points.

The NBA Rejects barely won over the Saxons 35-34, with the Rejects' Mike Conroy hitting 16 points. The Saxons tried desperately to edge the winners, but Chris Smith's 16 points were in vain.

The sharp-shooting Criminology Department send-off points to the Allis' 20, due partly to Butch Busannick's 19 points.

Action tonight calls for Alpha Kappa Rho versus Phi Beta Delta at 7 p.m. in the women's gymnasium. In the men's gymnasium, the NBA Rejects go against the Devinessians; the Allis meet the Anonymous, and the Divine Ones encounter the Saxons.

The highlight of tonight's action will be the Divine Ones-Saxons tilt which will pit last year's champs against a strong team that lost by one point last week.

Vince Chinn Makes Tennis Comeback Here

By Mike Smith

Vincent Ming Chinn has been playing tennis for 14 years now, and at 26 he is still playing the game with as much enthusiasm as when he first started at the age of 12.

Today the 5-7 tennis star is an important figure on a team in the midst of its third straight title quest.

Presently, the Foothill College Owls are tied with the Rams for the first place spot.

But Chinn predicts, "City College will win the title. It will be close, very close; but I think we have the edge over Foothill."

If the Rams do win the title, victory will not be something new to the veteran Ram tennis star.

Chinn first received recognition for the fine tennis player he is in St. Ignatius High School in his native San Francisco. At St. Ignatius in his senior year, he gained the number one berth on the Wildcat tennis squad.

Immediately after his graduation in 1955, Chinn received a tennis scholarship from the University of Notre Dame.

A year and a half later, Chinn left Notre Dame because, as he said, "I did not know what I wanted to do, so I decided to come back to San Francisco and make up my mind."

Asked if tennis could be a possible career, he replied, "No, I never thought of making a career out of tennis. I just play for enjoyment of the game."

While seriously deciding on his future and working in a garage, Chinn went to the semifinals of the Chinese National Tennis Championships where he won in the mixed doubles and nearly won the men's singles and doubles.

This national tennis star then enrolled in City College in Fall, 1959. In Spring, 1960, he joined the Ram netters who were to win the Big Eight Conference championship, predecessor to the Golden Gate Conference.

It wasn't long before Chinn became number one man on the Ram tennis team, Larry Draper joined with him then, thus making the pair an unbeatable doubles team in the old league. In this same year, Chinn also won the California Chinese Student Intercollegiate Organization Tennis Championships.

Came Uncle Sam's turn, and Chinn went into the Army for a two-year hitch. Near the end of his enlistment, he was the victim of a jeep accident in which he received a serious back injury.

It took some time again before he could get back on the tennis courts, or for that matter, on the sidewalks.

Chinn has come back in more ways than one. His enrollment in City College late last year is a victory in itself, but he may not be back next semester.

He now knows what he wants to do. "I liked it at the University of Notre Dame, and I hope to go back this fall to major in accounting." If he does return to the university, he may not compete in his favorite sport.

The game and the Rams will be losing a fine tennis player, but the business world may not mind the loss a bit.

Blood Donations Expected To Hit All-Time High

A total of 538 students volunteered to donate blood in last year's annual Blood Drive here.

Bruce Thomas, IFC president, said that an even larger number of donors is expected this year.

"Actually, only 443 of the volunteers were accepted as donors," Thomas explained, "but we still have had the largest single donation of any college on the Pacific Coast in the past three years."

The Blood Drive, to be held next Thursday and Friday, May 7 and 8, will feature a car parade from the Ferry Building downtown to City College.

In addition, a rally will be held during College Hour featuring entertainment by Saturday's Children, a folk singing group from ABC Paramount records.

Terry Kilpatriek, English instructor, is in charge of making arrangements for entertainment.

Blood donated during the drive will go to the City College account at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

A donor may draw an unlimited amount on this account for himself or his immediate family for one year. He may also draw up to eight pints for any person of his choosing who needs blood.

Persons under 21 must secure the permission of their parents if they wish to donate; students under 18 are not allowed to donate.

For persons planning to donate, the Irwin Memorial has published the following hints: A low fat meal should be eaten within four hours before giving blood, and donors should weigh a minimum of 110 pounds.

Spokesmen for the Irwin Memorial stressed the fact that the donation of blood is a painless experience, causing a mild discomfort at the most.

Except for last year, the Blood Drive kept breaking each previous record of number of pints donated each time the event was held.

Commenting on the failure to top the previous mark, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman attributed it to higher requirements set by the attending physicians.

Also last year, George Christopher, then mayor of San Francisco, proclaimed "Blood Days" in the city to coincide with the event at the college and urged all citizens to participate.

The Blood Drive originated as a mild form of hazing used in fraternity initiations. The fraternities involved felt that the practice routed ceremonies towards a more useful end.

Gradually the "hazing" was expanded into its present form of a campus-wide benefit.

For convenience, a permission blank is provided on page 3.

Good Grades Pay Off

SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS BETSY ERKKILA AND FRANK PRATT bask in the light of their recent victories, which took the form of unexpected monetary awards. Miss Erkkila received two scholarships totaling $1870, and Pratt received $1400. —Guardsman photos by Harry Mathias.

'A' Average Wins Betsy Erkkila Two Scholarships

As a result of her "A" average, Betsy Erkkila has been awarded the $400 Kathleen Loly State Honor Award of Alpha Gamma Sigma and the $1470 Regents Scholarship of the University of California, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced last week.

Both scholarships are among the highest honors that can be conferred upon a student from the respective institutions.

Head song girl here last semester, the sophomore coed from Washington High School hopes to teach sociology in a two-year college after completing her education at U.C.'s Berkeley campus.

Miss Erkkila was announced the top woman winner in the Loly Award competition over 14 other students with 3.75 average or better at the April 11 AGS State Convention in Los Angeles, William Richardson, AGS adviser commented.

The annual state award is named after Kathleen Loly, former chairman of collegiate relations who left the society $30,000 in 1955 for scholarships for deserving students.

In a letter notifying Miss Erkkila of her selection for scholarship, U. C. President Clark Kerr and Chancellor E. W. Strong wrote, "Your outstanding scholastic achievement and the clear evidence of your great promise have led to your selection for this honor. You are to be congratulated on your achievements."

"I was spellbound; I couldn't believe the news when I read the letter," Miss Erkkila commented.

Frank Pratt Goes To Stanford On State Grant

A $1400 scholarship to Stanford University has been awarded to a student here by the California State Scholarship Commission.

Frank Pratt, a high freshman mathematics major, won the scholarship for the 1964-65 academic year. He plans to transfer to Stanford next September.

After Stanford, Pratt would like to attend the University of California for graduate work. His ultimate goal is teaching mathematics at the college level.

"I think Stanford has one of the two best mathematics departments in California for undergraduates," Pratt said, "but I feel that the University of California is the best school for graduate work in the subject."

Pratt, a graduate of George Washington High School here in San Francisco, took the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Entrance Examination Board last May. This was one of the basic requirements for eligibility as a State Scholar.

Another requirement for eligibility was that Pratt demonstrate high moral character, good citizenship and dedication to American ideals. A need for monetary assistance was also required.

PROVING THAT THE DONATION OF BLOOD is not a major operation, former student Sandra DeMandel flies her nails as she poses for the photograph. The unique way in which the blood is being extracted leads some cynics to believe the young lady has something up her sleeve.

American Indian To Discuss Goals

H. D. Williams, documentation supervisor of Matson Navigation Company, is scheduled to speak on Indians in America Today, during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Herbert E. Davis, counselor, announced last week.

Williams, who is a member of the Yurok tribe, was born in Klamath, California, where his tribe lives. Klamath is located in Del Norte county, which is south of the Oregon border.

In the Yurok tribe, there are three top governing officials called Attorneys At Fact. Williams holds one of these positions.

For the last 12 years, Williams has played the role of Stanford University's Indian mascot as Prince Lightfoot. He performs at games and other athletic events.

Williams, who will appear in tribal headdress, will discuss Indians in California and the political and economic problems of the American Indian.

He is also expected to explain the current fishing rights controversy which concerns his tribe's use of the Klamath River as well as fishing rights in other tribes and the purchase of Alcatraz as a possible reservation for Indians.

According to Williams, there are 36,000 native California Indians in California and between 30,000 to 40,000 Indians of different tribes who have been brought into the state.

SRP Nominates Gary Ettin For AS Presidency; Student Apathy Cancels USP Convention Plans

Gary Ettin, this semester's Sophomore Class president, was nominated last week as the Associated Student Presidential candidate for the fall semester by the Student Representative Party, the only organized political group to hold an official nominating meeting on campus.

The United Students Party was to have been reorganized this semester, too, but lack of a chairman and lack of student enthusiasm toward the party cancelled the scheduled convention, Election Commissioner Paul Coke explained.

Absence of an open nominating convention which had been planned was also attributed to the same factors.

Last Tuesday's SRP convention, attended by representatives from most campus clubs and organizations, was presided over by Joe Miller.

All candidates were nominated on a white ballot, since there was no opposition.

Wardene Oliver, this semester's Associated Women Student President, was nominated for the fall AS Vice Presidency, Art Gershman was nominated for Associated Men Student President, and Barbara Kontis will be SRP's candidate for the fall AWS presidency.

Terry Cloney, this semester's Freshman Class president, was nominated for the Sophomore Class Presidency and Gary Freund received the nomination for Freshman Class President.

Nominated to fill the seven available sophomore seats on Student Council next semester were Fran Richardson, Loralee Lando, Mary Jane Super and Mike Garabedian. All are currently members of council.

Earl Braverman and Carol Anselmi were the sole nominees to fill the seven open freshman seats on council in the fall.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Miller noted that the convention had nominated only 14 candidates for the 20 elective AS offices.

However, according to Coke, students have until Friday, May 8, to file petitions to run for any AS office. Coke urged those desiring to become candidates to verify their eligibility first to avoid problems later.

Qualifications for each elected AS office are outlined in the AS Constitution.

A major point on the SRP platform is expected to be an amendment to Article III of the AS Constitution which will call for the formation of an eleventh appointed officer in the AS President's Cabinet, that of an arts and awards commissioner.

IRC Schedules British Writer For C-Hour Talk

Donald Stokes, head of the British Information Services in San Francisco, is scheduled by the International Relations Club to speak on news behind the headlines during College Hour tomorrow in C-258-59, according to IRC President Dave Louis.

"This is another occasion where the IRC brings a prominent and versatile person to our campus to discuss a topic of particular interest," Joseph Jacobsen, club adviser commented.

Stokes has a considerably varied background. Before he joined the service of the British Government in 1945, he acted as foreign correspondent for the largest newspaper concern in Britain, served three years in the Royal Navy and is an author of several books.

His latest book published in the United States, Captive In The Night, sold more than 400,000 copies. Another, Men Behind Victory, has been translated into 13 languages and was serialized in newspaper form and broadcast by the BBC.

During the time Stokes worked as a journalist, he interviewed Winston Churchill, Bernard Shaw and Somerset Maugham, among others.

In World War II, Stokes served as a lieutenant in the Royal Navy until 1942 when he was wounded and sent home.

In 1945 Stokes became news editor of the British Information Services in New York, a position he held for seven years. During this time he contributed several articles to leading American magazines.

Locally, Stokes has spoken before 100 leading clubs and appeared on radio and television.

Louis, enthusiastic over Stokes' visit to the campus, said, "When a person of Mr. Stokes' caliber talks to students, they can expect a stimulating experience."

Trade Week's Queen

Rosie Fang, last semester's Associated Women Student president and best-dressed coed, has been chosen to preside over the Golden Gate World Trade and Travel Week as queen, Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser, disclosed recently.

Highlighting the week's events will be the International Ball at the Mark Hopkins Hotel in the Peacock Court and Champagne Room from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., Saturday, May 23.

In order to offset expenses that are anticipated, a necessary charge of $1 per couple will be made.

J. M. Berghout, chairman of the ball, stated that no tickets will be made available at the door and that students must present their invitations in order to be admitted.

Berghout said he hopes that attending students will be attired in their national costumes because, he explained, this idea has proved to be very attractive in past years.

Four acts are available from the college to perform at the ball. They include a Flamenco Dance to be performed by a coed with a guitar accompaniment.

A Marinera Dance, to be performed by Ricardo Garcia-Pacheco and Maria San Martin is also planned.

Other acts include a Cumbia Dance, which is Colombian and features eight dancers with flaming torches and a vocal trio which will sing Latin American numbers.

Miss Fang, presently this semester's Publicity Committee Chairman, is a student attending the college on a student visa.

A tall slender student, Miss Fang is a graduate of Diocesan Girls School in Hong Kong. She is preparing for a career in commercial art, in which she is majoring here.

As winner of the best-dressed coed contest in 1963, then conducted in association with Glamour Magazine, Miss Fang was in additional competition for selection of the 10 best-dressed coeds in the nation.

"She has had considerable experience as a model and has participated in numerous public ceremonies," Jacobsen said.

World Trade Week, which will run from May 17 to 23, will have its opening in Union Square. Sid Ceasar will appear at the same event.

Angie Touloume, a student here on a visa from Greece, won this honor last year.

Students Need New Lounge— Try The Shack, Not Smith Hall

INDIVIDUAL STUDENTS at times take it upon themselves to attempt to correct some deficiencies in the college organization by the use of the petition. This democratic process is sometimes abused in putting forth petty and selfish desires, but the latest attempt is neither of these. It is, in fact, commendable.

A petition is being circulated among the students of this college asking that a portion of the new Smith Hall extension be converted into a student lounge.

It is a poorly hidden secret that the students of this institution need some place to relax and, if nothing else, kill time. When the weather is nice this can readily be accomplished on the surrounding lawns or in the court yard. However, the weather in San Francisco is not always what the tourist folders claim it to be.

At these times, students are found clustered in doorways, in the basement of Science Hall and any place that offers some kind of protection against the elements.

We also have another problem related to the lack of a students' lounge, that of cafeteria congestion. Because they have no place else to go, the students will spend up to twice the normal amount of time at the luncheon tables. This is not to say that a lounge would cure the congestion, but it would alleviate it somewhat.

In the fall of 1962 we had such a lounge. Known as the Student Union or the "Shack," it was not a large building, but it was available to all qualified students who wished to use it. Unfortunately, the students forgot that the use of the "Shack" was a privilege and not a right. They overstepped their privilege and it was taken away from them.

There has been a turnover of the majority of the students since the "Shack" was closed and these new students feel, rightly so, that they should not be disciplined for the acts of others who are now gone.

But while recognizing the need for a lounge, we must question its proposed location in the newly-constructed portion of Smith Hall. Any such arrangement would be temporary at the most. The funds for construction were allocated to help the college keep pace with the ever increasing enrollment. The space will be needed.

We believe a better alternative would be looking into the possibility of reoccupying the old "Shack." It is small, but some degree of permanency could be achieved. The building is now being used as a storeroom for the horticulture department and, especially with the new horticulture center being opened, perhaps some arrangement could be made.

We do not wish to scuttle the petition now being circulated. On the contrary, we heartily support the idea its originators have put forth. We do feel that the above possibility should be looked into.

The H&R department would not be receiving the extra space if it is not needed now or sometime in the immediate future. The comfort of the student should never take precedence over seeing that he gets the best education possible with the facilities at hand.

Success Story Series

Radio-TV Grad's Formula: Education First, Job Next

By Herm Kilgerman

Because Carter B. Smith went to college to learn and not merely to gain knowledge for a job, he is a success today.

Smith has been employed at radio station KSFO since last July as a staff announcer. In this capacity, he does everything from news editing and broadcasting to presenting his own Sunday morning show.

Weekday mornings, he is right-hand man to Don Sherwood.

The story of Smith's success dates back to the 1950's when he was a broadcaster on a small Red Bluff station. After a few years there, he decided to come to San Francisco and broaden his education.

He entered City College and majored in radio-television. "The training I received from Henry Leff (head of the college's radio TV department) was invaluable to me. I can't praise this man enough," Smith stated.

Not content with just attaining his Associate in Arts degree, Smith, upon graduating from this college, enrolled at San Francisco State. Four years later, he earned his bachelor in arts degree in radio-TV.

"Attainment of a bachelor's degree should be the minimum a student strives for during his education," Smith commented.

While studying at State College, he worked at KRE in Berkeley and in addition, he was a part-time instructor of radio-TV courses at State for one year.

"Last summer, I heard of an opening at KSFO and decided to apply," he said. "I think my previous experience and broad educational background clinched the position for me.

"Students today shouldn't wait for a 'big break' to stare them in the face but rather should be aggressive and go out into the world and do something for themselves. The future waits for those who seek," Smith said.

"The radio business is very competitive. A person must be dedicated to his job in order to succeed in it," he continued. Smith's formula for the success of a radio station is dedicated personnel blended with an excellent management.

KSFO, according to him, has both ingredients.

"There is a great climate of creativity around a metropolitan radio station," Smith remarked. "The management always has an open mind to new ideas."

What is Smith's advice to students interested in a career in radio-television? "Go out to the sticks and learn the trade first. Then come back to the big city and search for a job. The going will be easier because employers seek experienced people.

CARTER B. SMITH, KSFO staff announcer.

"It is possible, but extremely rare, for a person to begin at the bottom of the ladder in a large radio station and work his way to the top," Smith added.

"I recommend the business only to those students who are intelligent and serious-minded. Any others need not apply," he emphasized.

Asked for an opinion of radio-television schools as opposed to training received in a college or university, Smith stated that specialized schools are adequate for "building foundations to develop techniques but they do not teach the all-important aspect of attitude to a job.

"These schools teach specific things," he added, "but they cannot equal the education one gains by attending a college or university."

Billionaire J. Paul Getty's Advice

Money—You Can't Take It With You

By Bea Takeuchi

Last week KQED, the city's educational television channel, presented an hour-long documentary film on the world's richest man, American, J. Paul Getty. This candid film showed the melancholy old man and the grandeur of his magnificent Sutton Place mansion in England.

The film was an attempt by British producers to analyze Getty, who has always managed to keep his private life an enigma. The result was not a revealing one; the billionaire lived up to his image—that of an idiosyncratic personality.

Students of economics, business, history, journalism, sociology and psychology, and any student interested in money, found that Getty had advice for all.

For the journalism and literature students: A man of Getty's stature does not scoff at "girlie magazines." He has written several articles on the subject of success in business and has had them printed in these slick mag azines.

"Everybody seems to read them. Especially the young businessman. I wanted to get a message across to them instead of those in my own age bracket. The message I wanted to get across was not to listen to everyone, to think for themselves. If I had listened, I wouldn't have anything today."

For the language students: Getty learned Arabic, because he found that the biggest mistake he made in business was in 1931, when he pulled his oil empire out of the Middle East. He learned the language, and "bought his way back in."

For the history student: Getty manages to keep all his wealth without sharing it with stockholders. One history teacher here summed it up as, "Getty hires at least 20 lawyers, and they work eight hours a day just figuring out a way to beat the income taxes. Getty even set up a trust fund for his dog!"

For the philosophy student: Getty says, "Money can't buy happiness, health, good times. The best times didn't cost me any money. I like to take a surfboard to the beach. The breakers and sunshine are free."

For the economics student: This solitary billionaire can afford to give a pound note to everyone on earth. He can spend and spend and still have money in his pocket. He earns as much each day as several men can earn in a lifetime. His wealth is incalculable.

Getty is the largest independent oil producer in the world. Only the billionaires of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia can compare with him. He is without a board of directors. He rules his 19,000 employees by himself.

For the criminology student: "Crackpots could dynamite the place. I keep police dogs because I like them," says Getty. There are iron bars on each window of Sutton Place.

For the sociology student: "I like to think I'm average," says Getty. "Perhaps it's hard for a woman to feel she's competing with business. Too much business in my five marriages," he added. Getty is seeking someone who would bring him lasting happiness.

For those who seek millionaire husbands: "I don't want hundreds of letters from women. I like the company of women, and I'm most sad when they leave me. Business comes first," he said.

For the humanities student: Getty envies Julius Caesar, Winston Churchill, Mussolini, JFK.

For the psychology student: (Take your pick.) As a boy, Getty saved marbles and money. His father started from poverty and left him less than 200,000 pounds, which he turned into a million pounds at the age of 24.

He defines gambling as "risk taking."

He never gives money to individuals. (He discussed that idea with John D. Rockefeller.)

He thinks he will be remembered as a businessman with a footnote somewhere in history.

Not afraid of ghosts, he fears only "disease, old age and being incapacitated."

His enjoyment in life is the adding of new refineries, chemical plants, office buildings and other construction and "to give employment to lots of people."

You can't take it with you. "It's a good thing, it might be quite a burden," he said.

AMERICAN supermarkets are a gas. They are simply too much. In short, they are mammoth, pretentious, dull and poorly organized. But they also provide quite a few laughs.

For instance, in most supermarkets, it takes a good 50-yard walk to get from the imported English soda crackers to the domestic cracker shelf, and for some strange reason, pickles have been located half a block away from the martini olives.

The chief objection is, however, that the customers seem to be ill at ease and on guard. The pleasure of supermarket idling lies in watching people with their hair down—or, in the case of women, up.

A second point is that supermarkets seem to put people on guard. Last week, for example, we watched the nut counter for a full 15 minutes without seeing a customer steal a single peanut, which is a sad commentary on the tensions in this country.

The men usually wear the hooded expression of people expecting FBI surveillance, either from the many overhead mirrors or from the butcher dissecting a freshly-killed lamb.

Customers can no longer leisurely browse in any one counter because of the fear of near-by employees supposedly stamping prices on goods but actually keeping close watch over the giant size Tide boxes.

Another point is that supermarkets are dull. Some women are immaculately made up, some have their hair rolled up in bobby pins and curlers, some wear capris and faded sweatshirts of their college days, others sport sneakers, sandals and some just go barefoot.

The impact of supermarket advertising is spectacular. For instance, last week, one such store advertised the "positively last chance" to buy the weekly special gallon can of olive oil for only $3.50. Unless one has a restaurant or a family of 30, this product is doomed to the shelf for the next decade.

Another supermarket offered 20 cans of antipasto for $1. This buy only seems appropriate if one intends to eat spaghetti or ravioli for the next six months.

Another store was sacrificing a gallon jug of wine for only $1.59. Naturally, the stock was exhausted in less than six hours after the sign appeared in the window. This particular store is located on Fourth and Bryant Streets.

However, last week's best buy was at a Marina supermarket where five cans of tuna fish were priced at $.99. Over 200 cases were neatly stacked in a corner with 500 more on a hand truck awaiting their turn. The occasion for such a sale? The newspapers had just announced a report from the Department of Agriculture on botulism.

In addition, in order to build up a clientele, supermarkets give out trading stamps. At once, WAR is declared among supermarkets!

Gold stamps, blue stamps, green stamps, red stamps, orange stamps are handed to customers who, for the majority, simply discard them or add them to the other 30,000 stuffed inside the glove compartment of their cars. Soon the stamps to redecorate their childrens' bedroom, others make collages or line old travelling trunks with them.

Others, primarily LOL's, diligently collect these stamps and paste them into books furnished by the supermarkets. When one accumulates 85,000 stamps, one can redeem them for a collection of 12 drinking glasses, gaily decorated with 1901 models of Packard automobiles or a Timbuktu street scene, which will provide conversation pieces at the next family dinner.

Ah, yes! Such is America! America!

'Beggar' Takes Shape Because Of Hard Work

By Ann Weill

With a stick of greast paint, some costumes, plywood, nails, a script, a director and an enormous amount of perseverance, a play can be produced.

This is doubly true for a play like Beggar On Horseback, now in the process of being molded and worked into a production such as is scheduled here next week, since 40 characters must learn lines and find costumes. The usual number in campus productions is ten.

For four weeks the cast and crew have begun to prepare for the show, but now, with the first performance only a week away, performers must attend evening rehearsals, where make-up, costumes and scenery are molded into a smooth unit.

For make-up, each character must be analyzed before it is possible to apply the right color and amount of make-up to his face.

There are a number of costume changes, most to be made quickly, from one scene to the next. The costumes are modern dress, but there are also many elaborate ones used throughout the play.

Ten scenes and 19 set changes make up the work of the set designer. Stagehands will be kept busy moving sets here and there.

Platforms and other wooden objects must be built for the stage.

Backgrounds must be painted on canvas-covered wooden frames and linked together.

The director stands daily in the theater, conducting rehearsals and estimating the good as well as the bad. He constantly reminds the players of a never-remembered line, or asks them to drop a certain gesture that does not fit the role.

All performers must be at rehearsal on time. They remain for the length of the show, sometimes quite late, then are ready, if they have one, to attend an 8 o'clock class the next day.

All this goes into the making of a good performance. There will be four of them starting at 8 p.m. May 6 through 9, in the theater.

A Space-Minded Student

Nasise Builds Rocket Engine; Cost Is $1.25

By Paul Girard

With the present emphasis on space exploration, it is no wonder that a student at the college has taken a strong interest in that field.

Joseph Nasise, a mechanical engineering major, has just finished putting final touches on his pet project, a liquid fuel rocket motor. This is the end result of one and a half years of hard work during which Nasise designed and built this engine by himself.

This rocket contains four parts, an outer jacket, combustion chamber, nozzle and injector head. All of the parts were designed and machined by Nasise, who purchased the materials at foundries. The total cost for materials was $1.25.

The complete engine stands about two feet high but is capable of delivering an estimated 1000 horsepower. That is enough power to lift a rocket weighing up to 2000 pounds.

Nasise has not tested the engine yet, but he hopes to take it to Pasadena at a test site and fire it under the supervision of an engineering company.

"All rockets should be fired only where rocket clubs or rocket companies have test sites," he said.

Nasise does not plan to build a rocket for his engine. "I do not want to fire the rocket in the air because that would mean the waste of a good engine, since all rockets that are fired are usually a total loss even if they are recovered."

The engine is ignited by a form of spark plug, and since the fuel is extremely volatile, not much is needed to ignite it. The fuel used for the rocket is liquid oxygen and kerosene, a special form used for aviation fuel.

Recently Nasise demonstrated the rocket in Dr. Louis Berman's Astronomy 27, a course concerned with space exploration and the equipment used for it.

After observing the demonstration, Berman commented, "It is remarkable that one student has built a whole rocket without any outside help." This also was the largest rocket ever brought into class, Berman said.

JOSEPH NASISE with components of his own rocket engine.
—Guardsman photo by G. Champagne

In the development of mechanical objects, Nasise has always shown both interest and talent.

"Ever since I watched my older brother build solid fuel rockets, much simpler than liquid fuel, I wanted to build an engine much superior to his," he explained.

Before building the rocket, he constructed a robot that stood five feet, six inches and weighed 312 pounds. It was completely successful and operated by remote control. The control panel was connected to the robot by a cable that contained 10,000 separate wires.

Nasise is not planning to stop his efforts with this rocket. He hopes to continue his mechanical engineering study at San Jose State College in the near future and eventually become a technician for a company that manufactures rockets and equipment used for outer space exploration.

He has one big point in his favor. He is able to manufacture a rocket engine for $1.25. What manufacturer could top that?

Seven City College Close-Up Tapes Ready For TV Production

Seven tapings in the series of 13 half-hour weekly television programs, City College Close Up, to be shown on KPIX next fall, have been completed, according to Sylvia R. Leff, faculty producer of the series.

The subjects taped so far include photography, taped on March 10 with the help of faculty members Beverly Pasqualetti, Charles Lamp, Ken Molino and Emmett Smith.

A criminology program was taped on March 18 with Lawrence Lawson, Timothy Foley, John D. Walsh and James Brackett as faculty representatives.

On March 31, Paramedical training, part of the medical assisting, X-ray and nurse training departments was taped. Harry Jean Tiesselinck, William E. Hoskins and Ganelie Griffin were faculty representatives.

Dental services, in the dental assisting and laboratory technician departments, was produced on April 7. Faculty representatives included Ruth Inskipp and Frank C. Szehner Jr.

On April 20, the first part in a series of two business programs was taped with the help of the real estate and merchandising departments. Faculty representatives were Ilyman Berston and Elizabeth Helseth.

April 21 saw the taping of the second part of the business programs. Elements involved in this production included secretarial, accounting and insurance training.

Faculty representatives included James McConnell, Harry W. Frustuck and Harry R. de Iongh.

Last night, the first part of the engineering program was taped with the assistance of Cecil Aggeler, Wallace Sellman and Donald Bryant.

On May 5, the second part of the engineering program is scheduled for taping. Architecture, building and construction, civil, general and common courses in engineering are among the courses to be included in the taping.

Faculty represented are Harold Edmison, Angelo Bertucci, John Hallock, Robin Krizer and Aggeler.

According to Mrs. Leff, the tapings should be completed by June 9.

Students Ask For Lounge In New Cafeteria Annex

A brand new student lounge, which might be located in the yet to be completed wing of the cafeteria, has been proposed in recent student government meetings.

The lounge, if approved, would be a place where students with "breaks" late in the day could study and relax.

Since the cafeteria closes at 12:45 p.m., students who have "breaks" after that time now have nowhere to go except for the library, Associated Student President Bob Roddick said.

Roddick said the lounge, if acquired, would be equipped with some 14 vending machines and would probably be open from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Although it is still in the planning stage, the lounge is expected to be completely student-run, in that it would most likely be patrolled by the Campus Police.

At present the most important factor in the acquisition of the lounge is 2000 signatures on a forthcoming petition, "but there really isn't much of a problem about getting the students' signatures," one of the student government backers stated.

"After all, it would be built for them alone," he said.

Student government leaders are now in the midst of a complete study of the successes and failures of such projects at other colleges.

The petition was first presented to Student Council on April 16.

Concert, Lecture Series Get $800 Allocation From Student Council One Semester Late

By Ann Weill

In an unanimous vote by Student Council members last Tuesday the college's Concert and Lecture Series was allocated $800 for this semester.

The sum, to have been allocated to the organizations last semester, was unintentionally overlooked. When asked what actually occurred, student government adviser Sherm Elworthy replied, "Somebody just goofed."

Finance Chairman George Quick also commented on the fact that the groups already spent and received most of the money.

"From what I've learned of the operation of the student bank," he said, "if a signed requisition is presented to the person in charge, the money is given. Thus the procedure differs from a bank account."

Since the student bank doles out all monies of the Associated Students, the Concert and Lecture Series also received its amount from the bank.

Freshman council member Mary Maurer informed council that a total of 24 applicants has entered the Golden Gate Conference art contest.

The Social Committee is considering combining its social calendar with a student handbook for next semester, because there is no student handbook chairman at the present.

Campus Police representative Charles Simms reported that since there have been so many car thefts in San Francisco, the Campus Police will enforce the city regulation that it is a violation to leave keys in a car.

Athletic and Awards Commissioner Bob Higginbotham related that "we can forget about winning the baseball championship, and the same goes for track."

Concerning baseball, the college team must win every game it plays from now on, Higginbotham added, for a championship.

ISC Presents Pledges Friday

Spring sorority pledges will be formally presented at a semiformal dance Friday, according to Beryl Knoller, Phi Beta Rho president.

At that time Miss Knoller will present three pledges, while Theta Tau President Noreen Segerquist presents eight.

Each coed being presented will be attired in colors and accessories traditionally prescribed by her sorority. Theta Tau pledges wear red or white semiformal dress and tiaras while Phi Beta Rho pledges wear pastel colored dresses and long white gloves.

Each coed presented will walk down a ramp and through a high, flowered archway on the arm of her escort. Theta Tau coeds will carry white flowers while Phi Beta Rho coeds carry yellow ones.

After being presented, the new sorority members will lead the first dance to the music of Maurice Wolohan and his band.

Also in attendance at the private affair will be the parents of the pledges.

Last semester the ball was held in Smith Hall with music by Sal Vance and his orchestra.

Ettin Announces King, Queen Rules

Rules for the Sophomore Ball King and Queen contest are now official, according to Gary Ettin, Sophomore Class president.

Students who wish to enter must belong to a recognized campus organization or club. "If a student is not a member of an organization, special consideration may be given toward elicibility," Ettin said.

The individual entries must pair up as King and Queen by next Tuesday, May 5. Couple entries will be accepted starting May 6.

The contest will close officially at 10:30 p.m. May 29, Ettin explained, when the winners will be announced at the Fairmont Hotel, where the ball is being held.

The main prerequisite for entering this contest is that one of the King-Queen couple must be a sophomore and have completed at least 28 units.

Ettin also declared that an entrant ahead in the contest at a specific time will receive whatever sum is in the Soph-y fund, profits from class projects during the semester.

Budget Requests Exceed Funds By $20,000-Plus

Student Council is faced with a problem—how to appease the college's budgeted organizations, requests from which total $58,269.56 for the Fall, 1964, semester, when available funds for next semester's activities total a mere $38,000.

Finance Chairman George Quick bluntly told council last week that $20,000 plus must be cut from the requested budgets. The main reason for this move is the fact that council had allocated an exorbitant amount of money for this semester's activities.

"The reserve fund is depleted," Quick explained.

Originally, the administration set the available funds for next semester at $40,000, but when it realized that the reserve funds had been diminished, the amount was cut by $2000.

Quick further informed council that the $38,000 total is based on the anticipated sale of 3000 Associated Student cards next semester and the regular anticipated income from the student bookstore and vending machines.

Student Council is expected to begin the long road of approval and/or cuts of budgets within the week. A total of 37 organization budgets must be approved, in one way or another, by the end of this semester.

Campus Police Ask Student Review Of Regulations

Because of existing confusion concerning parking on campus, the Campus Police asked today that students review the parking regulations in effect this semester.

One area where students may park, with the current permit obtained from the Campus Police office upon presentation of an Associated Student card, is that bounded by Ocean avenue and the athletic field. Another is next to the men's gymnasium, east of Cloud Hall.

Parking is also permissible near the men's gymnasium and the old horticulture center. Acceptable parking areas also include the lot on the north side of the arts building near Judson avenue and the reservoir across Phelan Avenue.

Without special parking permits, students may not park around the Cloud Hall circle, the faculty area near Smith Hall or the area surrounded by the west side of the arts building and Phelan avenue.

Parking is also illegal on paved roadways near any of the legal parking areas, in other than marked stalls or in dirt sections adjacent to the Men's Gymnasium.

Because of recent auto accidents and the issuance of more than 750 citations since the start of this semester, Larry Lawson, criminology department chairman, urged students to park legally, drive carefully and cooperate with the Campus Police.

Students were also warned not to jaywalk as they are subject to citations if apprehended.

ASIDE from touring the Winchester Mystery House in San Jose, one of the most complex and interesting pastimes is the study of Child Psychology.

Many modern mothers are finding psychology a very helpful aid in rearing their youngsters. But could it be possible these same mothers are causing the study of Child Psychology to become a monument to stupidity?

The so-called modern mother is fearful of rearing a juvenile delinquent. Her fears are heightened by glaring headlines in some of today's newspapers. Engulfed by this fear, she seeks an outlet—or outside help. This outside help usually turns out to be a book.

NOT JUST ANY...

Oh, no! Not just any book, but one entitled, Child Psychology.

She grasps the book and proceeds to make a fetish of its contents. Frustrated, this mother studies every gurgle, burp or otherwise normal behavior exhibited by a poor defenseless child. Babe in one arm, book in the other might well describe this mother!

A noted psychologist and author of numerous psychology books advises mothers to put away their books and watch their children:

"The answers to their actions won't be found in any book—not even Logic!

"While you have your nose stuck in some book, you are missing your child's most precious actions. These are moments, more often than not, that will not be duplicated.

"It may be interesting to note that half of the authors of these psychology books are not even married!"

All mothers addicted to psychology books would be wise to check the copyright date of the books. The gurgle of 1959 just might be different from the gurgle of 1964!

THE BOOK SAID...

Human emotions cannot be written down word for word. They change and rightly so. Each child is different, surely the "psych" book told you that.

Why not enjoy your child? After all, he's only young once!

The hackneyed cliches, such as "spare the rod and spoil the child," and "familiarity breeds contempt," are not always effective in every situation. Experience is the best teacher, at least that's what the mothers from the "Old School" say!

All psychology books are okay in their own place. (Well, almost all of them are.) If it makes the young mothers feel better they should then by all means consult outside sources but not hide behind them.

Face reality, face your child. He needs you!

Psychology may not solve your problems, mother. It could very well add to them!

Two Titles At Stake In Four Days

Varsity Nine Splits Twin Bill With San Jose Jags, 0-2, 6-2

By Pete Franklin

San Francisco's varsity nine proved formidable opponents in their encounter with league-leading San Jose last Saturday. The Rams lost the first game of the twin bill, 2-0, but in the second game taught humility to the Jaguars who have romped virtually unchecked through the '64 season, by handing them a 6-2 loss, San Jose's fifth defeat of the year in eighteen starts.

The Jags took the first game "with luck on their side," according to Coach Ernie Domecus. The number of men left on base best tells the story of the Ram's loss.

"We left 11 men on," said Domecus, "and we just couldn't get the big hit that would have won it for us." Hurler Hugh Miller took the loss for the Rams, after allowing only six Jaguar hits for their two runs over his nine inning stint.

"They didn't hit me that well," Miller stated, "but I didn't have any edge to work with and they shut us out." The Rams left innings twice with two on, and once with the bases full.

In the nightcap, the Rams bounced back with nine hits, four for extra bases, to powerhouse their way to victory. At the end of the second game, the Ram season record stood at 7-10.

Brad Rothback went the route for the Rams, winning his fifth game in six decisions. Of the seven San Francisco victories this year, Rothback is responsible for winning five, and saving one in relief.

San Jose got their only two runs of the game in the first inning, and held the lead 2-0 until the Rams' fourth inning rally was good for three runs. San Francisco added one more in the sixth, and a pair in the seventh for insurance.

Henry Scott and Russ Kunkie picked up doubles, and Butch Bussanick doubled and tripled in the game.

With a season record of 11-4 going into the Ram doubleheader, San Jose clinched at least a tie for first by winning one. Had they won both games, the Jaguars would have clinched the title.

Rams Drop Three Games In Row; Record Now 6-9

Loss-prone seems to be a recent description of the Ram nine who made it three-in-a-row last Tuesday by dropping a 6-3 decision to College of San Mateo.

In the April 18 doubleheader, the nod went to Chabot's Gladiators twice in the same afternoon, 9-1 and 5-3.

The club, carrying a 6-9 season record as of last week, will host archfoe Foothill in its final quest of the season Saturday. The doubleheader will start at 11 a.m. at Balboa Stadium.

In the first of the Chabot games, the Rams went out in front in the first inning with what was to be their only run of the game and held the 1-0 lead until the third.

Chabot took the lead, 2-1, and from there added seven more to blast the three San Francisco pitchers used.

Hugh Miller incurred the loss, his third against no wins.

Ram mound ace Brad Rothback came up with his first loss of the season in six decisions in the second game of the Chabot twin bill.

Rothback went the route, but the Rams had a deficit from the start, and he couldn't hold the Gladiators to fewer than five runs, four of which came in three innings, the fourth, fifth and sixth.

The Rams rallied briefly in the bottom of the last inning, but for only two runs. "A good game," coach Ernie Domecus commented, "and a tough one to lose."

The San Mateans jumped off to an early lead in their game with the Rams, scoring five times in the first two frames.

The Bulldogs added another in the sixth and held the Rams scoreless until the eighth, when the San Franciscans combined three hits, two walks, and a hit batter for three runs, enough to spoil Bulldog shutout hopes. Ken Dyer took the loss for the Rams.

Swimmers Close Winless Season With 77-18 Loss

Closing out a winless Golden Gate Conference season, the Ram swim team was swamped, 77-18, by a powerful San Mateo team April 17 at College of San Mateo pool.

The Rams started the meet in the red when their 400-yard medley relay, Jim Harris, John Hamilton, Mark Haskell and Roger Guidi, was left in the wash, finishing 31 seconds behind San Mateo.

Fred Wales and Dennis Harley ran into the same difficulty as they placed third and fourth, respectively, in the 200 freestyle.

The height of defeat was reached when Ram star Rien Gray fell in the 50-yard freestyle by less than half a second. Gray registered a second spot, clocking 23.9 seconds.

Third places were allocated to Bob Barnes in the 200 backstroke and to Bob Corsiglia in the diving event.

Harley followed the trend with a third in the 200 butterfly as the score at the halfway mark stood at 45-7 in favor of San Mateo.

The Rams realized some revenge in the 100 free when Gray scored the Rams' only first place with a 53.5 time, finishing half a stroke ahead of his opponent.

Hamilton managed a second in the 200 breaststroke followed by teammate Harley who placed third.

The 400-yard freestyle relay, composed of Haskell, Harris, Wales and Gray, registered their season's best clocking, 3:50.6, but still lost to the Bulldog team.

This Friday the Rams will venture to Cabrillo College to take part in the Northern California Swimming Championships.

Gray and Brian Edie will be carrying the college's banner in the meet.

One-Win Golfers Take On Vikings

The Ram golfers won their first Golden Gate Conference match two weeks ago Friday, squeaking by the Contra Costa Comets, 15½ to 14½, in a match highlighted by Jim Schroder's excellent 73.

Schroder's seldom-shot score is now undoubtedly the team's season best. Mike Moore moved out of the eighties and equaled Schroder's old team high of 79, which was just good enough to edge out J. Han's 80.

Ram Mike Soden was narrowly defeated, 78-80, at the hands of Dan Overstreet. Comets' Bill MacKenzie was a stroke over Pete Eden's winning 87. Mike Selsnik and Contra Costa's Charles Cox finished head-to-head, each with 88.

When Ram coach Grover Klemmer was asked if the team could better its present record and league standings by defeating Diablo Valley this Friday, the San Francisco coach replied, "We have a good chance of winning the match against Diablo Valley. In this conference, all the teams, with the exception of Chabot and San Mateo, are evenly matched. Any team can beat another."

RAM SPRINTER TOM GARDNER breaks the tape half a step in front of Oakland's Bill Sanders to capture first place in the 220 with a 22.7 seconds clocking. Sanders' time was 22.8. Here Gardner is turning the tables on the Oakland star who upset Gardner in the 100-yard dash by another one tenth of a second with times of 9.8 and 9.9, respectively.

Spikers Score Upset Fifth In 17-Team NorCal Relays

By Mike Smith

Golden Gate Conference track champions, Oakland City College, placed first in last Saturday's 17 team Northern California Junior College Relays track meet at Foothill while the City College of San Francisco placed five notches behind the T-Birds score of 60 with a respectable 24.

American River finished second with 42 followed by San Mateo 38, Fresno 32, College of Sequoias 30½, City College of San Francisco 24, Diablo Valley 20, San Jose 16, Santa Rosa 14½, Reedley 14, Sacramento 10, Foothill 10, Contra Costa 8, Modesto 8, Sierra 4, Hancock 3, Chabot 1, Marin 1, and San Joaquin 1.

The Ram sprint medley placed a surprising second and Pat Lewis just failed to top the discus throw and shot put events.

He was topped by Rich of Reedley who scored a 57-3¼ in the shot and 162-11 in the discus.

This Saturday the Ram spikers will travel to San Jose where they will compete in the Golden Gate Conference meet.

This will be followed by the Northern California Junior College trials, next Tuesday, at Modesto in preparation for Santa Rosa's May 16 Northern California Junior College track meet.

The Ram spikers in their last match of the 1964 Golden Gate Conference season, bowed to the dual meet conference track champions, Oakland City College, 86-32½, and also lost to the University of California Frosh, who tallied 49½ points, in a tri-meet April 17 at Berkeley.

Although the San Francisco trackmen did not enter all 16 events, they won two of them and placed second in two more.

Ram Tom Gardner took the 220 event with a 22.7 seconds, with Oakland's Bill Sanders a step behind at 22.8. Gardner's teammate, Paul Richard, placed third, running 23.2.

Sanders turned the tables on Gardner in the 100 by barely outrunning him 9.8 to 9.9 seconds.

Pat Lewis, in keeping up with old habits, won the shot put and the discus throw events with 50-9½ and 152-1½, respectively.

In the 440 relay, the Rams' Don Cameron, Vernon Bradford, Richard and Gardner finished second with a 43.0 as compared with the victorious T-Bird's 42.7 mark.

The 880-event saw California's Marty Koenekamp and Oakland's Bob De Delle come in for a first place tie with 1:57.0, just ahead of T-Bird Terry Forbyn with 1:57.1 and Ram Ozzie Norris's 1:57.6.

Netters Finally Play Foothill Crucial Today

Within the next four days two tennis championships will be decided.

Today, the undefeated Ram tennis team will finally meet undefeated Foothill for the Golden Gate Conference title at Golden Gate Park.

Friday, the defending champion Rams travel to San Mateo for the two-day conference tournament.

In the Foothill match today, the Rams will rank as slight favorites, because of their depth. Although coach Roy Diederichsen predicts that the final score will read 4-3, he will not venture a decision as to who will have the four points.

Last year the Rams posted a 7-0 conference record with relatively easy 6-1 victories over powerhouses Foothill and San Mateo.

So far this year, the Rams have repeated last year's record with six straight conference wins.

The Foothill match was originally scheduled for April 24, was then moved to April 21, then changed to April 23. It will finally be played today.

As to the conference tournament, no predictions have been made. Coach Diederichsen stated that he wants the Foothill match behind him before he starts thinking ahead.

Foothill's Rodney Kop and Dale Macgowan will rate as favorites in the singles and should combine to take the doubles.

The Rams will try to knock out Foothill with their depth and possibly upset the pair in either singles or doubles competition.

Last year the Rams took the conference tournament with 18 points behind Bob Siska and Bob Murio, placing second and third in the singles, while Siska and Ed Jilka captured the doubles crown.

Art Major Skis Way To Victory

Jan Uribe, 18-year-old art major here, recently won first place in the men's novice class in water skiing competition at the Western States and Boat Club, held in Vallejo.

In the aquatic drag race, Uribe skimmed up to the speed of 78 miles per hour, far below the world's championship speed of 117, but fast enough to be the best of his class. A 16-year-old girl holds the woman's record with 86 miles per hour.

When he was 10, Uribe's father purchased a boat and a pair of water skis for him, and he began practicing water skiing. Today, his entire family enjoys the sport.

"It is a lot of fun to ski," Uribe declared, "because everything is 'blurry' when going so fast. The only thing seen is the boat with the driver and watcher ahead, ready to accept signals."

In addition to skiing in the Bay Area, Uribe has skied at such sites as Clear Lake in northern California, Long Beach in the Los Angeles area, Modesto Lake and Lake Berryessa.

Guardsman Breaks Losing Streak, Tops H&R, 33-27

Breaking a "brilliant" four-year losing streak, the "spoil-sport" Guardsman five surprised itself and Hotel and Restaurant, 33-27, last Tuesday night in the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural basketball competition.

Oddly enough, The Guardsman's previous victory, four years ago, was also over an H&R team when an astounding 54-11 victory was registered.

Leading scorer for the red-hot Guardsman team Tuesday night was Pete Franklin, who hit for 12, while Mark White of H&R tried to "even" the score with 18 points.

Following this "big excitement," the Ram Ski Club scored more than its usual five points, by one, but still lost to the Lutheran Club, 53-6.

Sharp-shooter Pete Katchis accounted for 19 of the winning points, and George Skinner made all but one of the Ram Ski Club's score.

Other club action found the Hawaiian Club downing the Newman Club, 69-45.

In Inter-Fraternity Council competition, Beta Tau beat Alpha Sigma Delta, 52-24, with Jim Ruggles shooting 21. Alpha Phi Omega forfeited to Zeta Phi Sigma because of too few players, thus posting an 0-2 record.

Alpha Kappa Rho also won, through forfeit, over Phi Beta Delta.

In trouncing the Saxons, 60-32, the Divine Ones remain undefeated and in first place in the indepenent league after four games of play.

In other independent league action, Anonymous overrode the Aliis, 44-22, and the NBA Rejects lost to the Devinessians, 40-28.

Games slated tonight include the Criminology Department team against the NBA Rejects, the Saxons opposing the Devinessians.

Block SF Holds Meet After Big Shake-Up

After their big shake-up, the Block SF will hold their first general meeting tomorrow during College Hour in C-260.

At the meeting plans for the semi-annual Block SF banquet will be discussed as will future activities of the club. The date for the banquet is Monday night, June 1.

Last Thursday there was a special meeting of representatives from each sport concerning the banquet, attendance at meetings, and collection of this semester's dues.

So far the representative system is producing a far greater amount of participation and enthusiasm than the old system of general meetings.

Dues have been collected from the representatives and each sport has been sectioned off and assigned to a representative for the collection of the remainder of the dues.

Veteran Blood Drive Donor Gives Account Of First Experience

(Editor's Note: In an effort to quell some of the qualms students may have developed about the donation of blood, The Guardsman scoured the campus and came up with a real, live, veteran of a former blood drive. It is hoped this man's experience will be an inspiration to all timid souls.)

By George Nelson

Students donating blood for the first time may be a bit nervous. I was.

I stutter a lot. Especially when I'm nervous. Never was I more nervous than the time I first gave blood. Correction, while I was waiting to be born I was more nervous, but I hadn't learned to stutter yet so it wasn't so bad.

My company was having a blood drive and I was on bad terms with the boss. A blood donation would be a perfect way to keep from losing my job. I made the appointment.

If I hadn't thought the donation would save my job, I would probably never have given that pint.

I like my blood right where it is—under my skin and out of sight. The less I see of it the better. My own blood-shot eyes make my knees weak.

It took a coupie of days to prepare myself for the donation. By the end of the third day and time for my appointment, I had convinced myself that giving blood was a patriotic thing to do.

Blood itself has red corpuscles, white corpuscles, and it looks blue through the skin. That may not seem like good reasoning but it was the best I could do.

As I marched off the elevator, I complimented the operator on his expert maneuvering and proceeded toward the clinic, whistling Stars And Stripes Forever. My "spirits" were high.

The nurse seated at the reception desk said hello and asked my name. I looked around the room. All over the place there were people lying on tables. My spirits plunged, and I knew that I wouldn't be able to talk.

The nurse asked my name again. To save myself from embarrassment, I pretended I had forgotten it.

I offered my place in line to every one who came in after me, but every one refused. And then it was my turn.

I proceeded to a desk. Seated there was the most gorgeous lady I have ever seen, and I immediately fell in love. Because I couldn't talk, I decided to play the strong silent type.

She asked for my hand and my heart went into passing gear. Then she stuck a needle into my finger for a blood sample. That is one of the most effective romance killers I've ever experienced.

My stomach did an about face and the love affair was over.

"Thank you. Please proceed to the next station," she said.

"Vampire," I mumbled.

I shook over to the next station—the tables. A nurse asked me to lie down and relax. While relaxing, a six-foot-something Scandanavian type, lying on the table behind me, fainted.

After repairing him, the nurse returned to me and asked if I was nervous. Not wanting to look like a sissy I frantically shook my head, "Yes."

She inserted the needle and I looked the other way and waited to faint.

Much to my surprise I remained conscious throughout the entire ordeal. All the pain I had anticipated never was. The worst part of the whole donation was the needle, and that hurt much less than I had expected.

The nurse removed the needle and told me to remain where I was and relax so that my system could figure out what happened and adjust.

I must have a dumb system because it couldn't figure it out. Little bubbles kept popping against my eyeballs.

"Thank you," said the nurse, "now you may go and get your cookies and coffee." Such a small reward I thought, for such a gallant deed. Actually it wasn't a reward. The cookies and coffee are supposed to reactivate the thing that makes the blood . . . I guess.

After it was all over I felt a little strange; I was a pint low. I had given a pint of my own blood free of charge and I was proud; so proud as a matter of fact that I left my coat off on the bus so that all could see my bandage.

Tomorrow I'm giving another pint. Now that I'm an old salt at this sort of thing, I expect things to run much more smoothly. I may even be able to talk.

Student Leadership Conference Passes Resolution To Increase Two-Year College Allotments

Members of the California Junior College Student Government Association recently passed a resolution urging the state legislature to enact laws granting two-year colleges at least one-third of all future state bond issue allotments.

These and other legislative acts were passed by the 70 member colleges of the CJCSGA at the State Conference in Los Angeles, April 23-25.

Representing this college at the conference were Associated Student Vice President Lynn Goodrich, Finance Chairman George Quick, Freshman President Terry Cloney, Associated Men Student President Roger Kaufman, State Information Chairman Cecil Reichert, Council Member Loralee Lando and AS Adviser Sherm Elworthy.

The aforementioned resolution was deemed necessary because of the increasing two-year college enrollment and because the local property taxpayer, until very recently, has provided all financing for two-year college construction while all state college and most University of California construction has been financed with state funds.

Other motions passed included a resolution urging the state legislature to also grant each college the right to adopt its own policy regarding mandatory AS fees.

To promote a diversified program of activities, the member colleges also resolved to support the presentation of speakers and representatives of such various beliefs and ideologies as the John Birch Society and the Communist and Socialist Parties.

Recommendations were made also advocating the availability of group insurance in AS cards and the attendance of a student representative at administration, faculty and trustee board meetings for the purpose of promoting cooperation and coordination.

Some 400 student leaders attended the conference which included a workshop for AS Presidents and four others on campus attitudes, organizations, activities and communications.

The CJCSGA was divided into eight areas in 1962 and this college is a member of Area Six, whose conference was held in San Mateo in March.

Host of the conference was the Area Three colleges of Los Angeles while the keynote speaker was Dr. John Given, legislative advocate of the California Junior College Association.

His subject was The Legislative Advocate's Problems In The Implementation Of California's Master Plan Of Education. —C. W.

Religious Topic To Be Discussed Tomorrow

A discussion on the influence of Christ on college students will be conducted during College Hour tomorrow by three members of the Collegiate Christian Fellowship here, club representative Elaine Buhtz stated last week.

Student speakers, in addition to Miss Buhtz, will be Dorothy Ricker and Gerald Bruce. All students are invited to attend this program in C-201.

Last month, the group sponsored a series of lectures on the subject, What Is God Like? Moderators included Professor Roland Given and Reverend James Spilliman.

AWS Plans Presentation Of Awards, Discussion

Two events remain on the social calendar of the Associated Women Students, a College Hour discussion and the Feminine Fling Awards Party, to be held Friday, May 22, Wardene Oliver, AWS president, stated recently.

The theme of the Feminine Fling will be it's A Woman's World, featuring the native foods, costumes and customs of many coeds here as well as a discussion of the woman's role in countries abroad as compared to that of the woman in the United States.

A high point of the event will be the presentations of AWS service awards and the Dougherty Trophy, given each semester to the sorority with the highest scholastic average.

The AWS, Recreation Association and Inter-Sorority Council Presidents for Fall, 1964, will also be introduced at the semiannual function.

Deadline Nears For AS Candidates

With Associated Student elections slated for Tuesday May 19 and Wednesday May 20, candidates must file petitions, which are available in S-134, with the registrar by Friday.

In making this announcement, Election Commissioner Paul Coke added that there are five members on his staff at the present, but he can use additional help.

"Without the work of my staff I couldn't get much accomplished," Coke stated. The staff includes John Judice, Arnie Kamrin, Kathy Bossert, Kathy Grable and Gene Reily.

"In cooperation with the Council of Organizations each club has been asked to draft five members to man the polls," Coke explained.

"There was a great response from the Chinese Students club, Inter-Fraternity and Sorority Councils, Filipino Club, Newman Club, and the Associated Women Students have offered 15 coeds to help," he added.

Coke and his staff must check each candidate's eligibility from the information contained on their petitions.

The petitions must include signatures of 15 AS card holders and their numbers, the candidate's counselor, the Dean of Men or Women, the registrar and Coke.

The petition must also show verification that the campaign fee has been paid to the student bank. The fee is $2 for presidential candidates and $1 for all other candidates. This fee was revised from $4 and $2, respectively, by Student Council last week.

IFC Blood Drive Opens Tomorrow

Annual Two-Day Service Project Benefits Donors

By Jerry Howard

Top-ranking entertainment will kick off the annual Blood Drive here tomorrow.

A service project of the Inter-Fraternity Council, the drive will be held from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. both tomorrow and Friday in C-240.

Bruce Thomas, IFC president, urged all students, faculty members, and college employees to donate a pint of blood, which will be deposited in the City College account at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

A rally will be held during College Hour tomorrow to promote the drive. Featured will be the big name entertainment of Greeco & Willard, Nooney Rickets and Saturday's Children.

More than 530 students volunteered to donate blood in last year's drive, and City College has had the largest single donation of any college on the Pacific Coast for the past three years.

For a patient in a private hospital, the average price of a pint of blood is $25. Consequently, City College has donated blood valued at more than $80,000 in the past six years.

Donors in the Blood Drive may draw an unlimited amount of blood for themselves or their immediate families for one year. They also may draw up to eight pints for any person of their choosing.

Persons under 21 must secure the permission of their parents if they wish to donate; students under 18 are not allowed to donate.

A permission blank is printed on page 3.

For persons planning to donate, the Irwin Memorial has published the following hints: A low fat meal should be eaten within four hours before giving blood, and donors should weigh a minimum of 110 pounds.

Comedians, 'Swimmers,' Singers Head C-Hour Rally

Greeco & Willard, the comedy team now appearing at San Francisco's hungry i, will head the list of entertainers at tomorrow's Blood Drive rally.

To be held during College Hour in the men's gymnasium, the rally will also feature Nooney Rickets and his group, and Saturday's Children, according to Terry Kilpatrick, English instructor here, in charge of making arrangements for the rally.

Greeco & Willard recently appeared on both the Ed Sullivan and Steve Allen television shows. Ivan Paul, entertainment writer for the San Francisco Examiner, wrote recently that "they bring any house down with laughter."

Nooney Rickets and his band are probably the most famous "Swimmers" in the country. They appear currently at The Galaxie in San Francisco.

Saturday's Children have established themselves as a folk singing group of first rank. Their album with ABC-Paramount records, Sing For A Living, is described as presenting "a rich, warm sound that will be demanded again and again by listeners."

Soph Class Plans Dance May 15, Ball May 29

Preceding its annual ball slated for Friday, May 29, the Sophomore Class will sponsor a Rendezvous dance Friday, May 15, in Smith Hall, with music supplied by the college's dance band, Gary Ettin, Sophomore Class president, announced this week.

The dance is semi-formal and will be held between 8 p.m. and midnight. Admission is free to Associated Student cardholders.

A charge of $1 will be made for individuals attending without an AS card and $1.50 for couples attending without a card, Ettin said.

Merchandising Club To Model Summer Attire

Men and women models from the Merchandising Club will display a full array of summer clothes at The Emporium, Stonestown, starting at 7:30 p.m., May 13 and 15, according to Bruce Gow, publicity manager.

The show will be open to the public and will be held in the Emporium's large auditorium. The store will supply all fashions to be shown by the models, who are all merchandising students.

The models will appear on the stage in at least two changes of dress. They will also appear alone and in couples.

This program enables merchandising students to receive practical experience in the aspects of retailing and business management.

Donors To Blood Drive Face No Risk, Benefit If Need Arises

IN MOST CULTURES, both ancient and modern, blood is the symbol of life. Tomorrow the Inter-Fraternity Council will be asking the students of this college to donate some life which will be held in reserve should an emergency befall themselves, their family or their friends.

Blood is an expensive item on the open market. This is quite understandable; there is only one source. Whole blood must be stored under refrigeration, and science has not yet devised a way to produce it artificially. Also, many persons are reluctant to part with a pint of their blood out of fear or because they may possibly feel that they are giving up part of themselves when they do so.

Therefore, looking at the IFC Blood Drive from a pure business standpoint, it appears that a donation would be a pretty good long term investment. For giving one small pint of the 12 pints of blood in his body, the individual is eligible for an unlimited supply in return for himself and members of his immediate family and up to eight pints for any other person of his choosing. There is no risk and there is a guaranteed return should the need arise.

Also, the person making the investment of blood actually loses nothing. His body will manufacture and make up what he has "lost" temporarily in a very short time.

Through their annual event, the IFC has given the students of City College just one more reason to be proud of the campus. Our little old institution has more donations of blood each year than any college on the West Coast, including the giant, hulking universities.

The Blood Drive started some years back as a part of initiation for fraternity pledges. The originator of the idea must again be commended for his thought. Here was a feature of the initiation ceremonies which actually did a lot of good rather than just expended pent-up energies toward useless endeavors.

Gradually the donations increased and the Blood Drive was taken over by the IFC and enlarged into its present-day status.

This annual campus affair has not gone unnoticed in the city of San Francisco. Last year's Mayor George Christopher proclaimed "Blood Days" in the city in an effort to get the citizens to take part in the drive.

Up to, but not including last year, the Blood Drive kept breaking the record it had set the previous year. The IFC hopes and expects to renew this trend and, with the backing of the students, there is no reason why they should not. One of the reasons for the lower number of donations last year was more rigid requirements set by the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. A record number of persons wishing to donate had to be turned away because of ineligibility.

We urge all students, either out of campus pride or insurance for the future, to donate a pint of their blood tomorrow or Friday. It is a painless procedure, taking up very little time but offering the possibility of gigantic returns.

An adult has 12 pints of blood in his body; the IFC is asking for just one of them. This one pint, which will hardly be missed and will quickly be replaced by the body, can be the best thing you ever did.

Art Courses Have Paid Off For Ad Man Gig Gonella

What happens at registration when a journalism-oriented student discovers that all journalism courses have been filled? One alternative is to enroll in art courses.

And this is exactly what Gig Gonella, creative director of Dancer, Fitzgerald, Sample, Inc. advertising agency, did back in 1947.

Starting there as art director five years ago, Gonella has had a broad experience in previous advertising agencies, as well as in education circles.

GIG GONELLA

He attended City College in 1947 through 1948, where he received his basic training in commercial art. "City College offers probably the very best training in the field in the United States," he commented.

From City College, Gonella attended the Academy of Arts, and then the California School of Fine Arts in the evenings. Later, he went to the Design Workshop in New York City. He later returned to the Academy of Arts where he taught advertising layout and the importance of ideas in advertising.

Being head of the creative department at Dancer, Fitzgerald and Sample is not an ordinary job as Gonella explained.

"The responsibilities are many and varied. One important aspect is to work closely with the copy and art people in creating outstanding campaigns for clients.

"An interesting sidelight of the job is that most creative directors have been appointed from the copy end and not art. The only reason I can see for this is because art directors have never been able to communicate or plan campaign ideas as well as copy people.

"I think this is changing as we proceed more toward visual communication. All the more reason why art directors should be better educated today to really succeed," he stated.

"If I had to do it all over again, I think I would start directly into commercial art rather than copy, because art is more expressive.

"It allows more freedom in ads and one associates with all sorts of interesting people, always keeping abreast of the times and what is currently going on," he said.

"Right now, the advertising field is more crowded than it has even been, but there is definite room and opportunities for the real talented ones as a shortage for that type of person exists, and always will," he added.

"All students interested in advertising art should first get a college education and a degree," he said, "because artists today must know how to express themselves verbally and put their ideas across, otherwise they will not get far.

"An artist must speak on the same level as his clients and other business executives who are, for the majority, college graduates," he emphasized.

Gonella, whom William Davis of the college's art department described as "one of the best men in the advertising field today," is also an employer for City College students.

Approached by Davis a few years ago in a totally new experiment of Davis' idea, the program later proved "a very successful one, both for the agency and the students."

The experiment in question was the establishment of a work experience employer, in which the employer hires students of the advertising and art department on a part time basis, in addition to college credits and pay. Gonella presently employs Robert Andrini, a sophomore from City College.

Gonella's intensive experience in the advertising field can be viewed by the numerous advertising awards on the walls of the agency's office. Some of the many accounts he has worked on are The Dole Corporation, Foremost Dairies, Matson Navigation Company, Spice Islands Company, Leslie Salt Company, Calo Pet Food Company (to name a few).

Gonella is currently working on the account for Commonwealth National Bank, a new bank soon to open in the city.

In addition, Gonella is a member of the Advisory Committee of the advertising and art department here. The committee handles all matters concerned with evaluation and criticism of the department, determining its current needs and helping the college prepare the students coming into the department.

Married and the father of two boys, Gonella lives in Mill Valley. He has three hobbies, tennis, golf and reading.

Yoga Promotes Sense Of Well-Being

Coeds Are Stimulated In Spirit And Mind

By Charlotte Wong

Dimmed lights, a quiet calm and a soothing voice — the setting for romance? Not when the scene includes 25 other women!

For coeds enrolled in Frances Galloway's two physical fitness classes, the aforementioned is the atmosphere of a yoga exercise session. The one-hour sessions are scheduled for three weeks or six days since the classes meet only twice a week in the women's gymnasium.

During these meetings students learn various yoga positions through the recorded instructions of Richard Hittleman, A.B., M.A., D.C.S., who is the director and founder of the American Academy of Yoga.

One of the very few American-born yoga authorities currently instructing in the United States, Hittleman has acquainted an estimate of ten million Americans with the rudiments of yoga through newspaper articles, a daily television program and correspondence.

Yoga postures differ from ordinary exercises in that the latter are highly repetitive and quick, concentrating on specific areas of the body, while yoga positions are performed without strain up to five times and are held for short periods.

Stimulating each part of the body, including internal organs and glands, yoga postures are designed to massage and relax while promoting elasticity, mental alertness and a sense of well-being.

RELAXING AS THE SPIRIT MOVES THEM are yoga enthusiasts Joan Ferro and Marie Bridant in their weekly physical education course as taught by Frances Galloway. —Guardsman photo by Teddy Tsoi.

Miss Galloway first introduced yoga into her physical fitness courses two years ago, after she had seen it demonstrated in a physical education workshop held at California State Polytechnic College. She also took a course in yoga taught by a student of Hittleman's.

"I would like to take further instruction and perhaps introduce a course entirely in yoga," she commented.

One was able to note, after a recent session of backward bends, cobra postures and leg pulls, that many enthusiastic coeds remained after class.

A man must now be careful of what settings he chooses for his romantic overtures — rather than puckering up, the eyed in his life might just begin exercising!

Avant Guardsman!

By Michel Janicot

SAN FRANCISCO is a city known for its sophistication, the Golden Gate bridge, Fisherman's Wharf, Mission Dolores and its anachronisms, such as the Palace of Fine Arts (a relic of the 1915 Exposition) and the cable cars, to name only a few.

But the tourists' prime passion however, is for the cable cars. Why? Obviously, because San Franciscans know a good thing when they see one.

Since the cable cars ARE obsolete, enterprising civilians now and then recommend abandoning them.

But in this ease, as well as in others, San Francisco shows a sense of humor. Cost accountants and efficiency engineers are not going to junk the 39 dinky little cars that clang up and down Nob and Russian Hills, carrying 35,000 passengers a day at nine miles an hour and losing $700,000 a year.

Bland is the word for the whole enterprise. Although the seating capacity of the cable cars is only 35, they usually carry over 100 persons during the rush hours, thus creating their own internal traffic jam.

Imperturbable citizens whose minds are wandering far afield and who look around with a vacant stare find room where there is none. They erowd the working space of the gripman — an imposing athlete who needs a lot of room and muscle to operate the long levers and jump fiercely on the foot brake.

Nothing could be blander than the men who turn the cars around on a wooden platform at the ends of the lines. The cars can actually be turned by one person.

But at the Market Street turntable, where the traffic is heavy and confusing, FOUR qualified technicians put their backs wearily against the rear of the car, brace their feet and shove the car up the track to the point where the slapping cable provides motive power.

No expression appears on their faces UNLESS a curvaceous blonde happens to dash for the ear, where in the process of running, one of her shoes usually gets caught in the rails, whence she twists her ankle, whence the four men gallantly rush forth to aid the distressed.

If it isn't a blonde, then it's the inevitable tourist with his $7.98 camera posing in front of the cable car, or a LOL trying to get on or off — and one knows how slow LOL's can be!

The humor that the cable ear furnishes started when someone imagined that surface cars could be operated on hills with the frightening grades of Nob and Russian.

He was a Scotsman, Andrew Hallidie, who nearly a century ago saw a horsecar accident on Nob Hill. The weight of the ear and passengers dragged the horses and the eable car down the hill. In 1872 Hallidie received a franchise to build the first cable car railway in the world. By 1873 he had done it.

In view of the dignified style of the institution, it is now pleasant to hear that no two cars are alike. All have been repaired so many times by different persons over 60 years that the original design has been lost.

It can now be reliably reported that the cable car has been accepted. Last week a conductor politely helped aboard a woman with a baby in a go-cart. There was no room for them inside, but that's where they stayed.

On Hyde street, an amateur photographer risked his life by kneeling in the midst of traffic to get those so-called "vivid action shots" of a cable car cautiously grinding downhill. The result: a five-car pile up.

Students Flunk Statue Exam

Leonardo da Vinci and Thomas Edison are great men in print, but in the form of statues they are virtually unknown, at least here.

Take the two statues on Science Hall's east side. Not many students in the college can identify them.

Last week a Guardsman reporter, posted in the area between Science and Cloud Halls, asked 50 students, "Who are the two statues in the rear of the Science Hall?".

Only 10 knew da Vinci, 12 knew Edison; and as a pair, they were recognized by only six. "Aristotle was taken for da Vinci nine times, and Isaac Newton was taken for Edison ten times.

Sixteen replied, "I don't know," and five of them did not even care to guess. Only 20 wrong-guessers were curious enough to ask if they were wrong.

Here are examples of some of the answers: "Aristotle and Bacon," "Hippocrates and Newton," "Socrates and Jefferson," "Galileo and Newton," "Never mind, I've changed my mind," "? and Jefferson" "Aristotle and Freud."

For the record, Edison is on the north, da Vinci on the south.

'Beggar On Horseback' Opens

Performances Run Through May 9; Kaufman-Connelly Play Boasts Cast Of 40

As the climax to the drama department's month-long preparation, Beggar On Horseback opens at 8 p.m. tonight in the first of four performances scheduled each night through Saturday in the theater.

Walter Krumm, director of the production, speaking for the cast and the crew, said, "It's a sensational show and perhaps the biggest thing that has hit the college in recent years."

Veterans of previous productions here, now cast as leads in Beggar, also expressed their views of the Kaufman-Connelly play.

Ken Bachtold, portraying a pianist, Neil McCrea, said, "It's really fun to do. It's probably one of the only popular expressionistic comedies around."

Bachtold, who was last seen here as the middle-aged husband in Tartuffe, also added, "It's good to appear in a young role for a change."

Andrea Fulton, playing Cynthia Allison, the girl across the hall from Neil, also appeared in Tartuffe.

Miss Fulton prefers the opening and closing scenes, because they are the "only realistic segments of the play."

Bill Gamble, who played the title role in Tartuffe, portrays four characters in Beggar, a businessman, artist, juror and dancing teacher. In addition, he designed the sets for this production.

"The sets were immensely challenging, and I feel that the challenge has been met as efficiently as possible," Gamble commented. "My biggest problem was time," he added.

Gamble has been painting backstage sets for weeks now and worked Saturdays to complete the sets.

Technical director Vic Vaio also aids in instruction of a stagecraft class here. He adjusts lights, raises and lowers scenery sets and generally "helps everyone out."

Leon Moniot will play the role of Dr. Albert Rice, a friend of Neil.

Two roles in the Cady family, into which Neil marries, are carried by college acting veterans, Penny Klahn as Mrs. Cady, and Al Hughes as Mr. Cady.

Barbara Burrus appears as Gladys Cady, and Con Walsh portrays sickly Homer Cady.

Joan Grant and Lynette Fishel play tripie roles, while Mike Dobrinski portrays five characters. The trio has appeared in productions here recently.

Approximately 30 minor roles will be played by student actors Jim Smith, Bill Rice, Mohammed Kowsar, Dodd De Long, Louis Silberman, Sandra Turner and Franklin Gordon.

Other members of the cast are Tony Bright, Bill Louthan, Bob Stillman, George Del Rio, Bob Salolunado, Bert Fannlin, Emil Cas, David Newman and Ann Weill.

Admission to the play is free to Associated Student cardholders. General admission is $1, and director Krumm said curtain time is 8 p.m. sharp each performance.

Horticulturists Win $600 For Japanese Display

A 1000-square foot outdoor display, depicting a Japanese garden scene, won $600 last month for the college Horticulture Society's entry in the annual California Spring Garden Show in Oakland.

A second entry, also made by students in the department, this one of a small bamboo tree specimen, brought the college a first place in that division and with it a blue ribbon and a $20 check.

Money realized from the awards will go toward the purchase of new equipment for the department, Horticulture Society President Rod Bagnall said today.

"The japanese garden display was the product of student work started at the beginning of this semester. Several plans were drawn and student votes determined the plan to be followed. A consideration in the choice was the show's overall theme.

A contract was signed between the college department and the directors of the Garden Show prior to competition, Bagnall explained.

Students who prepared the Japanese garden scene, in addition to Bagnall, were James Delfino, Kenneth Hoppe, John Fiobir, William Jones, Harold Hong, Eric Edwards, Larry McDougald, Paul Connoily, Richard Landrum, Bob Heitmeyer and Keith Jongeward.

In past years, students in the horticulture department have always won top honors in local garden shows. The California Spring Garden Show was held at the Oakland Exposition building.

Harry E. Nelson is faculty sponsor of the Horticulture Society here.

Student To Teach Saber Technique

Three lessons in the basic techniques of saber fencing are presently being offered to all interested men students who have had previous foil experience, Lene Johnson, Fencing Club adviser, announced recently.

The first of the three lessons was given yesterday in the women's gymnasium. Tuesday, May 12 and Tuesday, May 19 are the next scheduled lessons. They will begin at 11 a.m.

Acting as instructor will be Ben Bartholomew, recent winner of the Western Intercollegiate Saber title.

"This is a chance two-year college students rarely get," Bartholomew said, adding, "This type of instruction is usually carried on at the university level."

Bartholomew also announced that an intramural foil meet is scheduled during College Hour tomorrow in the womens' gymnasium. All students, both men and women, who have had fencing experience are invited to attend the competition.

Purpose of the meet is to decide who is the best foil fencer at City College, Bartholomew said.

AGS Study Clinic To Resume Next Semester

Although discontinued this semester, the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society's study clinic is expected to be resumed starting in the fall, William Richardson, AGS sponsor, announced this week.

To support the clinic's ideas, members of the honor society here are still offering tutoring to students in need of such academic help. Maximum cost for this coaching service, according to Richardson, is $1.50 per hour.

Planned for next semester are four to six sessions of the study clinic, probably during successive College Hours. Richardson stated that he felt last semester's series of clinics was "fairly successful."

McCloud Issues Fall Registration Dates And Times

Registration dates and numbers for next semester were made available to students and counselors last week.

Counselor Walter McCloud explained the registration procedure as being based upon seniority and the grade-point averages which determine the day and time of registration.

Fall registration times are as follows: 2899 students will register the first day, Tuesday, September 8, with numbers 1 to 599 starting at 10 a.m.; 600-1099 at 10:30; 1100-1699 at 11; 1700-2099 at 1 p.m.; 2100-2299 at 1:30; 2300-2499 at 2:00, and 2500-2899 at 2:30.

September 9, Admission Day, is a holiday.

Registration resumes on Thursday, September 10, with numbers 2900-3299 at 8 a.m.; 3300-3699 at 8:30; 3700-4099 at 9; 4100-4399 at 9:30; 4400-4499 at 10; 4500-4599 at 10:30, and 4600-4690 at 11.

Starting at 1 p.m. are 4700-4899; 4900-5099 at 1:30 p.m.; 5100-5299 at 2; 5300-5399 at 2:30, and 5400-5463 at 3 p.m.

McCloud stressed the importance of keeping counseling appointments. Failure to do so could mean programming during the summer, he said.

College Receives Award By SCTA

The Student California Teachers Association last week awarded City College a certificate for outstanding membership during the annual executive council meeting, held in the Statler Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles.

Delegates to the conference, Bernard Llacuna, local SCTA chapter president; Ted Hodahl, treasurer, and faculty adviser Bev Pasqualetti, were flown to Los Angeles with all expenses paid by the association to represent the campus chapter.

A total of 175 students from two and four-year colleges attended the two-day meeting in which advisers and future teachers held conferences.

Guest speakers were Dr. Robert N. Bush, chairman, National Commission on Teacher Education, and Dr. Frederick Mayer, professor at the University of Redlands.

"The SCTA membership," Llacuna stated, "totals approximately 121 students on campus, but only two students were chosen to attend the conference.

"Our committees have been hoping to increase the number of education classes in the two-year colleges," he explained. Among the colleges with new education classes are San Francisco, San Mateo, Modesto Junior College, Monterey Peninsula College and Sierra College.

"We believe that the SCTA and the new classes that we have helped introduce will be of great value to two-year college students preparing for careers as teachers," Llacuna commented.

British Writer Stokes Tells Of Effect Of Split In Communist World On College Generation

By Bea Takeuchi

Donald Stokes, head of the British Information Services in San Francisco, discussing communism and free enterprise here last Thursday, told students, "The biggest single factor facing your generation today is the fact that the Communist World is split in two. This will affect your lives."

His appearance was sponsored by the college's International Relations Club.

Stokes believes that the cause for the split is internal stress within Russia and Red China between the older, more mature Communists and the younger, idealistic Communists.

"Communism isn't paying off in Russia, in material or artistic terms. Communism has failed in its long term in Russia, and its short term in China," he emphasized.

"The big danger today is that they are unleashing some aggression and trying to grab power from others. The Red Chinese may launch a nasty war on India.

"At the moment, Red China is only a serious threat in the conventional sense, and not in the nuclear sense," Stokes said.

He referred to the trouble spots in the world, and indicated that in comparison "the poorest Americans are better off, since they can afford to spend more money on liquor than for education, and more money on lawn seed than for cancer research.

"Most persons have the idea that the rest of the world is catching up with America. The truth," Stokes believes, "is that the gap between the haves and the have-nots is increasing tremendously.

"The solution," he proposed, "is for the world to provide a way to release power, energy and food to have-not nations, so that these countries will not become aggressive and make war.

"I believe America has done as much as she honestly can, and it's up to the rest of Europe, such as Germany, to take up the burden."

Indian Speaker Tells Of Friction Over Land Titles

By Don Patten

The Hoopa Valley Reservation, home of the Yurok Indian Tribe, was split in two in 1949 by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and since that time, problems of land ownership between the American Indian and the federal government have developed.

H. D. Williams, an American Indian and guest speaker at the college last week, quoted the federal government as saying, "If the Indians don't conform to the split, they will not be recognized as citizens of this country."

Williams added that before the federal government would recognize the Indians as citizens, they would have to consent to live under federal jurisdiction. This meant that Indians could accomplish nothing without federal approval.

All minority groups in the nation have representatives in government except the American Indian, and the Indian, according to Williams, is represented only by the head of the Department of the Interior, Stewart L. Udall.

Williams said that as the Presidency changes every four (or eight) years, so do the methods of American-Indian government.

After the split-up in 1949, Williams explained that there was a problem of getting his tribe back on its rightful land. "The problem was taken to the government in Washington which said that the case should not go to court but be made a piece of legislation."

With legislative problems, the case must go to Congress to be voted on before it is passed.

A Relocation Plan was devised to "get Indians off the reservation," Williams emphasized. A family of nine Indians from South Carolina was sent to California with $1700 and jobs waiting for them.

When they arrived, there was no job. The Indian family went to the Bureau of Indian Affairs and was told to find their own way home.

Williams declared, "It is our hope that all Americans, no matter what their race, color or creed, will recognize one another as equals."

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

UNDER the assumption that all students enjoy extracurricular activities, it is also safe to assume that if they are normal, one of their favorite pleasures is eating!

Actually, there is nothing wrong with this pastime, in fact, if pursued in moderation, it can develop into a fascinating and amusing art.

Surely at one time or another, every student has found himself intrigued by the grace with which an Oriental manipulates his chopsticks through a full course meal.

And if humor is what a student is after, what can be more amusing than to watch an amateur trying to imitate this feat with all the unpleasant, ungraceful and frustrating side effects which are bound to result!

In an effort to awaken the over-fed college student, it may prove interesting to analyze the different types of eaters. However, it must be assumed from the start that there are several categorics into which a student may fit.

First, the anxious eater! He is usually characterized by the breakneck speed in which he consumes his food and hurriedly goes back for second helpings. This type of eater is a thorn in the cook's side. After slavishly working to prepare the meal, inside of a few minutes there is scarcely any evidence to indicate she has cooked at all!

Second, the cautious eater! Bless his heart, he chews every piece of meat 32 times and manages to drag out the meal so that when he finishes, it's almost time to sit down and start all over again!

Third, the polite eater! Regardless of what is served, or how it is prepared, he'll eat it and will usually top off the meal with a very, very polite "Thank you!"

Fourth, the picky eater! Even the chef at the Americana Hotel couldn't possibly please him. Whatever is served is either too hot, too eold, too lean, too tough or too something. This fellow is rarely given a second invitation; in fact, he is lucky to see this one through!

Fifth, the self-conscious eater! Afraid that everyone is looking at him, he puts very small amounts of food on his plate so that he may finish the ordeal faster, and never, although he is starving, will he go back for seconds!

Sixth, the perpetual eater! Here is the eater who just won't go home until he has made sure there isn't one morsel of food left in the house. He particularly presents a problem for the persons who enjoy eating left-overs!

Seventh, the etiquette-conscious eater! He sits at the table and quotes Emily Post until you are convinced he has memorized every book she has written, and then cleverly manages not to practice what he's preached — for the past two hours!

Eighth, the uninvited eater! The last type of eater is suffering from the illusion that everyone likes him, so he casually drops in just about dinner time and hangs around until there's nothing left to do but ask him to stay. And stay he does, until it's time to do the dishes. (If a person owns a dishwasher, then it's not really too great a loss.)

Perhaps, students pride themselves on not fitting into any category, but if this is so, it's because they are not being honest, or they plain don't eat!

Food for thought: Next time a dinner invitation rolls your way, stop and think. Are you the cook's pet or pest! But then, which students are receiving dinner invitations these days? The ones who just met the only daughter of the household?

Tennis Team Splits Championships

Rams Hand Comets Seventh Straight Loss In 9-5 Win

The Contra Costa Comets posed little threat to the Ram baseball nine last Tuesday as San Francisco handed them their seventh straight loss, 9-5.

The Ram season record moved to 9-10 as the win pushed them into fifth place in the Golden Gate Conference.

Hurler Ken Dyer took the win for the locals after his six and a third inning appearance, on which he was charged with all five Comet runs. Brad Rohback, the Ram's top mound ace, came on in relief to preserve the win for Dyer.

The Comets jumped off to an early lead with two in the first, but the Rams matched the feat in their half of the inning to tie the score at 2-2.

Henry Scott opened with a single and scored on Mike Dunne's two bagger. Dunne came home on Buteh Bussanick's single to left.

San Francisco added a run in the third, two in the fourth, and another in the fifth, as the Comets continued to hang up goose-eggs.

In the Ram fourth, Dyer helped his own winning cause as he doubled home Don Kunkle, aboard via a walk. Pete Giovanola and Scott then hit consecutive singles to drive in one run each.

The Comets rallied for three in the seventh and sent Dyer to the showers as the score closed to 6-5, Rams. But San Francisco got to the Comets in the same inning for three more runs on a single hit.

Jim Brown, on second by way of a fielder's choice and a base on balls, scored on second baseman Gus Geraldi's cluteh single. With two on and one down, San Francisco worked the Comet hurler for three walks in a row and two runs.

"We've played pretty good ball lately," Coach Ernie Domecus said, "but it hasn't done us much good because our wins came too late."

In other action around the conference, third-place Foothill downed the conference's only pennant contender, Chabot College, to elinch the league crown for San Jose.

After the game the Rams were six games behind San Jose.

Netters Take Third Title With 4-3 Foothill Win

City College netters reached the summit of success last Wednesday when they squeaked by the Foothill College Owls, 4 to 3, to capture their third successive conference tennis championship.

The victory increased the Rams' winning streak to 21 consecutive matches over the three-year period. Furthermore, in the four previous years, the netmen have lost only three meets out of 24.

In the past seven years, Ram tennis teams have won five championships with their first championship coming in 1958.

In the San Francisco-Foothill classic, played at Golden Gate Park under overcast skies, the matches went right down to the wire with the Rams' undefeated doubles team, Ben Levy and Fred Suessman smothering Barry Rapazo and Larry Rogers, 6-3, 6-2, in the deciding match.

In the first two matches, Owls Rodney Kop and Dale McGowan gave tangible proof that they are two of the top tennis players in the state by downing their rivals Vince Chinn and Levy with duplicate 6-2, 6-2, decisions.

Then the tide changed in favor of the Rams when Mike Price, substituting for the injured Al Brambila, handed in a 6-4, 6-1 singles victory over Jerry Wisnia. Coach Roy Diederichsen called this match "the key victory of the day."

Suessman followed up Price's win with a 6-4, 7-5 triumph at the expense of Rapazo.

Possibly what was the most nerve-racking match of the day was the last and decisive singles match between Lou Englestein and Larry Rogers.

The first two sets were split, and the third set went to Englestein 6-4, thus giving the Rams the 3-2 edge in the singles. —By M. S.

Foothill Stops Racqueteers In Conference Tournament

The Ram Racqueteers placed a strong second behind the Foothill Owls in last Saturday's Golden Gate Conference Tennis Tournament on the College of San Mateo courts.

The Rams nearly won the doubles elimination championship and the meet as the local netters two doubles teams, Vince Chinn-Lou Englestein and Fred Suessman-Ben Levy, went into the semi-finals.

In the first of the two semifinal matches played at the conference meet, Chinn and Englestein upset doubles favorites Reed and Bryant of San Mateo 6-4, 6-2. The two Ram netmen then went into the finals in quest of the number one spot, but instead met defeat at the hands of Rodney Kop and Dale Maegowan of Foothill.

Underdogs Levy and Suessman went into the second semi-finals match with the possibility of meeting their teammates for the finals. But they had to get by Kop and Maegowan. They lost their chances in the third set when the Owls stopped them 6-1.

The San Franciscans finished a respectable third in the singles championships. Although they did not place anyone in the semi-finals, three Rams placed in the quarter rounds, just before the semi's.

It was in this round that Levy was defeated by Saputo of Diablo Valley 6-2, 8-6. Chinn was upset by Reed 6-8, 6-2, 8-6; and Fred Suessman was topped 6-3, 6-0 by Chabot's Coover.

Mike Price did not go as far as his teammates did, but he gave Dennis Lang of Contra Costa a real battle in his 11-9, 6-4 loss.

Kop and Macgowan took the one-two honors in the singles. Bryant, Reed and Saputo were close behind. Before the tournament, all but Saputo were rated to finish in that order.

The doubles were expected to finish somewhat like this: Bryant-Reed, Kop-Macgowan, Kiss-Vargas, and Chinn and Englestein. Instead it turned out Kop-Maegowan, Chinn-Englestein, Reed-Bryant, and Levy-Suessman.

Upsets Give Spikers Third Place In Golden Gate Meet

By Fred Wales

Blazing the upset trail, the Ram spikers qualified nine men for the Northern California meet trials next Tuesday at Modesto as they placed a surprising third in the Golden Gate Conference meet last Saturday at San Jose City College.

This was the first time this long season that the Rams were at full strength as muscle pulls and the flu had kept Lou Vasquez's eindermen at half strength.

Pat Lewis lead the Ram onslaught as he took two firsts in the field events. His heave of 152-3 captured the discus and the shot soared 51-3½.

The first of the day's upsets came in the 440-yard relay as Oliver Mitchell, Vern Bradford, Paul Richard and Tom Gardner despite some sloppy passes managed a third place with a swift time of 42.9 seconds.

In the 100-yard dash Gardner had a 9.7 clocking in the trials but could only muster a 10.1 in the finals as teammate Bradford edged him for sixth place with a 10 flat.

The biggest upset of the day came in the 880 as Rams Chris Ferrigno and Ozzie Norris sped to a one-two finish with times of 1:55.5 and 1:55.6 respectively. Ferrigno had been out with the flu and was picked for seventh or eighth.

In the 220 Gardner dashed to a third place finish with his 22.3 mark trailed by Richard who placed sixth with 22.7.

Gene Plotkin recorded a new school mark in the two mile of 9:33.3 for a second place. Plotkin broke Hall of Famer Don Patten's 9:35 clocking set in 1958.

The mile relay was the final upset as Norris, Gardner, Ferrigno and Rod Coleman were clocked in 3:24.3 for a fourth place.

Swimmers Sixth In Conference

Capping a winless season, the Ram swim team placed sixth in the Golden Gate Conference meet April 24-25 at College of San Mateo pool.

Defending champion Foothill won the meet with 188½ points, followed by surprisingly improved San Mateo with 91, Oakland-59½, San Jose-46½, Chabot-23 and San Francisco-9½.

Four of the Rams' points came the first day of competition when Bob Barnes, Brian Edie, Rich Gray and Fred Wales combined for a fifth place in the 400 yard medley relay with a 4:15.5 clocking.

In Saturday's events, Edie led the Ram point gathering with a fifth place in the 100-yard breaststroke event, posting a time of 1:11.9. Gray followed this with a fifth place tie in the 100-yard butterfly as he posted a new Ram mark of 57.9 in the event.

The Rams' final two points came in the 400-yard freestyle relay, as Barnes, Wales, Dennis Harley and Edie registered a 3:52.4 time for a sixth place.

Several Rams just missed scoring points by placing seventh. Barnes recorded seventh in the 200 and 100-yard backstroke as did Gray in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle and Edie in the 200-yard freestyle.

Although the San Franciscans placed sixth, their times were from one to four seconds faster than last year when the Rams managed a third in the meet.

The medley relay is an example. Last year the Ram time of 4:19 was good enough for a third place tie, while this year it rated them fifth.

RA To Attend Sports Day In Monterey Saturday

The Recreation Association plans to participate in the Monterey Sports Day Saturday, in which ten colleges will participate in various sports activities.

At an RA Sports Day held at Oakland City College April 25, San Francisco coed Pam Maul bowled 168, placing first in the women's high game. She won another first for the women's high series.

Louis Chung placed second in badminton men's singles and also in the doubles with Don Peterson.

The RA volleyball team took second place and Alex Volikovsky was named best player.

RAMBLINGS

New Rulings Drown Sinking Aquateers

By Fred Wales

YEAR AFTER year the plight of the Ram swimmers is expounded with the hope that the situation will brighten. However, this year quite the opposite occurred as two new rulings sank the local aquateers.

The first was the new Golden Gate Conference ruling which stated that the team could not begin practice until the beginning of the Spring semester in February.

This ruling was put into effect to take the pressure off the swimmers who compete in water polo in the fall and then swim in the spring. It was thought that the rule would provide swimmers a few months off for academic work and a rest from swimming itself.

Although this program may have helped the other colleges, for the Rams, who don't have water polo, it was fatal.

Coach Roy Burkhead states it thusly: "I fought the ruling from the beginning, because I knew it would kill our chances. Without water polo the only way I've been able to make up for all the practice time lost in the fall was to start my swimmers early in January."

The second was an ultimatum delivered to the swimmers at the beginning of the season from the San Francisco Park and Reereation Department.

In the past the swimmers were allowed entrance to McLaren Pool at 2:30 p.m. five days a week.

This year something new was added — Wilson High School's swim team and Girls' Athletic Association.

As a result, Ram swimmers were allowed in the water at 3 p.m. some days and 3:30 p.m. others and had to be out of the pool at 5 p.m.

What all this meant was that the Rams started practicing in February in three lanes of McLaren Pool with 10 swimmers for an hour and a half.

Burkhead estimated that these rulings cost each swimmer 90 hours swimming time or 45 miles of practice.

These headaches were added to Burkhead's previous handicaps of no pool, water polo, swim programs or adjusted practice schedules.

When asked about the future, Burkhead stated he believes the situation can "only get worse." With the addition of the new rulings and the growth of particiapation in high school water sports, more time will be lost next year than ever before.

Burkhead declared that the only hope for the swimmers here is that the four-year colleges and universities will eliminate lower division courses and someday soon after, enough people will "complain" and the college will have its own pool.

As it stands, it looks as though next year, again, the swim team will have to break the college's records in order to take last place.

Guardsman Does It Again With 74-15 Win Over Skiers

Continuing last week's winning streak, The Guardsman "avalanched" the Ram Ski Club, 74-15, last Tuesday night in the Associated Men Student intramural competition.

The fumbling hands of the Ram Ski Club team led The Guardsman's Bob Siegan to post 17 points, although skier Ray Holstead hit 12 points.

Hotel and Restaurant beat the Lutheran Club, 49-36, as Mark White mounted 23 digits, while Phil Wuerstle totaled 21 points for the losers.

Downing the Hawaiian club, 48-26, the Filipino Club racked up another win, as Bernie Piper and Will Fox shared the Filipino high score honors with 12 points each.

In Fraternity league activity, Alpha Kappa Rho topped Alpha Sigma Delta 35-29, as 'Big' John Wallace scored 11 points for the winners.

The Divine Ones and the Devinessians, both in the independent league, remain undefeated after six weeks of play. The Divine Ones burned the Allis, 96-40, and the Devinessians romped over the Saxons, 64-25.

The Devinessian's Alvin Nisby totaled 23 points, while Jim Brughelli scored 8 for the Saxons.

For the Divine Ones, last semester's independent league champs and undefeated so far this season, high scorer was Avery Carter, who burned the court for 27 points and Wharton Brown who contributed 23 points.

Coming ahead in the last half of the game, the NBA Rejects edged the Criminology Department, 24-21, as Frank Bajza shot 12 of the Rejects' points and Mike Brush made 6 points for the Criminology Dept.

In tonight's independent league competition, which will be the last before playoffs next week, the Anonymous face the NBA Rejects, the Criminology Dept. shoots against the Saxons, and the two undefeated teams, The Divine Ones and the Devinessians, meet.

Linkers End Season With Loss To Jags

San Francisco's one-win golfers, by now out of Golden Gate Conference competition, were handed their fifth loss two weeks ago by the San Jose Jaguars, 20-10.

San Francisco might have won if Pete Eden's back injury hadn't forced him out of the competition. It is not yet known whether he will start in the Rams' remaining conference match for this season.

Jim Schroder was the only Ram who defeated his opponent: He shot a 75, outscoring Jaguar Randy Astrelia's 81.

Mike Soden, Mike Selsnik and Mike Moore lost their matches to Gil Bennet, Pat Reday and Dave Bell 81-89, 83-85, and 83-88, respectively.

San Jose's Andy Pupach shot an 82 in the last round against the injured, non-partiecipating Eden.

The Golden Gate Conference tournament in Castlewood is now in process. The purpose of the tournament is to choose contestants for the State tournament to be held on May 18.

The tournament will be a team-individual affair based on conference records.

Grasso Places Third In Art Competition

Joe Grasso, an engineering major who entered twelve art pieces in the Contra Costa College Arts Festival sponsored by the Golden Gate Presidents' Conference won third place in the art contest.

In competition with 28 other student artists from Contra Costa, Foothill and Oakland City Colleges, The Snake Charmer, Grasso's one-foot sculpture, won him $10 in the May 2 art exhibit.

Painted to resemble a man's face, The Snake Charmer is composed of a type of seaweed which looks like a shriveled onion head.

Determined to win something in the contest, Grasso also submitted two oil paintings, one of Christ and one of a tiger, in the canvas judging and a trick shot of an animal with the head of a giraffe and the body of a rhinoceros in the potography competition and others.

Another sculpture was entered also, that of a kiwi bird made of a doorknob and a shoe horn.

Grasso admits, however, that he had hoped one of his paintings would win an award or an honorable mention, if anything, since he was not satisfied with The Snake Charmer.

"The main things the judges were looking for were originality and the motivation behind the work," Grasso commented.

A third semester student here and a graduate of Lowell High School, he is working toward a future position in aeronautical machine design with a sideline in technical illustration.

This is not the first time Grasso has placed in an art contest; while in high school, he placed sixth in the nation in a poster contest.

Enrolled now in a basic drawing course, his instructor is Carl Beetz.

Other students who entered the contest from this college are Carole Bargagliotti, Ellen Boyers, Louis Cataffo, Bernard Lias, Pat Mathes, Carlos Norales, Gary Sellars and Hershel Tribbett.

The conference established the contest in order to bring the member colleges together through joint participation in the project, to enable students to exhibit their work and to discover what other students are doing.

AS Office Moves To Bungalow Site In Summer Break

Associated Student offices on the first floor of Science Hall will be moved during the summer to Bungalow 5 and 6, located behind Cloud Hall.

Reason for the move, according to administrative announcement, is to provide additional space for classrooms and equipment in the college's rapidly expanding dental technology training program.

Bob Roddick, AS president, today expressed hope that the move would be speedy and completed before the Fall semester.

"Alterations, however, will be needed," he said, "and the wall dividing the bungalow into two sections can be torn down creating one large space for office and meeting use."

The shift to the bungalow is expected to be temporary. Plans for permanent location of AS offices are included in the proposed administrative building.

In 1940, the AS had its headquarters in S-169 and six years later made a move to the "greener pastures" of the west campus. They remained there for nine years until in 1955 they returned to S-169, which before their return was the location of a telephone for faculty use.

Three moves later, the AS office is now in S-134.

Coeds Share Scottish Rite Grant; Feldman Cops Lesser

Of four scholarships awarded to students here last week, three went to coeds, and three winners are graduates of George Washington High School.

Jennifer Cole, Barbara Roberts and Marilyn Erkkila each won a California Scottish Rite Scholarship. The three will receive a grant of about $150 each for their efforts.

Bernard J. Feldman was awarded the Lucille Lesser Scholarship; he will receive $125 a semester while at City College and $250 a semester while continuing his upper division courses.

Miss Cole was graduated from Washington with a B plus average.

She is studying medical assisting here in order to work in that field while pursuing her English major. Miss Cole intends to transfer to the University of California.

Miss Roberts was active in student government while at Mission High School and was president of California Scholarship Federation. She too plans to transfer to UC and major in biological science.

Miss Erkkila, another Washington graduate, has managed a high grade point average while working part time for Chicken Delight and will transfer to UC.

Feldman, third Washington graduate, is majoring in mathematics.

Dean of Women Mary Golding stated that the "Scottish Rite scholarship is usually granted to four students annually but because of a tie for fourth place this year, the scholarship was presented to three students."

She added that because students competing for the fourth Scottish Rite scholarship had equal first midterm grades, second midterm grades will determine the winner of the fourth scholarship.

The Lucille Lesser scholarship is stretched over a four-year period. To qualify for the award, a student must be a United States citizen and a male graduate of a San Francisco high school with at least a 'B' average.

Lighting Ceases As Blown Fuses Black Out Campus

The lights went out on campus May 4, for a while at least, when two fuses blew, causing a fire in the Science Hall fuse box, halting electric power, threatening performances of Beggar On Horseback and completely stopping photography department operation.

The fire was caused by a chain of events, Fred Freerks, electrical engineering major here, explained.

"There was a short in the transformer in the basement of Cloud Hall," he said, "and when it shorted it released 1200 volts into the ground. This started the electrical fire in the Science Hall fuse box, the campus power center."

The shorted fuses served as a safety measure, protecting the rest of the circuit, Freerks stated.

When the power went off, at 3:40 p.m., Freerks and engineering instructor Angelo Bertucci went to the fuse box, discovered smoke and fire, which Bertucci quickly extinguished.

School department authorities dispatched an emergency stand by generator.

With the light produced by this generator alone, electricians labored to repair the damage in the fuse box.

As darkness approached and evening fell, night classes migrated from Science and Cloud Halls to the arts building.

Drama students, about to begin a dress rehearsal for last week's production, Beggar On Horseback, used candles and flashlights in the theater workshop.

At 7:40 p.m. a test of the repair was made, which proved successful. Full power was restored by Thursday.

Deadline To File Leave Of Absence This Friday

Deadline to file an official leave of absence from the college is this Friday, according to Registrar Mary Jane Learnard.

Students who may be forced to withdraw from all their classes this semester are urged to confer with their counselors for full particulars early since several signatures are necessary before the leave may be recorded at the registrar's office.

Withdrawal from classes without an official leave will result in a student receiving "F" grades in all courses undertaken this semester, Miss Learnard explained.

Bulletin Board Reveals A Story Of Tragic Love

Somewhere, presumably still on campus, is a coed named Gloria who, one year ago this month, met a young man in the Cloud Hall library.

Since that time, the young student has only seen Gloria from a distance and has not been able to communicate with her. He last saw her during lunch hour February 18 in the cafeteria.

Last week, in an effort to reach Gloria, he posted an appeal on — of all places — the college's bulletin board in Science Hall under the heading, "miscellaneous."

It asked Gloria to let him see her again because he had a letter he wanted to deliver to her.

What the young Romeo failed to do, though, was sign his name to the three by five index card to tell Gloria (should she see the note) how to reach him.

It is doubtful if this story will ever have a happy ending.

Ettin, Kaufman Seek Top Slot In AS Elections Set Next Tuesday, Wednesday

By Charlotte Wong

Voting for Associated Student officers for the Fall semester is scheduled for next Tuesday and Wednesday, with Sophomore Class President Gary Ettin and Associated Men Student President Roger Kaufman competing for the presidential post.

Because candidates for the other AS offices were in the process of filing petitions, a complete slate of names was unavailable at the time The Guardsman went to press.

The voting precincts will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. and will be located in the arts building, Library, Science Hall, Smith Hall and the two gymnasiums.

Voting machines will not be used because they will be needed for the state primary elections, Commissioner Paul Coke stated.

To run for office a presidential candidate must have at least 42 and not more than 60 units completed and a grade point average of at least 2.3.

Students voting in the elections will also have an opportunity to vote on four amendments to the Associated Student Constitution.

Amendments one and four establish the offices of Cultural Affairs Coordinator and High School Liaison Officer.

The former would supervise the Concert-Leeture Series and represent student cultural activities and interests at Student Counell meetings.

It would be the duty of the High School Liaison Officer to carry out "such programs as shall interest and inform high school students in the academic and extracurricular activities of the college."

To strengthen the Council of Organizations, Amendment 2 proposes that the Chairman of COO be the AS Vice President and that the Social Committee be abolished and its duties to set up a social calendar assigned to COO.

Through another revision in the constitution, the Associated Men Student and Associated Women Student Presidents and the Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents would be made members of COO.

Another amendment proposes the change of a candidate requirement from a 2.0 grade point average in the second midterm to the same average in the first midterm.

Crowning Of Queen Rosie Fang Begins World Trade Week

City College's Rosie Fang, recently chosen queen of Golden Gate World Trade and Travel Week, will be crowned by San Francisco Mayor John Shelley in opening ceremonies to be held next Monday at noon in Union Square.

Miss Fang was last semester's Associated Women Student President and is this semester's Publicity Committee Chairman.

Joyce Jansen, of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, announced that after the crowning of Miss Fang, Shelley will speak on the week's events.

The United States Coast Guard Band will supply music during the ceremonies.

Sid Caesar, star of the Broadway production, Little Me, which is eurrently playing at the Curran theater, will make an appearance, Miss Jansen said.

Virginia Martin, who plays opposite Caesar in the production, will also be present.

Miss Jansen added that the Borden Twins, a signing duet, will also provide entertainment.

Fashions of world travel, a show where native costumes will be displayed, will be emceed, as will the rest of the show, by Bill Hiekok of radio station KFRC.

The International Ball, highlighting the week's events, will be held at the Hotel Mark Hopkins in the Peacock Court and Champagne Room from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., Saturday, May 23.

Miss Jansen disclosed that Jan Berghout is chairman of the ball, Cal Moreland is chairman of the opening ceremonies in Union Square, and the Junior World Trade Association is sponsoring the ball and opening events.

Hampton Elmore is general chairman of the week's activities.

Folding Bleacher Injures Three At Blood Drive Rally

By Ann Weill and George Nelson

Three persons, two of them students here, were slightly injured last Thursday when one section of the bleachers in the men's gymnasium folded and collapsed during a College Hour Blood Drive rally.

The two students, Vickie Chapman and Lynn Arsanis, fell from the upper portion of the bleachers to the lower portion. Miss Arsanis' leg was bruised and ligaments were apparently torn in Miss Chapman's left knee.

Non-student member of the audience, Joe Lucido, sustained cuts and bruises of the right ankle.

Campus Police, on duty at the rally, gave first aid to the three until ambulance attendants from Alemany Emergency Hospital arrived. Those on the campus force who assisted were James Dean and David Kanisto.

Off-duty patrolman Paul Coke also gave first aid, as did Art Gershman.

Miss Chapman deseribed the accident as "completely unexpected. We fell all the way down."

The rally, sponsored by the Inter Fraternity Counell, featured Nooney Ricketts and his group, Comedy team Grecco & Willard, and singing group Saturday's Children. A crowd of approximately 1000 students witnessed the show.

They also heard an announcement that a resolution had been passed by the State Assembly congratulating the college, the Associated Student President and the IFC for their successful campus Blood Drives.

It was also announced that because of the college's blood donation record, San Francisco Mayor John Shelley had proclaimed May 7 and 8, Blood Days.

A sidelight of the rally occurred when a moved surfer was wiped out while doing the twist with Joni Lyman, singer and dancer with Ricketts and his group.

The student, known locally by the moniker, Surfer Joseph, was moved to dancing while the Nooney Ricketts group played its final number.

Surfer Joseph twisted across the basket court and dove onto the stage where Miss Lyman was "doing the twist." The Campus Police ushered Surfer Joseph out, to the roaring sound of "BOOOOOooooooooooo."

Miss Lyman, commenting on the episode, said, "That cute little surfer was a good dancer, but I'm grateful to the Campus Police. There would probably have been others following him."

Choral Concert In Theater For Two-Day Run

Four choral groups are scheduled to appear tomorrow during College Hour in the theater and at 8 o'clock Friday night in their annual Spring Concert, Galen Marshall, music instructor, declared last week.

Marshall added that featured in the program will be the A Cappella Choir, Chamber Choir, the Women's Choir and the Men's Glee Club.

The 50-member A Cappella Choir will be conducted by Marshall and accompanied by pianist Robert Sheldon from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music. Featured in the A Cappella Choir's program will be Haydn's Te Deum.

The Women's Choir, conducted by Richard Fenner, also of the music department, will present songs by Kodaly, Bartok, Britten and Persichetti.

Relatively Small Group Runs Associated Student Politics

WE DO NOT wish to compare the Associated Students with a fascist regime, but it is a well known fact that the politics around here are controlled by a very small minority of the total enrollment. These are the persons who vote in the student elections and put their candidates in office.

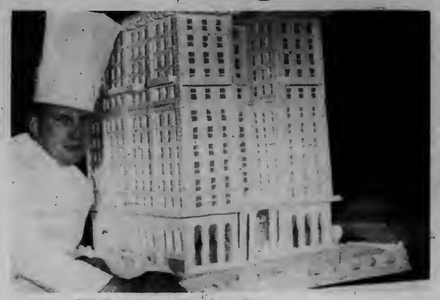
Nobody likes this situation, but nobody has yet come up with a reasonable plan to do away with it. Indifference is our enemy, and it is a very difficult enemy to combat. Elections are only one week away and, if we can judge from the past, about 90 per cent of the total eligible voters will be places other than the ballot box.

It takes no profound thinker to say that the solution to the problem of indifference is the stimulation of interest. There are various ways to do this. A good publicity campaign by a hopeful candidate will get him votes, but for the most part these votes are the ones that would have been cast in the election anyway. Actually, the thing we need to pep up our student elections is controversey.

But how can we have stormy controversies when all of our student candidates seem to think alike? About the only political platforms we get around City College are slogans like "More Leadership" or "Better Government" or other equally exciting phrases. If there should ~~happen~~ to be a difference of opinion, this is usually on some minor point about which the majority of the students could not care less.

A good clash of personalities would draw students to the polls, but for this to be effective the candidates would have to be known campus-wide on a personal basis. For an institution this size, a campaigning student would really have to get around.

We do not wish, however, to say that the blame for the poor campus turnouts in student elections should be placed on the very ones who are making an effort to keep student government a vital part of this college.



Granted, part of the problem lies with them, but most of the trouble is caused by the 90 per cent of the students who do not bother to take the time to cast a ballot.

At times it would appear that this larger group takes an interest in student government, but usually on a negative level. If a decision of council does not favorably affect them, they will be the first to criticize the present political setup. If they did not exercise their right to vote on campus, they should not exercise their right to critiicize the elected officers.

A poor choice of candidates is no excuse for anyone not voting. It is a simple matter to get a name on the student ballot. All the members of a dissatisfied group have to do is shop around for an eligible student who thinks the way they do.

In any group of political candidates for a student office, there is always an individual who can be considered the best choice. All any registered student on this campus is asked to do is to indicate at the polls next Tuesday or Wednesday who in his opinion is best choice.

Success Story Series

PROUD ARTIST ABOVE, AND HIS LATEST.

City College graduate in 1941, instructor Edward Nyland of the hotel and restaurant department stands by a replica of the 1904 St. Francis Hotel. He designed and made it out of 75 pounds of confectioner's sugar, in time for the hotel's 60th anniversary celebration.

"You have to be a little bit carpenter to build the bases out of wood; a little bit electrician, to wire the tiny electric lights, and something of a painter to blend the color — and also, something of a construction engineer to know where there will be stresses or strain, and where to brace it," Nyland said.

The sugar structure is acclaimed a masterpiece by leaders in the hotel-restaurant industry. It is currently on display at the St. Francis.

Change For A Dollar...?

Vanilla Tops Fudgesicles In Vending Machines Sales

The cry uttered most frequently in the basement of Science Hall at the site of those mechanical salesmen, the vending machines, is, "Does anybody have change for a dollar?"

Although eight machines are in operation at this location, students would still prefer one more—a change machine—over some of the other mechanized wonders that have been installed over the years.

During warm weather, a crowd gathers around the ice cream machine, where, according to alumnus Noble Chung, now supervisor of Bay Cities Vending Machines, vanilla bars are the favorite frozen delight.

Least popular are the Fudgesicles, but many brave souls still purchase a chocolate wonder even if it isn't favored.

Next to the ice cream there's a milk automat. Offering white and chocolate milk as well as orange juice, this machine is "called upon" to dispense many more cartons of both types of milk than orange juice per day.

The main problem with the carton dispenser is that it doesn't hand out straws.

The coke machine pours 250 to 300 partially-filled, "regularly"-filled, or overflowing soft drinks each day.

Prophets of doom and friendly neighborhood dentists call them "liquid candy makers," but of the three drinks sold, Coke outseils Sprite and grape drinks three to one.

Around the corner, candy machines solemnly stand, their mirrors reflecting famished students in the act of buying subsequently ingesting those extra calories, again to the horror of the same friendly neighborhood dentists.

The coffee machine offers thirsty quench-seekers five varieties — black, sugared, creamed, creamed and sugared, doubly creamed and sugared coffee and one type of hot chocolate.

To complete the scene, a lone cigarette machine displays a series of gaily-colored packages, each containing the ever-popular tobacco in a stick.

Patrons of this well-populated haunt change with the time of day. During the morning hours many students from classes in Cloud Hall prefer to stay on the hill and buy their coffee at the mechanized snack-bar instead of trotting to the cafeteria, downhill all the way.

The tide turns in the afternoon when white-coated science students take breaks from their laboratory classes.

Their only complaint is that most of them have a four flight walk back to their frogs, sharks, rats, or microscopes, but would doubtless be tempted to leave for the rest of the day if they had to trudge down the hill for something to eat.

So, until a change machine is installed, or a few vending machines are housed next to the formaldahyde and frogs, students will have to continue their chant to obtain that all-powerful dime, or bring some change of their own and start eating. —A. W.

Avant Guardsman!

By Michael Janicot

AMERICANS are suffering from a very strange disease: individualism. They claim their personal characteristics are strictly theirs — a vague notion of egoism, actually — by refusing to adapt to customs or clothing trends of what they call the masses.

They regard themselves as avant garde members, just because they read Buechner or Ionesco.

They proclaim their faith in individuality by growing beards, carrying Lord Russell's History Of Western Philosophy under their arms (mostly to impress people), and nonchalantly "discuss" Moravia, Beckett, Kafka and Camus. The majority smoke pipes.

Truly, we live in an age of warnings: don't drink more than a couple a day; don't drive without safety belts; don't overdo the calories. But the biggest "don't" seems to be don't smoke cigarettes because what tobacco does to your lungs shouldn't happen to a barrel of tar.

Nevertheless, Americans continue to use the soft weed, possibly because it's quieter than gum-chewing — considered passé — and tidier than whittling. But from our own observations, it appears that more and more so-called rugged individualists are taking up the pipe.

Smoking a pipe, however, is not the same as smoking cigars or cigarettes. With a cigar or cigarette, once it is lighted, the work is over. This is not true of a pipe. A pipe smoker's work is never done.

The man who decides to take up a pipe must first select the model that suits him best. It's something like picking out a new car, except that there are many more models to choose from.

Take a beginner in action at the office, for example. If he were to lean on the water-cooler and produce a curved-stem job with Beethoven's head carved on the bowl, the reaction would be immediate, and very likely, unkind.

The new pipe smoker will find that lighting a pipe is a long piece from smoking it. For instance, the fire must be tended constantly — an unceasing draft being essential — and even the odds favor the match companies.

This problem becomes even more complex if the novice pipe smoker selects a "rough-cut" tobacco. Whatever this term may mean to tobacconists, the result is a collection of large chunks of tobacco. The inexperienced smoker applying a match to the stuff, may find it a little like trying to start a fire with logs and no kindling.

And then there is the first taste of back-bite. This occurs when, in the midst of a particularly fragrant and ennobling puff, the tongue is suddenly shriveled by a drop of backsliding tobacco juice. The difference between this substance and carbolic acid is very small.

It is popularly believed that the pipe smoker is strong-minded and reflective.

The strong-mindedness myth developed because the pipe smoker usually has his teeth clenched, an act which squares the jaw and tends to rigidify certain head muscles. This gentle grimace may indicate firm determination and an iron will, or it may mean the smoker doesn't want the pipe to fall out of his mouth.

The reflectiveness myth is probably closer to fact. No man can smoke a pipe without reflecting upon the likely possibility that the pipe will suddenly decide to extinguish itself. To keep one match ahead of a pipe takes careful thought and the most measured respiration.

But all in all, there is nothing quite like a pipe. There is a genuine satisfaction in looking at a pipe that has just been cleaned ... while lighting up a cigarette, of course!

Literature Fan Finds Variety At Ramporium

Most students on campus visit the Ramporium only during the beginning of the semester to purchase the required books for their classes and do not return unless they lose a book or are in need of additional supplies.

In addition to selling standard text books, the Ramporium houses a variety of literature and interesting objects that cover a wide range of interests.

For discriminating off-beat readers, books may be purchased which cover subjects ranging from Egyptian Wall Painting to Russian Icons. These books are illustrated and pocket-size for ease of travel.

The reader who wishes to read Elizabethan dramas may purchase the old favorites such as Hamlet, Macbeth, Much Ado About Nothing and Richard II. All of these are published in a series for the marathon reader to enjoy.

There are books in the Ramporium that will also interest the movie-goer; books available include Dr. Strangelove, by Peter George; The List of Adrian Messenger, by Phillip Mac-Donald; Youngblood Hawke, by Herman Wouk; The Great Escape, by Paul Brickhill, The Prize by Irving Wallace, Lawrence of Arabia, by Anthony Nutting and the Agony and The Ecstasy, by Irving Stone.

For the neurotic, books are available entitled How To Stop Worrying and Start Living, by Dale Carnegie, Barbecue and Outdoor Cooking, the Handbook of Beauty, and a book on How To Sell Yourself To Others.

Of many other books of general interest, are those on golf, sewing, skin diving, etiquette, salesmanship and the anatomy of the dogfish shark.

To put an end to this seemingly endless list, the following odds and ends may be helpful to someone:

Data guides may be purchased which contain information about chemistry, basic chess and success at bridge; combs, wallets, greeting cards for every occasion, and CCSF window stickers, which are guaranteed to block the view of oncoming traffic.

This then indeed proves the Ramporium a host to every taste in reading material plus offering the unusual and unexpected in reading enjoyment.

Where else is there full information of the dogfish shark's anatomy?

Harassed Men In Blue —

Campus Police Buffer Against Utter Chaos

It seems that the age-old resentment toward the gendarme as demonstrated by the citizen is found here among the students.

The uniformed men who patrol the cafeteria are often confronted with such sarcastic remarks as "Hey, cop, arrest me, I'm wasting salt," or "Hey, flatfoot, lock me up, I broke a dish!"

These are just some of the provocations that tend to show that the "boys in blue" aren't exactly appreciated on campus.

Many students believe that, since the campus policemen are in reality just plain, every day students like themselves, they are not to be taken seriously.

There are also those who feel that the campus lawmen are just getting dressed-up and playing Halloween all year 'round.

Those who park their cars in the green ten minute zone for about an hour find themselves in the same frame of humor as the aforementioned campus policemen in the cafeteria. The shoe on the other foot does not always fit so well.

Although the students who do not comply with the parking regulations dislike paying the fines which accompany the tickets, they cannot seem to come up with the obvious solution to their problems. The rate of ticketing increases semesterly.

The police who prowl the campus parking lots actually prove much more valuable than most students are willing to realize or appreciate.

The presence of an officer has no doubt changed the mind of many a hopeful car thief or ear stripper who figured the pickings would be easy in these happy hunting grounds.

But these and many other good points of the force are often overlooked by students.

The men who are cast as villains of the campus are, for the most part, very serious students who are planning careers as law enforcement officers.

Contrary to what seems to be popular belief about campus, local policemen do not compete in intra-force contests to see which patrolman issues the most traffic citations in one day.

The Campus Police, unarmed but carrying a sharp pencil, may achieve a certain status amongst themselves by having the fastest pencil west of the Mississippi, but no statistics are available to support this theory.

The normal, everyday student may find many faults in the college's "boys in blue," but, like it or not, they are the only thing between a well regulated campus and utter chaos. The members of the force are not trying to win a popularity contest, but they do wish for the cooperation of the student body.

Policemen are not always the easiest people to get along with; but then again they can attest to the fact that neither are students always advocates of Dale Carnegie's philosophy.

Grad Interviews Set Today

Business Recruitment Men In Annual Visit To Campus

Prospective graduates in the college's business and engineering departments will be afforded individual interviews with employer representatives today in the ninth annual business-engineering recruitment day, with interviews scheduled from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Cloud Hall offices.

Joseph Amori, director of placement here and chairman of recruitment day, announced that California Packing Corporation will be honored by the college today for its outstanding efforts and cooperation in behalf of the college during the past 25 years.

Ruth Harper, manager of Personnel Operations for Cal-Pak, will be the guest of honor. Mrs. Harper is retiring after serving the company for 41 years.

More than 100 recruitment specialists, representing such fields as finance, airlines, retailing and merchandising, railroads, food processing, communications, missiles and space, insurance, construction, petroleum and government will interview graduates from the college's business and engineering programs.

Each recruiting team has been assigned private spaces for the interviewing, Amori said.

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will welcome the interviewing specialists on behalf of the college, and Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of schools, will present official greetings on behalf of the San Francisco Board of Education.

The day's activities will start with a breakfast, served by the personnel of the hotel and restaurant department, at 8 a.m. in the faculty dining room.

Firms with representatives here for the recruitment are:

California Packing Corporation, California State Automobile Association, Presidio of San Francisco, Crocker-Citizens National Bank, Fibreboard Paper Products Corporation, Levi Strauss & Company;

Joseph Magnin & Company, Pacific Gas & Electric Company, Selix Formal Wear, Social Security Administration, State Compensation Insurance Fund, Samuels Jewelers, U.C. Medical Center, San Francisco, Bank of America, The Emporium, Metropolitan Insurance Company;

Frosh Class-Built Bulletin Board Ready Next Week

Construction of a bulletin board, which will serve as an information center for students, will be completed by the end of next week, Terry Cloney, Freshman Class president who also drew the plans and is in charge of the project, announced yesterday.

The board is located at the south end of the courtyard between Science and Cloud Halls.

When completed, it will be framed in redwood and covered with plastic glass. Six feet high and ten feet wide, it will weigh approximately 400 pounds and will be able to advertise five activities at the same time, Cloney said.

Cost of the board is estimated at $205 because all work involved was done by students themselves during weekends without professional help.

Necessary foundation concrete was donated to the college by the Bay City Concrete company.

When completed, this board will serve not only as an information center but also as a saving to Student Council of $700, which sum goes for posters each semester, Cloney said.

Only one side of the board will be used, he added unless the other side is needed.

All clubs and campus organizations will be able to use it for announcements, if they file a petition and present it a week before posting date to Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman.

Preference, Cloney emphasized, will be given to organizations supported financially by the Associated Students, since the board's aim is to cut expenses from the total budget as well as to inform students.

Soph Rendezvous Dance To Start At 9 Friday

Rendezvous, a dance described as a prelude to the Soph Ball May 29, has been scheduled by the Sophomore Class to start at 9 p.m. Friday in Smith Hall.

Candidates for the annual King and Queen contest of the Soph Ball will be present at the dance in an effort to collect votes.

Gary Ettin, Sophomore Class president, announced that several Hollywood celebrities would be present at the dance, but he was unable at the time of publication to release the names.

"This dance will be the best since we broke all records at the Premiere dance last semester when we had 563 in attendance," Ettin predicted. "This is going to be a 'fun' dance."

Soph-y The Press Agent

He's bashful, popular with coeds because of his clumsy helplessness, and average in the sense that he is outstanding in no particular field.

Also a supporter of college functions, he sacrificed all his James Bond mysteries to the Alpha Sigma Delta book fund and supported the Blood Drive with fervor — until someone asked for a donation.

The cowardly personality in question is Soph-y (at left), publicity manager of the Sophomore Class.

"Public speaking courses are a must for me, because I stutter when I'm nervous or scared, which is a good deal of the time," Soph-y explained.

At present the manager is busy publicizing the Sophomore Ball, to be held May 29 at the Fairmont.

Peace Corps Lists Openings For Two-Year College Grads

Opportunities will be open this semester for graduates of two-year colleges to fill more than 900 jobs as Peace Corps volunteers in Latin America, Asia and Africa, the corps' Division of Recruiting in Washington, announced today through Ralph Hillsman, dean of men here.

In a letter to Dean Hillsman, Robert L. Gale, director of recruiting for the Peace Corps, stated:

"Holders of Associate in Arts degrees or trainees in specialized vocational skills have the background urgently needed in Peace Corps programs in Iran, Venezuela, Tanganyika, Honduras, Brazil, Ecuador, Nigeria, Panama, Thailand, Peru, Nepal, Tunisia, Nyasaland, Philippines, Colombia, Sabah/Sarawak and Senegal."

The needs of these host countries are "so great and varied" that almost any type of training and background can be useful, "from liberal arts to agriculture, from secretarial skills and coaching to auto repair," Gale's letter said.

It further stated that graduates of two-year colleges who have majored in liberal arts are especially well qualified for one of the Peace Corps' most important programs, community development.

And the holders of A.A. degrees in liberal arts will be especially welcomed this summer for community development and social welfare in Nyasaland, Philippines, Colombia, Ecuador, Sabah/Sarawak and Senegal.

Most of these programs do not require previous knowledge of a foreign language, because volunteers receive intensive classroom and laboratory work in the language of the country to which they are assigned.

Training also includes study of the history, culture, economy, geography and politics of the areas where the volunteers will serve.

In order to be eligible for the Peace Corps, volunteer applicants must be American citizens. If married, both husband and wife must qualify to serve in the same country, and they must have no dependents under 18.

In addition to the $75 per month readjustment allowance set aside for them by the corps, volunteer living allowances cover the cost of food, housing, transportation, appropriate clothing and miscellaneous expenses.

Film Of Yankee-Giant Series Due Tomorrow

Highlights of the World Series of 1962, a film showing games of the Yankees and the Giants playing at Yankee Stadium in New York City and at Candlestick Park in San Francisco, will be featured tomorrow during College Hour in S-136, Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aids department announced yesterday.

Turn Of The Century, originally scheduled to be shown on the same date, is cancelled. According to Devlin, films of that nature are no longer popular among students.

The college film series were started at City College 17 years ago upon Devlin's suggestion.

Council Begins Passage Of Fall Budgets, Allocates 21 Per Cent Of Available Funds In Two Days

By Herm Kligerman

Seven organizational budgets, totalling $8,127.76 and representing approximately 21 per cent of the available funds for the Fall, 1964, semester, were approved last week by Student Council.

First on the agenda was the $1445 budget for the college's concert and lecture series and student-faculty relations. An attempt was made to cut this request to $1350 but failed when the motion died for lack of a second. The group was allocated the requested amount by a 9-4-0 vote.

Both the Dean of Men and Dean of Women's budgets were also approved calling for an allocation of $100 to each office.

Under The Guardsman's budget, it was earlier decided to delete the proposed 13th issue of the paper for the fall semester and the stamps for which to mail that issue to outside interests. The Guardsman, therefore, was allocated $4648.75 for publication of 12 issues next semester.

The vote was 11-0-3.

A total of $1500 was then allocated to the athletic injury fund and $350 to the insurance fund.

Six budgets are scheduled to be brought up at each council meeting, but last Thursday only one request was discussed and passed because of delay in starting the meeting and considerable discussion on the budget in question — that of KCSF.

The original request was for $634, but after the cost for a new tape recorder was deleted, by a vote of 7-6-1, the budget was cut to $184 and stood at that amount while council voted, 9-2-2, to approve it.

Council must cut the remaining budgets by a total of $20,000-plus in order not to exceed the amount of money set aside by the administration for such allocations.

Members of council also found time last week to decide on proposed amendments to the Associated Student Constitution which will be placed on next week's general election ballot.

Council gave its approval to five of the six proposals but failed to give its okay to the amendment which proposed making the Associated Men Student, Associated Women Student, Freshman Class and Sophomore Class Presidents voting members of council beginning next semester.

(For a summary of the amendments, see page 1.)

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

IT IS a well known fact most individuals, and all college students, enjoy burning the candle at both ends!

All things taken into consideration, there isn't anything radically wrong with this philosophy. The worst thing that can possibly happen to a person is that eventually he'll be tired!

And until someone comes up with a better substitute, the normal thing to do when tired, is to sleep.

There is absolutely, positively nothing earth-shattering about this statement. Rip Van Winkle slept for 20 years, and if given the chance, there are many individuals who would most certainly enjoy indulging in this same feat! (Insomniacs, disregard.)

Not too long ago, a group of physicians conducted a study of sleep habits and the study revealed interesting things about a person's personality.

The average individual might answer, "so what!" All persons reacting to the statement in this way would be wise to read no further. But, the "unaverage" person, who has a definite inquisitiveness about the result of this fascinating study, would be wise to hang on to their beds!

The study revealed that a person who incessantly talks in his sleep shows a marked tendency toward being hen-pecked, or if presently unattached, will probably become this way shortly after tying the knot.

The reasoning behind this theory is simply a hen-pecked individual never gets a word in edgewise, and gives vent to his frustrations by talking in his sleep!

The person who counts his bills instead of sheep, is obviously underpaid, over-worked, and will never make a successful, dedicated farmer!

Individuals who wake up in the morning only to find the sheets on their beds in disarray, are generally discontented with present situations, and being too quiet or too cowardly to change the situations, continue to wrestle with the sheets under the brilliant reasoning, sheets have never been known to fight back!

Little if anything can be done for the constant dreamer. This is the person who dreams all day long, but because of several interruptions, hasn't the time to finish his dreams, so he continues them at night! (Daydreams or nightdreams are subject to change without notice.)

Sleep-walkers are generally frustrated persons who are trying to follow their physicians' advice by getting more exercise. They wake up feeling tired and for the life of them can't figure out why!

Individuals who can't sleep unless their windows are wide open, are always coming down with a cold and haven't the faintest idea why they get them or how to prevent them!

Webster's dictionary defines the sleeper with one eye open, one who keeps himself from sleeping soundly while watching (TV, ball game) or waiting (for Godot); also, is on the alert (red) while resting. (Amen.)

And last, but certainly not least, is the poor insomniac. He just can't sleep or stay asleep for long regardless of what he takes or how much he takes. The worst part about watching a person like this, is nothing interesting is ever revealed about him during the night, and to top it off, he usually leads a very dull, uninteresting life during the day as well!

A word to the wise. The next time Mr. Sandman draws the curtains on your day, check your bed very carefully. Aside from the possibility of a camera being hidden somewhere, there is always the chance of the real you being shown to the world on Candid Camera!

Discipline In Classroom Subject Of SCTA Lecture

Discipline In The Classroom will be the subject of Angelo J. Carmassi's talk to the Student California Teachers Association during College Hour tomorrow in C-269, Bernard Llacuna, SCTA president, announced this week.

Carmassi is assistant principal at El Camino High School in South San Francisco, and has spoken before the SCTA here on numerous occasions in the past.

Llacuna stated that the meeting "will be of great interest to anyone planning to become a teacher." It is open to all students.

Vandals Ransack AS Headquarters

The Associated Student office, S-134, was the target of vandals May 4 though nothing was stolen and no serious damage was done, AS President Bob Roddick announced last week.

It is not certain how the vandals entered the office, although it is probable that the door may not have been locked, since many student leaders enter and leave the office at various times of the day.

Investigation is now under way to determine who the vandals are and whether they are students of this college. A light fixture is among one of the office items removed by Campus Police for fingerprints.

"This wasn't general vandalism; otherwise they would have torn the telephones from the walls. I feel those who did it must be persons of low character, and I feel sorry for them if they have to stoop to such acts for kicks," Roddick commented about the situation.

Netters Capture Second In NorCal

Swimmers Fail To Score In NorCal Championships

Closing what coach Roy Burkhead describes as his "worst season ever," the Ram swim team failed to score in the Northern California Swimming championships at Cabrillo College May 1-2.

The team's record gives the reason for Burkhead's comment, since the San Francisco swimmers went through the conference season winless and placed sixth in the Golden Gate Conference meet.

Their only claim to fame came in two practice wins over University of San Francisco and Washington High School.

Ineligibility also plagued the veteran mentor from the start, as he had three of his top swimmers declared ineligible because of district rulings and the Fall semester's unit requirements.

Although the team did not show much in the way of wins it produced a great deal in the form of City College records.

Leading the record breakers was the greatest freestyler in City College history, Rick Gray. Gray set a new mark of 23.6 in the 50 free against Chabot, and, in the conference meet two weeks later reeled off a 52.3 in the 100 free and later a 57.4 in the 100 fly.

These were in addition to his marks set last year of 2:17. in the 220-yard freestyle and 2:01.3 in the 200-free.

Coach Burkhead stated that he believes Gray could have placed easily in the State meet had it been held only a few weeks later. As it was, the big man was just beginning to set records when the season ended abruptly.

Records also fell in the 200-Individual Medley with Brian Edie's 2:29.8 and in the 500-free as a result of Fred Wales' time of 6:23.7.

In reference to next year's prospects, Burkhead stated that he will have Edie, Bob Barnes, Dennis Harley and possibly Terry Krystofiak returning and will work them on running and isometrics in an attempt to make up for his lack of water polo.

Commenting on this strategy, he stated, "It has never been tried before and it might not work, but it couldn't get any worse so . . ."

Spikers Journey To Santa Rosa For Championships

City College trackmen will journey to Santa Rosa Saturday to compete in the Northern California College Championships. Trials were held yesterday at Modesto.

Expected to carry the Ram banner in Saturday's meet will be a total of nine harriers.

Pat Lewis should qualify easily in the shot and discus since he has yet to be defeated in conference action. Geon Piotkin should also place in the meet because of his season best and college record of 9:33.3 for the two-mile run.

The 880 should prove the Rams' strong event with Chris Ferrigno and Ozzie Norris both entered. Norris was upset by Ferrigno in the conference meet when they placed one-two with respective times of 1:55.5 and 1:55.6 in each of their heats.

Tom Gardner will also be contending with his 22.3 time in the 220 yard dash as will the Rams' sprint and mile relay teams.

Last year the Rams finished eighth with 24 points behind first-place College of Sequoias who racked up a powerful total of 75 digits.

San Mateo placed second with 58, followed by Foothill-56, Contra Costa-38, Fresno-33, Oakland-31, San Jose-28, San Francisco-24, Reedley-16, Taft-16, Monterey-12, Diablo Valley, 11, Santa Rosa-10, San Benito-8, Stockton-5, Modesto-5, Hartnell-4, Sacramento-3, Porterville-1, and American River-1.

In the 1963 meet at Modesto, the Rams had two good showings in the persons of Piotkin and Lewis, both expected to take points again this year.

HERE IS THE DECISION; was he safe or was he out? The umpire in the background called it safe, and Ram catcher Pete Giavanola scored, making it 3-1 in favor of the Rams. It just wasn't Foothill's day as the Rams went on to win, 5-1. —Guardsman photo by John Olsen.

Ram Nine Ends Season With Foothill Split, 10-11 Record

The Ram nine brought its 1964 baseball season to a close two weeks ago, splitting a doubleheader with arch-rival Foothill, 3-4 and 13-5. San Francisco's final Golden Gate Conference record is 10-11.

Brad Rothback, top man on the hill for San Francisco with a 6-3 won-lost record, took the loss in the first game of the twin bill.

He allowed only four Owl hits, but four Ram miscues spelled defeat for the home club.

Foothill scored one in the fourth, and the Rams tied it in the fifth. But not for long—the Owls tallied twice in the seventh and again in the eighth.

The Rams' ninth inning rally was squelched just short of tying the score. Pete Giovanola reached first on a single, and advanced to third on a throwing error committed by the Owl shortstop.

Henry King, on first by the error, went on to second. Slugger Mike Dunne blasted a two bagger to drive in a pair of runs, but that was the end of the Ram rally.

Dunne died at second as the Owls retired the rest of the side.

In the second game, the Rams retaliated, crashing four in the first and four in the second. Walks were part of the downfall of the Owls who allowed nine free passes to first in the game. San Francisco cashed in on seven hits and five waiks in the first two frames for more than enough runs for the win.

Every man on the Ram team, including the pitcher, picked up at least one hit in the game, and Hugh Milier coasted to a victory giving up five hits to the Owls.

Golfers End Season, Tie Diablo Valley

In their last match of the season, highlighted by a game average of 79, the Ram golfers pulled themselves out of the Golden Gate Conference dungeon by tying the Diablo Valley Vikings, 15-15.

For the fourth time in the season, Jim Schroder shot under the 80's with a 75, defeating Viking Jess Cranfred's 78. Mike Moore came up with a fine 73, but so did his opponent Bob Graham. Although Mike Soden shot a 79, he was defeated by a 76, shot by Don Wilson.

Mike Selsnik and Pete Eden scored an 82 and 87.

All but Selsnik are freshmen. If they come back next year, coach Grover Klemmer just might have something.

Chabot College wound up on top of the conference. San Mateo placed second and Foothill third.

San Jose, Contra Costa, Diablo Valley and San Francisco were next in the final 1964 golf standings with a half point separating them. Oakland City College finished in last place.

Suessmann Tops Owl Star, Goes On To Singles Final

By Fred Wales.

Fred Suessmann provided the upsets for the Ram tennis team as he battled his way into the finals in singles and despite the doubles teams led the team to a second behind Foothill last Saturday in the Northern California Tennis Championships at Foothill.

The Rams fell short of stopping Foothill as they totaled six points as compared to Foothill's eight. San Mateo followed with five then Santa Rosa, Diablo Valley, Oakland, College of Sequoias, and American River with two and San Jose with one.

Suessmann was unseeded in the tourney and after easiiy stopping Menio's Jay Coggeshall 6-2, 6-2, in the first round, he met third-seeded Dale Macgowan of Foothill.

In the first set Suessmann used hard returns and some well placed shots for a 6-1 lead. Macgowan came back to take the second set 6-2 but in the third set to everyone's surprise Suessmann won 6-3.

The loss sent Macgowan out of the State meet competition and put San Francisco in the driver's seat as Vince Chinn had also scored an upset. Chinn followed his opening win over Jerry Hoopes, 6-2, 6-3, with two 6-3 sets over eighth-seeded Gordon Misaki of Reedley.

To Foothill's horror the pair advanced to the quarter and then the semifinals. Suessmann kept on with his upsets by stopping Bill Scott of College of Sequoias 6-4, 6-4 in the quarters and then Tory Bryant of San Mateo 6-2, 6-2 in the semi's.

Chinn had a little more trouble as after he faultered with Oakland's Tom Kiss before defeating him 6-2, 1-6, 6-1, he faced top-seeded Rod Kop of Foothill and feil in the semi's 6-0, 6-1.

In the finals Suessmann also succumbed to Kop 6-0, 6-3.

Then came the doubles. Again the Rams were to surprise everyone but this time by losing instead of winning.

Ben Levy and Suessmann in the quarterfinals were locked in one of the hardest fought matches of the day as they went three sets with Preston Pauil and Fletcher Grenninger of Santa Rosa before losing 7-9, 6-4, 7-5.

Chinn and Louis Englestein went one round further but were upset by Saputo and Wright of Diablo Valley in another close match 8-7, 6-4.

Coach Roy Diederichsen after the match stated that the doubies teams could have beaten their opponents nine out of ten times any other day but after Chinn and Suessmann had played so hard in singles it was tough for them to come back for doubles.

Next Saturday the Rams will travel to Fresno for the State Meet.

Guardsman Makes It Three In A Row With Lutheran Win

The Guardsman five stretched its winning streak to three in a row, squeezing by the Lutherans, 30-28, in a cliff hanger that highlighted last Tuesday night's Associated Men Student-sponsored Intramurai basketball tournament.

Pete Frankiin, who sparked The Guardsman effort with 10 points, hit the winning two with four seconds left on the ciock. The undefeated Filipino Club beat the Newman Club, 65-56, and now have one remaining game which is to be rescheduled.

The Ram Ski Club forfeited to the Hawaiian Club and, in the fraternity league, Zeta Phi Sigma won by forfeit over Phi Beta Delta.

Roger Kaufman, AMS president, said iast week that the traditional AMS Sport Night is set for Wednesday, May 27.

Activity will begin at 7 and run until 10 p.m., and trophies will be presented to the league high scorer and championship teams.

After dropping Beta Tau 33-28, Alpha Kappa Rho stands second, under first place Zeta Phi Sigma. The two teams will play-off tonight in the men's gymnasium.

The two undefeated teams in the Independent league played last Wednesday night, with the Divine Ones dumping the Devinessians 59-38.

The Anonymous took the NBA Rejects 75-65, with James Bealum hitting 32 points.

The Divine Ones, last season's independent league champions, meet the Filipino Club, league leaders, tonight to decide which team faces the fraternity winner on Sport Night.

Avery Carter is highest scorer of all three leagues this season with 98 points. In the club league, Mark White of Hotel and Restaurant leads his league with 85 points.

Beta Tau's Jim Ruggies hit the most points, 49, in the fraternity league.

Ram In 1963 — Colt In 1964

By Pete Franklin

Waiter Williams, the "chunky" slugging former Ram outfielder, has made the big time, and in short order.

Williams was drafted from City College by the Houston Colt .45's at the end of the 1963 college season. He played in the Colt system for only one year before being elevated to a major league position.

The meaty 5-6 speedster paced the 1963 runner-up Ram club in its futile effort to bring home a pennant and led the team in home runs, batting average and total bases.

Although Williams had hoped for a career in football, he dispiayed no small amount of exuberance when he signed with Houston.

According to Larry Lawson, last year's Ram coach, Williams has always seemed too short to be a pro outfielder, and his size may hinder him later.

But the dauntless Williams has not oniy disproved that contention; he has done it in record time. After leaving the college in late May, 1963, Williams played for Modesto in the .45s' farm system, batting .374 with six home runs.

Following his six month stint at Modesto, he moved up a notch to Durham, where his batting percentage dropped to .239 with only three round trippers. The Colts were still interested, though, and gave Williams a chance in their 1964 pennant drive.

The little scrapper, as he is often called, has tremendous reflexes and unbelievabie power, coordination and speed.

Williams joined the Rams following a successful career at Galileo High School where he was All-City in three sports in a single year. At the college, he played varsity football and was second only to Ron Coleman in the Ram backfield.

"Williams didn't remair idle between seasons either," cage coach Sid Phelan said, adding, "right after football, there he was at basketball practice, and he had to leave the team early to play baseball."

It is no wonder then, that the versatile sports star hit 370 and became "most valuable" on the Ram nine in 1963. Williams has worked several times in major league play for the Colts, one of which was his recent pinch runner appearance against the San Francisco Giants.

"It's a tough job being a major leaguer," Lawson commented, "but knowing Walt, I am convinced it won't phase him in the least, and we can expect to hear a lot more about him in the future. Williams is capable of almost anything."

Ettin, Kaufman Blame Apathy For Local Problems

GARY ETTIN, SRP candidate for Associated Student President promises to enhance the college's reputation among students and community.

By Herm Kligerman

In the tradition of their predecessors, Gary Ettin and Roger Kaufman, candidates for the fall Associated Student presidency, cited student apathy as the first thing they wduid attempt to overcome, if elected.

Each revealed his own means of solving the probiem in an interview with The Guardsman last Wednesday. Ettin appeared personally to announce his intentions while Kaufman "sounded off" from his sick-bed while recuperating from a case of German measles.

INTEREST STUDENTS FIRST

Ettin stated that the initial move would be to get students interested in the college, in general, and its activities, in particular. "Once this is achieved, everything eise will fall into piace," he commented.

He also biamed student apathy for the evident decline of political parties. Students Representative Party, Ettin's supporters, is the only political group on campus this semester.

It nominated a full slate of candidates during a recent convention with no opposition from within the party.

SRP IS CLIQUE

Kaufman, commenting on this fact, accused SRP of being a "clique" and not representing the majority of the students here to the best advantage.

Kaufman is running independently. At one time, he was rumored to have the backing of the United Students Party, but Kaufman admitted "lack of student interest and stimulation resulted in the folding of the party."

Despite the political situation this semester, Ettin does think political parties are advantageous and will survive if held together by strong leaders. Kaufman, however, is in complete disagreement.

He believes that parties cannot survive in their present condition. "If SRP loses in the elections it will most likely fold," Kaufman stated. "If lost the presidency to USP last semester and I don't think it could survive through another defeat," he added.

LET AS GO TO STUDENTS

To alleviate student apathy, Kaufman suggested that student government go directly to the students rather than inviting students to it. "AS officers should go to the club meetings during College Hours to become aware of the club's needs and members' desires," Kaufman remarked.

He also recommended that at orientation incoming students be given a detailed account of the college's student government system "so that we may interest them in the college, as a whole, from the very start."

ETTIN ON KAUFMAN IDEAS

To Kaufman-initated ideas to delete the word "City" from the formal name of the college and to give the Associated Men Student, Associated Women Student, Freshman and Sophomore Presidents a vote on Student Counell, Ettin expressed a negative reaction.

Ettin does not see a valid reason why the name of the college should be altered although Kaufman contends that "the word City tends to limit the prestige of the college and has a bearing on student apathy."

On the second matter, Ettin said that the duties of the four elected presidents, below AS, has been "to work with members of their respective organizations and bring to council, at specific times, proposals concerning their organizations for the voting members to consider."

He thinks it is best to keep things this way.

"More votes on counell means a more educated vote on issues," Kaufman retaliated in defense of his proposal.

BUDGET SYSTEM GOOD, BUT . . .

Both candidates voiced superficial approval of AS President Bob Roddick's system of considering and passing organizational budgets this semester but each had something to add.

"I would submit to each budgeted organization, in advance, what council could readily offer them in the way of funds for next semester's activities and ask them to propose a budget within that stipulated amount," Ettin explained.

"This would avoid any hard feelings later," he added.

Kaufman, although favoring Roddick's system, does not favor the way council makes decisions on budgets. "They hold special meetings to consider each request and propose cuts," he stated.

He explained that Roddick compensates for this by inviting representatives from budgeted groups to attend a regular councii meeting to discuss their request with the voting members, directly. "I can't see what good this is if council had made up its mind already," Kaufman charged.

GIVE VP MORE POWER?

On the proposal to have the AS Vice President assume the duties of Council of Organizations President in the fall, Ettin stated that he thought it a much too important issue to give a direct yes or no answer to.

"Try it out," he suggested, "and if it doesn't work, drop it."

Kaufman, on the other hand, feels that the Vice President should be delegated more authority so that the office will mean more. He is in favor of automatically making the elected Vice President the Chairman of COO.

Looking ahead to next semester, each candidate, optimistic for a victory in this week's elections, briefly summarized his plans.

CANDIDATES SUMMARIZE PLANS

In a nutshell, Ettin would strive to bolster the reputation of the college among its students and the community. He cited a well-balanced and diversified program as a possible solution.

Kaufman announced that he would give more power to COO "since the majority of students are represented in this group and not in Student Counell as has seemed to be the case in the past." He would also attempt to establish an appeals board within COO to provide a check-and-balance on Council decisions.

This board was to have been a projeet of Roddick this semester but somehow seemed to have been forgotten amid the more pressing business during the first few weeks of the semester.

Five amendments also appear on the ballot. To pass, each will need a two-thirds majority of votes cast.

ROGER KAUFMAN, Independent candidate for Associated Student President, promises to bring government to students, rather than vice versa.

H&R Statler Wing To Offer Students Meal At Any Time

When the nails are swept away and the dust settles, students will have a new congregation area to congregate in—the top floor of the newly added wing to the cafeteria complete with panoramic view of parking lot B and stocked with the economist's nightmare—vending machines.

The name of the new wing will be the Statler Wing, in honor of the Statler foundation for its contribution of $100,000.

The Statler grant was offered with the stipulation that $50,000 be raised locally. Hotel and associated industries, students, alumni and friends of the college joined forces in a drive that insured the sum and the grant.

The state legislature allocated an additional $200,000 in 1961.

John W. Dunn, hotel and restaurant management department instructor, said that there will be a number of advantages to the new wing.

"First," he said, "it will now be possible to serve the night class students.

"Second, students will now have a place to congregate morning, noon and night. The wing will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

"Third, not only will the students have a place to get out of the rain but they can also get something to eat at any hour of the day, thanks to the vending machines."

Hot entrees as well as cold drinks and coffee will be available. All the foodstuffs will be prepared by the students in H&R.

"These new vending machines will provide proper training for those students in H&R interested in going into this very lucrative field," Dunn said.

Half as wide but twice as long, the new congregation area will replace the present congregation area, which is the cafeteria. No longer will students be able to congregate or loiter in the cafeteria. That will be especially reserved for the paying customers. The Campus Police will enforce the new ruiing with their regular patroling.

The new wing will also be used for future dances and it should accommodate more than 400 persons.

In addition to the Statler wing there is another new policy—sandwiches will be wrapped in transparent piastic bags and cheeseburgers will be available.

Pistol Team Wins State Matches At Fort Ord Contest

The college pistol team surprised all by winning three first place and two second place awards at the State California Pistol championships last month at Fort Ord.

Team members who made the trip were James Dean, Dave Kannisto, Sherwood Zammit, Jim Juarez, Bob Nasise, Henry Wesch, John Conion, Ray Chezik and coaches Larry Lawson and Tim Foley.

The Ram shooters, besides winning three first and two second place awards, also won the State Championship in the Marksman Class for the .38 caliber pistol. Dean was the leading shooter winning three awards, followed by Kannisto with one award.

The results of the match were most rewarding, Lawson commented, because marksman Dean was the only member of the team with previous experience.

A total of 283 shooters, comprising 45 teams, competed in the matches. Entries came from as far as Hawaii, Nevada, Texas and Montana. Many of these teams were from groups other than criminology students.

The team matches currently being arranged will be between San Jose City College and the Navy team stationed at Treasure Island.

Photo Department To Offer Summer Course

A special two-unit course in location photography will be offered to advanced students during the 1964 summer session, Bev Pasqualetti, photography instructor, announced last week.

Students interested in enrolling in the six-week course, beginning June 23, must secure permission from Pasquaietti in advance. The class will be taught from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday.

"There will be no instruction given," Pasqualetti stated. "The class will concentrate on evaluation of student work and field trips." Emphasis will be on photography in depth.

Location photography was offered to students for the first time in ten years last summer and, according to Pasqualetti, it was very well received. He urged students intending to take this year's course to sign up early since enrollment is limited.

New College Catalogues Different—Cost 50 Cents

The college catalogue for next semester will have exactly the same helpful information on class requirements, names of the faculty members, and final examination dates. But with one big difference. The new catalogues will cost 50 cents each.

The reason, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, is that "it costs too much to publish these catalogues when students take three or four and then throw them on the ground or leave them somewhere and come to get another. One student admitted to having three."

Miss Learnard also stated that students were not to come to the registrar's office in order to obtain their catalogue. They will be on sale in the Ramporium.

AWS Feminine Fling Presents Awards Friday

It's A Woman's World, the semi-annual Associated Women Student Feminine Fling Awards Party, will explore the role of women in different parts of the world.

The function, which includes a light supper, will be held at 6:30 p.m. Friday in Smith Hall, Wardene Oliver, AWS president, stated today.

Featured speakers of the evening will be Dorothy Herzberg and Ann Henshel. The former is a Peace Corps representative who will show slides of work being done in various fields by women volunteers. The latter will speak on the recruitment of business majors for jobs abroad.

Coeds attending the event are invited to wear the costume of their native land and those who do will have an opportunity to model their native dress during a fashion show.

A high point of the event will be the presentations of AWS service awards and the Dougherty Trophy, first awarded in Fall, 1953, given each semester to the sorority with the highest scholastic average.

The Presidents of the AWS Recreation Association and Inter-Sorority Council for Fall, 1964, will also be introduced.

Entertainment will be by Susan Schwampe, who will present a modern interpretation of an African dance; by Mary Tajo, who will present a Filipino bamboo dance, and by Carol Anseimi, who will do a Hawaiian dance.

Also scheduled are soprano Lynn Goodrich and a Recreation Association folk dance group, sponsored by Meiia Furgis.

Participating aiso in the function will be members of the International Relations Club and the Chinese Students Club.

Some 200 women are expected to attend the function.

New Smith Hall Annex Dedication Postponed

Dedication of the new annex in Smith Hall has been postponed until next semester, according to Louis Batmale, coordinator of Technical-Terminai Education here.

Batmaie said last week that the annex would not be quite ready for the original dedication date of May 25. "We want it to be finished in every detail before we have the dedication," he explained.

The new annex will offer students more cafeteria space, and also some classrooms for the Hotel and Restaurant department.

Voting Ends Today As 17 Students Seek 20 AS Posts

Characterized by the smallest slate of candidates in the history of Associated Student elections at the college, voting for Fall, 1964, officers is scheduled to close at 2 p.m. today.

Students voting in the election will notice that only 17 names appear on the ballot, although 20 positions are up for grabs. This is the smallest slate ever, even surpassing that which appeared in the elections to choose Fall, 1952, officers.

At that time, 20 of 21 offices went unopposed.

The only "big six" position which meets with opposition this semester is that of AS President. Gary Ettin of the Students Representative Party is running against Roger Kaufman, an independent.

SRP is running the only candidates for the other major offices in student government. Wardene Oliver is seeking the AS Vice Presidency. Art Gershman the Associated Men Student Presidency, Barbara Kontis the Associated Women Student Presidency, Gary Freund, the Freshman Class Presidency and Terry Cloney the Sophomore Class Presidency.

Six students seek the available seven seats as freshman members of council in the fall. SRP's candidates include Arthur Lindahon, Earl Brayerman, Carol Anselmi, Toni Suidickas and Esther Szamus. Also in the running is Miriam Petranker, an independent.

For the seven available sophomore seats on council, again six students have their names on the ballot. Representing SRP is Fran Richardson, Mary Anne Ducommun, Bob Moorefield and Mary Jane Super, while Mike Fiorentino and Dennis Sweeny are running independently.

Precincts are located in the men's and women's gymnasium, at the ramp entrance to the arts building, at the main entrance to the library, near the fountain section in Smith Hall and at the silver poie in Science Hall.

Photographer Bernhard Speaks To Art 50 Class

Ruth Bernhard, fine arts photographer, will speak on Photography As A Medium Of Poetic and Philosophie Expression from 10 a.m. to 12 noon Friday in S-136, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced last week.

Although she will speak at a regular Art 50 class meeting for students of advertising design, graphic arts and photography, all others interested are invited to attend, Smith emphasized.

Miss Bernhard, whose name appears on most lists of prominent photographers along with others such as Ansel Adams, Barbara Morgan, Edward Weston, Walker Evans and Nell Dorr, will illustrate her talk with examples of her own work.

This lecture will be the last of a photography series for the semester which has already presented photojournalist Ray Morris, industrial photo-projects manager Ray Jaeger, film producer Dick Ham and photographic illustrator Craig Sharp.

The Art 50 courses are conducted cooperatively by Carl Beetz, William Svabek and Smith. William Davis is coordinator.

All Students Eligible To Elect Qualified Budget Allocators

ANY PERSON who states that student government carries very little power around City College had better reassess the facts. Money totaling between $40,000 and $50,000 constitutes power, a lot of it, and Student Council has direct control over such sums each semester.

This money is doled out to the various campus organizations in amounts council deems appropriate. On a whim, in an act of revenge or out of absolute necessity, Student Council could slash a budgeted organization's finances down to such a point that the organization could fail to operate or exist.

It is for this reason that we believe students should take special care in selecting the individuals who will possess this power. Indifference to the activities of Student Council could lead to irresponsibility on the part of that body.

But then, of course, there are those who say that they do not believe in taking part in extra-curricular activities, that they attend college for academic reasons only. These students claim they never attend the student lecture series or the drama department productions or anything but a class and that they always park their automobiles off campus. Therefore, they say, student government has nothing to offer them and they choose to ignore it completely.

Nobody will disagree with their right to believe what they want to believe. We could criticize them, even unjustly, without fear of complaint on their part, because we know these introverts would never be hypocritical enough to read an Associated Student-supported newspaper, but we shall refrain from so doing.

Today is the second day of student elections. Every student enrolled in the college is eligible to vote, and we urge that he exercise this right. We won't demand, or badger or even plead. We just ask that students take the little time required to cast a ballot and put the candidates whom they consider the best qualified into office—and power.

15,000 Photographs

Audio-Visual's Devlin Sees Hobby Pay Off In Career

Through the years, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here, has shot and developed close to 15,000 photographs of the many sites he has visited while traveling.

And from a hobby he has made a career.

At the college, Devlin presides over the audio-visual aids department whose offices are located in Cloud Hall.

In the compact, pamphlet-strewn four rooms of his department, Devlin coordinates the designated showing of films as requested by instructors at different (or the same!) times, either in the classrooms on campus equipped for motion picture projection or in classrooms where such equipment can be set up.

Unlike some public high schools, where the audio-visual aids department is little more than a small, single room with a few cans of film on a table, its college counterpart is a specialized and complicated endeavor.

Devlin, for example, in addition to scheduling the showing of films is also constantly aware of the films available from the 67 film libraries in the Bay Area.

The other role of Madison Devlin is that of a professional free-lance photographer.

Devlin began taking pictures "for amusement" 25 years ago in Alaska. "I don't remember the type of camera I had at the time," he said, "but all I did was to take shots of the scenery."

Several years ago, when on a sabbatical leave, Devlin ventured to Mexico, armed with his camera. "It was there, on my sabbatical, that I got some really good pictures. When I returned home I submitted my better shots to Motorland Magazine. They accepted them."

Then more publishers became interested in purchasing his pictures, and, as a result he was able to purchase better equipment, and with it, to take better photographs.

On all of his travels, while Devlin is snapping pictures, his wife is painting the same scene in oils or water-colors. "She just paints for fun, but every once in a while she sells one," he said.

Devlin today is in the enviable spot of being in demand by publishers of such magazines as Sunset, Motorland, and the This Week and Bonanza sections of The Chronicle, to take pictures for their pages. "I'm in the position now, where I can take pictures when I want, where I want and if I want," he said.

Shortly after his arrival at the college he was offered his present position as head of the audio-visual aids department. At that time Cloud Hall was still in the planning stages, so in a typical gesture, he took an active part in the planning of his future department.

Success Story Series

WILLIE ITO, successful cartoonist.

Former Art Student Makes It As Hollywood Cartoonist

By Bea Takeuchi

Uncle Sam does make exceptions to 1-A classified draftees. Willie Ito, young cartoonist, can vouch for this.

Ito, 1954 graduate of City College, explained the exception, saying, "I was drafted—but deferred at the last moment by an ironic fate.

"I was at Warner Brothers at the time, and we had just started two films which I was working on for the army. This was the reason I was not called to active service," Ito said.

Ito now works for Hanna-Barbera Productions in Hollywood. When TV entertainment cartoons soared into big production, he joined American Broadcasting Company's Bob Clampett Productions as layout director.

Upon completion of the 'Mattey's Funnies' series, he was offered a position with Hanna-Barbera Productions (of Yogi Bear and Flintstones fame) and is presently with them.

Ito, whose screen credits are noted after many cartoons, started his career by drawing spot cartoons for neighborhood advertisement sheets.

Knowing that experience in any field often comes with jobs without pay, Ito did posters and signs for various clubs and social functions.

Then came the big break.

"Mr. Carl Beetz, art instructor here, was very instrumental by writing me a letter of introduction to the business representative of the cartoonist union. The representative arranged an interview with the Walt Disney organization. I started in an apprentice category and worked into the animation department."

Ito's first picture was Lady and the Tramp. Upon completion of this picture, he joined Warner Brothers studio and worked in Bugs Bunny, Roadrunners, Coyote, Pepe Le Pew, Tweedy, Sylvester the Cat, and other cartoon shorts.

"How Disney and his artists developed the field of animated cartoons to such a high degree of 'art form' really impressed me," Ito commented.

"My experience with the other studios taught me a great deal in the intricate process of animation film," Ito said, explaining that "each studio has its individual technique and approach."

Beetz, appraising his former student's success, said, "Ito must certainly have what it takes because he got up there awfully fast." He added, "Ito was very clever at cartooning and was a very good figure draftsman."

Ito stated that the "on-the-job" method employed by William Eckert, advertising art instructor who retired last June, "was particularly beneficial schooling."

A native San Francisean, Ito attended Polytechnic High School. "I really haven't given it much thought, but once I wanted to become an archeologist," he said.

"I believe," he added, "that cartooning is a definite art form and those who hope to enter this field, whether it be in animation, comic strips, magazines or any other media, should really love cartooning.

"He must be willing to work hard, for it is not as easy as one might imagine," Ito explained, and "cartoons are so often taken for granted."

Although he is convinced that this field offers unlimited horizons, Ito also believes that there are still "a lot of ladders left to climb." He has two ambitions. One is to have a successful syndicated comic strip; the other, to produce his own films.

With several partners, Ito has formed an independent film company recently. This company is presently producing television commercials during its spare time.

Ito spends at least half his spare time sleeping.

Charlie Brown Candidate For Time Capsule

Whether it is their serious outlook on the present or their pre-occupation with their subject matter, most art instructors here tend to refrain from discussing matters pertaining to the future.

This fact, if it is one, was especially noted when The Guardsman polled several instructors at the college on the question: "What would you put in a time-capsule for posterity?"

Evans Ecke, Jesse Hover and Robert Kovacic each admitted he would need "at least a week" to decide on something. When they were informed that the answer needn't be serious, the trio of art instructors agreed that to give a humorous answer "would take even a longer time."

In the advertising art department, John O'Brien asked to have more time to answer the question too.

However, all was not lost.

Walter Krumm, codirector of the drama department, stated that he would put a series of Charlie Brown cartoons in the capsule "because they are often representative of our society."

English instructor Bruce Hannah, after considerable thought, decided that he would place in the time capsule "a tape recording of a certain English instructor's lecture on tragedy, comedy and melodrama."

He did not elaborate nor divulge the name of the "instructor."

Brigitta Beetz, in the tradition of life science instructors, announced that she would put DNA, a life-giving substance, into the capsule. Apparently, she was held to the possibility that the world would come to an end and the lone survivors would recover the time capsule.

On a more serious note, Anka Ohman, business instructor, suggested that "the chromosomes that give an individual the power of clear thinking" be placed in a capsule.

Similar answers came from social science instructors Francis Watters and John Ross. The former would put the Declaration of Independence in the capsule while the latter would use the capsule to store the Constitution of the United States.

Neither wished to elaborate on his answer, stating that "the reason should be obvious."

Seven Students Join In Local Movie Making

By Herm Kilgerman

Six young men, formerly employed in occupations ranging from private detective to writer for United Press International, and a coed have joined a former racecar driver in a common venture, that of making a local motion picture company prosper.

The group has organized under the stamp of Impressions, and works out of a central office on Union street in San Francisco.

What makes this organization even more unique is the fact that seven of its eight members are students at the college this semester.

Ralph Ackerman, once a race-car driver and student at the University of Minnesota, came to San Francisco last year in search of experienced talent to form an artistic film-making group.

"I had the idea of a company based on the profit motive but only if it was correlated with artistic filming and a sensitive story line," Ackerman stated. On a financial shoe string, he began searching for his associates.

At a hootenanny, he met Jim Murray, a former poet, and John Shannock, inventor, ex-private detective and a Guardsman staff photographer.

Murray is Impressions' director of publications and Shannock director of research.

A few weeks later, Ackerman saw a movie, Eye In The Alley, which vividly depicted a knife fight on a city street. He immediately set out to "track down" the film's photographer and, as a result, met Jim Catania, a Guardsman staff photographer last semester.

Catania, in turn, introduced Ackerman to two other photographers, Phil Swartz and George Champagne, currently Guardsman staff photographers. The trio agreed to join Ackerman in his pursuit with each delegated a specific job.

Catania was made director of photography, Swartz director of sound, and Champagne in charge of film processing.

Ackerman completed his initial staff with these appointments, but then he noted the need for an assistant to Murray, head scriptwriter for Impressions.

Murray remembered an associate and proceeded to locate him. Richard Carlson, formerly with UPI, was found announcing for a Bay Area radio station and persuaded to join Impressions as director of television.

Carlson is the only memher of the group not attending the college.

Victoria Cero, a student in the advertising department, is in charge of management and layout of a magazine Impressions is working on at the present time. She is the newest member of the group.

Two other art students, although not directly connected with Impressions, are helping the organization with art work. They are Alex Eng and Jack Genero.

The film company has come a long way since its beginning less than a year ago. Not only has it acquired substantial capital, it also has its own company car, a safari land rover with the company's monogram imprinted on the side.

Impressions is now engaged in a color film for College of San Mateo's new campus, a television commercial for a Japanese commercial, and a film for the Pillsbury Foundation Children's Center in Minneapolis.

Impressions' biggest venture is that of filming a full-length art film of the experiences of a young woman in San Francisco.

The group has also been invited to attend and film the Sebring International Grand Prix in Florida next summer.

Sandals, Made By Hand, Equal A Profitable Business Venture

Making sandals by hand and without machinery can be a profitable business, and Joe Kaplan, a student at the college, does just this.

Through this "hobby," he explained, he is making his way through college.

Kaplan, a liberal arts major, rents a room at 1932 Fell Street. He works on his hobby weekends and "sometimes after classes if I'm rushed," he said.

Kaplan makes hair pieces for women, sandals and belts. All are made out of leather. He emphasized, however, that "making sandals is my main work."

Kaplan charges $10 to $20 for his sandals, $2 to $5 for belts and 50 cents to $2 for hair pieces.

He buys his leather from a local leather company.

After buying the leather, Kaplan cuts it with a knife and dyes it in the color specified by the buyer of the sandals.

"All my work is made to order," he said. He traces the prospective buyer's foot outline on the leather and then cuts it to the proper size.

According to Kaplan, there are actually three soles in his sandal. He puts foam rubber between the first two layers of the sandal and then adds a hard rubber sole on the bottom. "This makes them wear longer," he added.

It takes him from one to two weeks to make one pair of sandals.

Kaplan will resole all sandals he has made for 50 cents to $1. "All my work is guaranteed for the life of the shoe. If the customer isn't satisfied, he gets his money back," he stated.

He will also repair all sandals he has made free of charge.

There are three main sandal makers in the Bay Area. "These companies charge twice as much as I do," Kaplan said.

Kaplan has been engaged in this craft, or hobby, for about nine months. He learned the basic steps from a friend and then started out on his own foot.

"When someone buys a pair of my sandals, he usually tells his friends. The word just goes around. I sell mostly to students, however," Kaplan stated.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

THE month of May means the start of warm weather. And warm weather is an indication that the fun in the sun season is here once again.

Fun in the sun activities can range from swimming, sailing and surfing to just plain loafing around.

The average fellow has no doubt already begun his summer activities, but the average girl, well that's something else. Before any girl can head for the surf there is one minor detail to be taken care of. This little detail most always turns into a big project. The detail? None other than the purchase of a swim suit.

At the start, one thing must be made very clear. No girl would ever be caught wearing last year's bathing suit. Aside from the fact she may have vacationed in Florida for the entire summer, and never wore the suit in California is beside the point! The fact the suit is one year old most definitely classifies it obsolete.

The actual process of purchasing a swim suit ranges from the sublime to the ridiculous.

For some strange reason, the heavy girl insists on buying the skimpiest suit she can find. Although she looks like ten pounds of potatoes in a five pound sack, she is bent on getting that "second look" from the male set.

What is most unfortunate, however, is that the extra look is usually one of disbelief rather than admiration!

The thin girl, on the other hand, always ends up purchasing the loudest, flashiest suit possible. Instead of sticking to some conservative color and design, she enjoys making a spectacle of herself. And the sad part of it is that she couldn't care less what anyone else thinks—especially if the opinion is contrary to her own.

Then there is the girl who falls into the "just right" category. Needless to say, this type of girl is far and few between. She has what she is supposed to have and to top it off, has it in the proper proportion!

The only thing the matter with this girl is her quirk about being too fussy concerning her choice of swim suit. Unfortunately for the men, she spends most of her summer in the dressing room of a store trying to find the perfect suit.

And when she finally locates one that suits her, it's too cold to show it off! This poor girl sounds like a born loser. Well, no one is really perfect anyway!

Ah yes, and then there's the girl who spends all of her summer dieting. Now this isn't anything to be ashamed of; actually she is to be commended.

The only problem she must solve is keeping her swim suit up and her weight down. This small chore somehow prevents her from making it to the beach. (After all, it does get kind of embarrassing having the cops pick her up for indecent exposure five times a day!)

Speaking of indecent exposure, there is always one in every crowd. It does, however, make it rather difficult for this girl to acquire a tan. It seems she spends more time in the clink than in the drink!

If by a strange coincidence, you happen to be one of those girls in the process of buying a swim suit, and just by another strange coincidence happen to be too fat, too thin, too fussy or too indecent, there is a way to beat the bathing suit blues—join a nudist club!

Commencement Speakers Chosen

Rogena Jeong and Eleanor Davis were chosen last week to be the student speakers at the college's commencement awards assembly set for Thursday, May 28, in the theater.

The basic requirement for a student speaker was the maintaining of at least a 3.5 grade-point average during their tenure at the college. Miss Jeong and Miss Davis were selected from a field of 13 aspirants.

Principal speaker at the assembly is expected to be Louis G. Conlan, president of the college. His topic and the subject of the students' talks have not as yet been determined.

Highlighting the assembly, awards will be formally presented to outstanding graduates.

Tentative plans call for a reception in the new horticulture center for award winners and their parents.

AS President Vetoes Council Passage Of Pep Band Funds; Sponsor Shocked At News

By Ann Weill

Associated Student President Bob Roddick vetoed a previously allocated budget for the college Pep Band, totaling $9504.41, for the Fall, 1964, semester at 3:30 p.m. last Thursday.

John Dunn, band sponsor, asked to comment on the veto said, "I'm completely speechless. I'm shocked that I wasn't informed."

Last Tuesday, Student Council passed the budget by a 7-4-0 vote, but immediately following the meeting a student petition, asking for a review of council's allocation, was circulated.

Four amendments to the motion had been proposed in Tuesday's meeting. The first amendment was to the original motion and insert the amount of $795.50. This would have meant that the proposed new uniforms could not have been purchased.

The other amendment was for $6404 instead of $9504. This would have cut the Rose Bowl trip from the Pep Band's agenda and $3100 from its budget.

Both proposed amendments failed, the first by a vote of 3-6-2, the latter by 5-6-0.

Two other amendments were proposed. One was to allocate $4322.80 which implied the purchase of less than the 63 uniforms proposed. The other was to allocate $5922.50. Each of these amendments also failed, and the original motion was finally passed.

Finance Chairman George Quick stated that "this semester is financially the worst. The reserve fund is down to nothing."

Council also allocated funds to 10 other organizations. Publicity Committee received $1665.50 by a unanimous vote. The Executive budget was allocated $1337.50. The vote was 10-0-1.

Other budgets allocated funds were A Cappella Choir, which received $50 in a 10-1-0 vote; Men's Glee which received $35 in a 10-0-1 vote.

Additional allocations were $3000 to drama, $78.60 to the Council of Organizations, $335.86 to the Associated Men Students and $550 to the Associated Women Students.

The Sophomore Class was allocated $17.03. The original request had been for $656. Gary Ettin, Sophomore Class president, spoke for his class, saying that the next Sophomore Class president would need some funds to start promotion.

When a council member, Nancy Wiegand, moved to amend the motion to $18, and, in its failure, another motion was made by Carol Harover, this time for $10, AS President Bob Roddick advised council, "Use your heads."

The final budget allocated last week was to the Recreation Association, requesting $848. This amount was amended to $603 and passed by a 10-3-0 vote.

Sheraton Group Cites College As Training Center

The Sheraton Corporation has again selected the Hotel and Restaurant department of the college to be one of the training schools to receive the Sheraton Corporation of America Award.

Three students from the fourth semester in the Hotel and Restaurant program have been nominated by student and faculty votes here. They are John Christian, Douglas Walker and Blair Sawyer. These three students are all eligible candidates for Associate in Arts degrees and Hotel and Restaurant certificates.

The three students chosen were required to write a letter to the Sheraton Corporation discussing why they should be selected as the final winner.

A snapshot of each candidate was also required.

To accompany each letter the hotel and restaurant department prepared a folder representative of candidate's background, performance and experience and sent it to the committee, chosen by the Sheraton Corporation for final selection.

The final winner will be announced at a dinner starting at 6 o'clock tonight at the Sheraton-Palace hotel. The graduating class from the hotel and restaurant department is invited.

The award to be presented consists of a plaque for the winning student and a permanent plaque for the department.

All qualified candidates were required to have a 2.5 grade point average, be within six units of graduation or eligible to graduate, carry 12 units and be enrolled in fourth semester practice work.

Selection here was based on classwork, ability and leadership.

Five Student Chefs Enter Competition In H&R Exposition

A team of five students from the college's hotel and restaurant department will participate in the National Restaurant Convention and Educational Exposition in Chicago, Tuesday, May 26, according to Lawrence B. Wong, H & R director of placement.

The student chefs are Robert Barney, Chris Hontalas, Michael Foley, Vince Kikuyawa and Michael Posten. Chef Roy Hammerich and Wong, will accompany them to the three-day convention which will be held at Chicago's McCormick Place.

During the exposition, students from eight colleges and schools that offer study in the culinary arts, will compete with each other for awards which are donated by the National Restaurant Association.

The student chefs will give demonstrations individually and will also work as a team to prepare a menu for 100 servings.

The menu assigned the local chefs calls for French onion soup aux croutons, breast of chicken, Canadian bacon, supreme sauce, browned new potatoes, asparagus and waldorf salad. Dessert will also be served.

Travel expenses, paid for by the National Restaurant Association, include hotel rooms, meals and all miscellaneous expenses.

During the three-day affair, students will also demonstrate their skill and knowledge in menu writing, purchasing procedures, merchandising and vegetable and meat identification.

In 1962, student chefs here won top honors at the exposition held at the San Francisco civic center, scoring 352 points out of a possible 400. They received a silver engraved platter.

Band, Orchestra Set College Hour Concert

The music department of the college will present a band and orchestra concert during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Meyer M. Cahn, band director, announced recently.

Cahn has organized a program that includes works by Couperin, Mozart, Debussy, Bartok, Milhaud, Bach and Schumann and features Bernstein's Overture to Candide.

Soloists Daniel Leblanc, Michael Megas and Myron Woo will be featured players and, according to Cahn, Rumanian folk dances by Bela Bartok will also be performed.

THEY CARED ENOUGH TO GIVE THE VERY BEST. Two students "pose" for the Guardsman photographer without alowing up the process of donation in the IFC Blood Drive held two weeks ago on campus. Although donations fell below the goal set, the drive was considered a success.

Donations Total 330 Pints In Successful IFC Blood Drive

With a total of 330 pints donated, the Inter-Fraternity Council-sponsored Blood Drive was a "tremendous success" here on May 7 and 8.

Bruce Thomas, IFC president, said that even though the goal of 750 pints was not reached, the drive was still tremendously successful.

"I'd like to thank everyone who donated blood," Thomas said, "and I also want to thank those 30 persons who volunteered to donate but were refused. They at least made an effort."

Thomas added that the California State Assembly has passed a resolution congratulating the college, the Associated Student President, and the IFC for their successful campus Blood Drives.

Competition among campus organizations resulted with a first place for Beta Tau fraternity. It donated 94 pints.

Alpha Sigma Delta was second with 50 pints, and the Faculty Association together with the Ram Ski Club placed third with a total of 13 pints each.

Thomas also remarked that the rally, held in conjunction with the Blood Drive, was attended by "probably the biggest number of students in recent years." He conservatively estimated the crowd at 2000.

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity sponsored the first official campus Blood Drive during the spring of 1956.

Color Sound Adds Sparkle To Annual Soph Ball May 29

Color Sound will illuminate the festivities of the annual sophomore ball, set for Friday, May 29, in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, Gary Ettin, Soph president, announced today.

Ray Hackett and his nine-piece band will provide the music, and a five-foot in diameter chandelier, sporting four colors, will flash hues on the dancers.

As the band hits a high note, red will beam from the fixture. A low note will cause green to appear. The remaining two colors will accompany the in-between notes.

Miss San Francisco, Miss Chinatown, Miss Bronze, John K. Chapel of KABL radio, a popular singing group and a KSFO personality will appear at the Ball, according to Ettin.

Winners of the King and Queen contest will be announced and awarded their prizes from the Soph-y collection.

Bids will be available at the silver pole beginning next Monday.

Forum Magazine Hits Ramporium Stands Monday

Forum, the college's literary magazine, is due on the stands in the Ramporium next Monday, May 25, Catherine Connolly, the magazine staff's advisor, announced today.

Each year students-turned-artists hopefully submit photography, poetry and prose to the Forum Club for publication in the magazine. Miss Connolly said that 139 articles were submitted, and of these the magazine's manuscript readers chose 30 for consideration by the editorial board.

One thousand magazines will be distributed and will be free to all Associated Student card holders. All others wishing a copy of Forum will have to pay 50 cents.

William Shakespeare's 400th birthday will be the theme of the Forum cover. Students in John O'Brien's advertising classes competed for cover-design selection. Hanley Yee, designer of last year's cover, has again repeated his feat and is winner of the contest.

The editorial board and all 28 manuscript readers of Forum are students and all material is written by students.

Members of the editorial board of the magazine are David Crooks, editor; Pat McLaughlin, assistant editor; Helen Land, advertising manager; Robert Miller, publicity director, and Vicki Powers, secretary.

Marriage Problems Topic Of C-Hour Talk

The Associated Women Students are following up last fall's conference entitled, Young Wife Plus, by having a question and answer period dealing with the Problems and Promises of Marriage during College Hour tomorrow in S-200.

According to Dean of Women Mary Golding, the special consultant for the meeting will be Viola Martin, in charge of the nurse education training program here. The nurse training classes will participate.

Students are to prepare questions in advance for Mrs. Martin, formerly director of Nursing Education at Children's Hospital in San Francisco.

Non-Resident Students To Pay Tuition Next Fall

By Jim Loveland

Students who are legally declared nonresidents of California will have to begin paying tuition for instruction here starting next fall, Gertrude Somerville, assistant registrar, stated recently.

"The real problem," she said, "will be in determining who is and who is not a legal resident. Anyone under 21 is considered to have legal residence only with his parents. If a person under 21 is living in California, but his parents are in Oregon, his legal residence is Oregon."

If a person is more than 21, he must have lived in California a year or more to be considered a legal resident. But if his parents have lived in California a year, and he moves here from another state to live with them, he is considered a legal resident without having to live here a year.

Another problem Miss Somerville anticipates might be that of a 19-year-old who has lived here for a year or more, has supported himself during that time but is not considered to be living at home. Is he or is he not a legal resident?

"When situations like this arise, legal advice will be requested," Miss Somerville said.

Nonresident students currently attending college here, will also begin paying tuition this fall.

The tuition will be $153 for 15 units and $10.40 a unit for six to 15 units. Enrollment in fewer than six units calls for no fee.

"The law applies not solely to new nonresidents enrolling here in the fall; it affects all out-of-state students. Nonresidents who are now enrolled here, have already received letters concerning their status," Miss Somerville emphasized.

The 70 state-supported two-year colleges in California will all be affected.

The state legislature passed the nonresident law many years ago, but it is only now that it can go into effect, because it has just recently been passed by the State Board of Education.

This new practice is expected to alleviate the burden taxpayers have previously carried for the education of out-of-state students.

Net Team Third In State

Spikers Sixth In Rainy NorCal Meet

With the 440 yard relay capturing first place, the Ram track team qualified seven men for the State meet and tied for sixth place in the Northern California Championships last Saturday at Santa Rosa.

Oakland won the meet with 78 points, followed by College of Sequoias 64½, San Mateo 63, Fresno 44, Reedley 38½, American River 35, San Francisco 24, Modesto 24, Contra Costa 20, Sacramento 18, San Jose 12, Diablo Valley 12, Hartnell 10, College of Marin 8, Santa Rosa 8, Coalinga 7, Chabot 6, Cabrillo 5, Foothill 2, Delta 1, and Menlo 1.

The 440 relay composed of Oliver Mitchell, Paul Richard, Tom Gardner, and Vern Bradford came from behind to post a new Ram mark of 42.3 seconds in the event despite running in the rain.

Third man Gardner pulled away from the pack around the turn and passed the baton to Bradford who finished the race 10 feet ahead of second place Oakland.

After the race Coach Lou Vasquez commented that four great efforts and three good passes are what win races and that's what happened today.

Pat Lewis proved the Rams' one-two punch in the field events as he qualified in both the shot and the discus.

Lewis heaved the shot 51 feet 4½ inches for a third place and followed with a fourth place in the discus with a toss of 147 feet.

In the 220 dash, Gardner nursing a bad knee following his relay save, also qualified for the State meet with a fourth in a blistering 22.4. In the trials on Tuesday he set a City College record of 21.7 in the event.

Gene Plotkin surprised 12 other runners in the two mile as he came from 10th place on the last lap to finish fourth in the race with a time of 9:29.6.

His time knocked four seconds off his own Ram mark of 9:33 set the week before the conference meet.

The big disappointment for the Rams was the 880 as both Ozzie Norris and Chris Ferrigno missed qualifying. Norris finished fifth with his 1:55.7 clocking, three feet from fourth place.

Ferrigno, who set a City College record of 1:55.5 in the conference meet, placed seventh.

The mile relay, minus Gardner, also failed to place with their 3:28.6 clocking.

After the meet Vasquez stated that he feels all the men who qualified for the Rams have a good chance to score in the State meet and the 440 relay will be the Rams biggest threat.

He also pointed out that Leroy Woods was allowed to compete in the meet after coming out of the hospital with a broken jaw. Woods almost qualified in the high jump.

This Saturday the Rams will travel to Modesto for their season finale in the State meet.

Suessmann, Chinn Post Tennis Upsets

Fred Suessmann and Vince Chinn, the only two Ram netmen to represent City College of San Francisco in last Saturday's State Junior College Tennis Championships in Fresno, captured a surprising third place finish among 18 schools, three points behind the winning Foothill College Owls.

Foothill racked up a total of eight points, El Camino placed second with 7, and San Diego took the fourth spot with four digits.

Coach Roy Diederichsen commented on the amazing play of the two Rams Saturday, "I never figured the team to do nearly this good. Prior to the match, the best I was hoping for was a fourth place finish. They did a tremendous job."

Suessmann and Chinn nearly won the doubles. They went to the semi-finals and met their old foes Rodney Kop and Dale MacGowan of Foothill only to be defeated in two sets.

In the quarter-final matches, Suessmann-Chinn upset second seeded Grendall-Kringer of Pierce College in a very tough 6-2, 0-6, 8-6 match.

In the singles, Suessmann squeezed by Hodges of Bakersfield in the quarter-finals 6-2, 4-6, and 9-7. He went on to the semi-finals, a step away from the top match, but was defeated by El Camino's very tough Ehlers 6-0 and 6-3. Rodney Kop once again proved his great skill by trouncing Ehlers 6-3 and 6-4.

On the surprising effort of Suessmann, Coach Diederichsen remarked "Suessmann was a come-through player again. He plays at his best under pressure." At the beginning and middle of the Rams' successful '64 season, Suessmann was number four man on the college net squad. Now he is rated as the fourth best tennis player in the state.

Vince Chinn was involved in a very tough series of matches throughout the championships. He went as far as the quarter-finals until he was stopped by Collaco of El Camino 6-3, 7-5.

Coach Diederichsen said that the competition was not as bad this year as it was last year. In 1963 the strong Ram net team grabbed the first place berth in the State meet at Santa Rosa with 11 points while Siska-Jilka won the doubles and Siska placed second in the singles.

This was the third time in a row the Ram netters finished second behind the Foothill College Owls in this month's tennis tournaments.

In the Golden Gate Conference tournament this month, the Rams were second behind the Owls and one point ahead of College of San Mateo.

Suessmann went all the way to the finals in the Northern California tourney leading the San Franciscans into the number two berth. —M. S.

Ram Nine Places Three On All-Conference Team

Three members of the Ram top nine were elected this week to the 1964 Golden Gate Conference All-Conference baseball teams. A board comprised of all the coaches in the league voted by ballot for those they considered the top 20 ballplayers of the season.

From the Rams, catcher Pete Glovanola was elected to the first team, and first sacker John "Butch" Bussanick and outfielder Mike Dunne, to the second team.

Glovanola (.229) returned to the Rams this year after acting as a mainstay in the San Francisco "down to the wire" pennant drive in the 1963 season.

Bussanick (.273) also a veteran of last year's campaign, slugged his way into the second team lineup and accounted for three triples.

Dunne, spunky left fielder, hit most consistently of the Rams, at one point in the season collecting 10 hits in 17 trips.

Dunne (.333) led the 1964 Rams in batting, hits, runs batted in, doubles and extra base hits.

Of the 20 elected to All-Conference slots, Chabot College, which finished second in the league, had the most representatives with five.

RAMblings —City College Builds Great Athletes, Too

By Fred Wales

THERE WILL always be one dissenter in a group or in a team that will say, "So they played for City College this year! Big deal; what did it get them?"

The answer to this question could fill a book, but here are a few examples of what some former players here did "get."

Football player Dave Urrea used his ability to earn him a berth at the University of California where he was selected Northern California lineman of the week last year. His teammate, Ron Coleman, earned himself a trip to Utah and a scholarship there.

To ask this question of soccer players Gary DeLong and Al Kaubus, the questioner had better hurry or go to Tokyo. Both will represent the United States in the 1964 Olympics.

Basketball stars Elton McGriff and Brad Duggan could probably give a good reason. McGriff led his Creighton team to the NCAA Regional title this year.

TOKYO-bound Gary DeLong.

Duggan has stayed closer to home and has led San Francisco State's team in scoring for two years.

One former basketball great from this college can be found right on campus. Ask Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman about his experience as the leading scorer for the college's first championship basketball team.

Tennis player Bob Siska used his prowess to take him to Wimbleton, England, three years in a row. This Junior Davis Cupper went four sets with Rod Laver when he was 16. His teammates last year, Rich Anderson and Bob Murio, managed to stay together as a doubles team when both received tennis scholarships to San Jose State.

In baseball it will suffice to mention only last year's team which had three of its members signed to professional ball team contracts. All received bonuses for their signatures and have the start of a career at their feet.

Unknown to many persons is the list of great boxers produced here. Such names as Irish Bobby Scanlon, golden gloves champ Frank Suega and more recently last year's grad, Gil Gallegos who is in the semi's for the 1964 Olympic boxing team.

The list of athletic successes from this college is long and impressive including such greats as Ollie Matson, Don Stillwell and Burl Toler.

The advantages realized by the above mentioned athletes are apparent but to the other members of these teams there was something gained also; in a word — satisfaction.

Six For Fame

Six former athletes will be on the ballot this week for the selection of 1964 members to the College's Hall of Fame.

Two of the six will be selected by a committee of four judges, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, Jack Gaddy, athletic director, Tom Wilson, health department and counselor Bill Fischer.

Nominated this year are Cleo Cofield, Alex Darnes, Bob Farber, Jim Lynch, Tom Pigee and Bill Sakovich.

Cofield was the leading scorer for the 1958-60 basketball teams and selected as All-Conference two years in a row, as well as Most Valuable Player in 1960 and All-Santa Maria Tourney team member.

Darnes was a two-sport athlete lettering in football and track but is nominated for his performance as a discus thrower on the undefeated 1961 track team. He holds the college's record of 167 feet and scored a second in the State meet with 162 feet.

Farber led the 1959 and 1960 baseball teams in hitting with an unbelievable .422 batting average.

He was a member of the All-Big Eight team in 1960 and selected as Most Valuable Player.

Lynch was the leading scorer on the college's first soccer championship team in 1959 and again in 1960. He was a member of the Northern California Intercollegiate Conference Team in 1960 and scored two goals as a member of the North All-Star team.

Pigee led the 1960 and 1961 football teams in rushing with 675 yards in 1960 and 742 yards in 1961. His average gain per carry was 7.4 yards and he also led the team in scoring in 1961 with 70 points. He was a member of the All-Conference team both years and was MVP in 1960 and tied for Back Of the Year in 1961.

Sakovich was the college's second All-American swimmer and in 1960 set the Ram marks in the 100 and 200 backstroke that still stand today. He was selected as the MVP of the swim team in 1960.

These six athletes were selected from a tentative list of 20 former greats. The winners for this year will be announced next week.

Baseball Team Ends On, Off Season With 10-11 Record

By Pete Franklin

The 1964 season found the City College Rams hoping for the best, and prepared for the worst, and Coach Ernie Domecus' big nine finished the season with some of each.

The hometowners battled through the season, seldom varying from their .500 average which kept them close to the center of the Golden Gate Conference.

San Francisco jumped to a three won-two lost position in the first two weeks of play, then won and lost alternately with great regularity, until near mid-season when they slipped into the doldrums of despair at 6-9 following a losing streak.

The Rams bounced back though, winning four of their remaining six games, to finish, 10-11, and in a three-way tie for fourth spot in the league with College of San Mateo and Diablo Valley College.

The home nine split all save one of their seven doubleheaders, and dropped every team that finished ahead of them at least once during the 1964 outing.

"The league was a tough one, and anyone could have come out on top or on the bottom. This year it wasn't us, but fourth place in this conference is nothing to be ashamed of," Domecus said.

Pitching and fielding seemed to be a chief weak spot in the 1964 drive. Only one pitcher, Brad Rothback, 5-3, had a winning season. Miscues were the plague of the Rams throughout the season, as they averaged 2.4 errors per game.

Final 1964 season statistics:

One-Win Linkers Hope For Future

A Ram golf team which finished the season with only one win in a very evenly-matched league showed promise for better things to come at the close of the season.

All of the regular City College golfers are freshmen this year with the exception of Mike Selsnik.

"If the same men return next year," Coach Grover Klemmer said, "the team has very good potential for next year.

"We did very well in our last three matches, and our top three players showed promise in these matches. Jim Schroder is a very fine and capable golfer. Mike Moore and Mike Soden improved as the season progressed."

Of the possible chance of winning a title next year, the golf coach commented, "I think with a year of setting down, we might be a contender. But then at this time you never know what the other team is going to have."

The Ram linkers ended the season with Schroder leading the team with a 77 season average. He shot 84, 79, 82, 73, 75 for a total of 385.

Moore averaged his season scores of 80, 82, 84, 79 and 73 to 79.9. Soden came across with an 83.3 shooting 85, 83, 89, 84, 80, 79. Selsnik hovered in the eighties for an 84.5, and Pete Eden handed in a seasonal 86.7. The sixth man of the team, Steve Parish, averaged 84.8.

Divine Ones Face Zeta Phi Sigma In Sports Night

The Devine Ones and Zeta Phi Sigma will meet for the championship in this semester's Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural basketball competition at the AMS Sports Night next Wednesday in the men's gymnasium.

Activities are scheduled to start at 7 p.m., Roger Kaufman, AMS president, said.

Games that put the teams in the playoff were played May 12. The Divine Ones downed the Filipino Club, 53-44, and Zeta Phi Sigma edged Alpha Kappa Rho, 36-34, after going into two overtimes.

Zeta Phi Sigma and Alpha Kappa Rho were tied, 26-26, at the regular time, 32-32, at the first overtime.

The Zetes' high scorer, Larry Minnich, made 18 points, and Alpha Kappa Rho's "Big" John Wallace shot 12.

Loser in the playoff will play a faculty team including Terry Kilpatrick, Larry Lawson, Lou Mottley, Gary Schaffer and Robert Quigley. Several boxing events are also on the program.

Sports Night's program will start with the film, Highlights of the 1963 World Series and will be followed by the championship game.

Trophies to teams and individuals will be presented at intermission.

RA Holds Awards Social Tomorrow

Recreation Association members have scheduled this semester's Awards Social for 6 p.m. tomorrow in the women's gymnasium, according to Fran Richardson, RA president.

First semester awards, shields, second semester awards, blocks, and third and fourth semester stars will be awarded to deserving members who maintained a 2.0 average and missed no more than three RA activities.

The awards to be presented are in the following activities: fencing, volleyball, folk and modern dancing, Miss Richardson said.

At the Monterey Sports Day held at Monterey Peninsula College on May 9, the RA volleyball team placed third. Insufficient time canceled a playoff against the second place team.

RA bowlers took a second place and Pam Maul bowled a high game of 197.

Activities such as archery, swimming, volleyball, tennis, golf and faculty golf were held on the Monterey campus. Bowling and badminton competition was conducted off the Monterey campus.

Gary Ettin Assumes Presidency With 15 Other Unopposed AS Officers For Fall Semester

By Ann Weill

Gary Ettin was elected fall Associated Student President in elections last week which also saw the other 15 unopposed candidates elevated to their respective AS offices, the defeat of the five amendments which appeared on the ballot, and a turnout of 840 voters.

Ettin, with 655 votes, claimed the Associated Students Presidency on a ballot that carried no opposition.

Roger Kaufman, present Associated Men Student president, had been in the running for the presidency but was disqualified the day before the election and after last week's Guardsman had gone to press.

Wardene Oliver, presently serving as Associated Women Student President, is now AS Vice President-elect for Fall, 1964, with a vote of 631.

Barbara Kontis, present freshman member of Student Council, will succeed Miss Oliver as AWS president. She received 499 votes.

Art Gershman will become AMS President next semester. He also received 499 votes.

Terry Cloney, presently Freshman Class president, received 593 votes to become the Sophomore Class president for Fall, 1964.

Gary Freund, with 551 votes, succeeds Cloney as next semester's Freshman Class President.

Sophomore members of Student Council next fall will be Mary Janc Super (450), Dennis Sweency (439), Fran Richardson (425), Mary Ann Ducommun (441) and Bob Moorefield (400).

Candidates for freshman members of couneil were elected as follows: Carol Anselmi (458), Earl Braverman (377), Toni Suldickas (385), Esther Szamus (367), Miriam Petranker (341) and Art Lindholf (375).

Election Commissioner Paul Coke, who resigned Thursday, reported that all proposed amendments failed, since each lacked the two-thirds vote stipulated. The amendments received votes ranging from 341 to 476, but still failed.

Coke had stipulated that a majority of the votes cast was needed for election to each position. This would have meant that 421 votes — one more than half the 840 cast — were needed for election to office.

This stipulation was over-ruled Thursday by Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman. He stated that the ruling was "a calculated step taken by the administration to support the new President with as full a slate of officers as was possible."

Although Student Council has protested Hillsman's ruling, the administrative decision is expected to stand, since there is nothing in the AS Constitution stipulating how voting for candidates are to be counted.

In past semesters plurality, not majority, vote has been the rule and the precedent.

Acting Election Commissioner Arnie Kamrin declared that he was shocked by the faculty renunciation of Coke's majority-rule decision.

Kamrin commented, "I'm sure these voters cared enough about voting to express the opinion they wanted and were not apathetic.

GARY ETTIN, president-elect of the Associated Students who ran uncontested in the student elections held last week.

Summer Session Registration To Close June 22

Last day of registration for the summer session and also the last day on which changes of program may be made, is Monday, June 22, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, stated last week.

Failure to withdraw a student's registration on or before June 18, will result in the student's name being included on the class lists and final "F" grades recorded if he does not attend the classes in which he is enrolled.

Filing of an official withdrawal card in the registrar's office in person is required to withdraw from a class, Miss Learnard warned, adding that telephone calls will not be accepted.

Friday, July 3, is the last day to drop a course without penalty, she said, and Friday, July 10, the last day on which to take a leave of absence without penalty.

Students leaving without submitting official leave of absence blanks in the registrar's office will have "F" grades recorded on their records.

Miss Learnard also announced that there will be "no late registration next fall."

Registration for the Fall Semester will take place on September 8, 10 and 11. September 9, Admission Day, is a holiday.

The last day to add a class or change a section for the Fall Semester is September 18, and the last day to drop a class without penalty is November 4.

Roddick Reviews Term

By Charlotte Wong

Establishment of definite procedures in budget debates and in committee work and the elimination of party lines in his administration have been among the chief attempts of Associated Student President Bob Roddick during his term of office.

"This has been a good semester; things have been quiet and there have been few incidents," Roddick evaluated.

Commenting on the financial situation before his election last semester, Roddick vowed, "All parties will be consulted beforehand and asked to be present at the council meeting when their budget is scheduled to be approved."

This policy has been executed as stated, and council meetings have been smoothly run by limiting budget discussions to two pros and two cons.

He had also stated in his platform, "If cuts in budgets are absolutely necessary, I'd rather see each request cut a certain percentage than have just a few budgets take the full impact."

This procedure has also been observed and in doing so Roddick set a precedent by exercising his veto power over the Council's allocation of $9,504.41 to the Pep Band, which would have received 25 per cent of the total Fall, 1964, budget.

The formation of a student appeals board for protest of unfair actions and the reorganization of the Rally Committee with six members were also in his program.

Because AS Adviser Sherm Elworthy and Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman did not approve, hopes for a board were never realized.

Under Rally Commissioner Larry Casalegno, the committee has been reorganized and strengthened, with song girls and yell leaders in attendance at each game.

Looking to the future, Roddick said he hopes some of these procedures will be observed by the new AS President next semester.

Success Stories — 33 Former Students Return To Teach

By Mike Smith

Thirty-three instructors at this college have one thing in common — they all attended City College of San Francisco as undergraduates.

Former students who are now teaching here are George Baffico, Hyman Berston, Samuel Carpenter, Donald Cunningham, Henry De Iongh, Ernest Domecus, Gloria Dunn, Paul Fisher, Harry Frustuck, Roy Hamerich, Doris Heraried, Ralph Hillsman, Maryhope Jacks, Edward Jordan;

Robert Kaar, Robert Kovacic, Robert Lasley, Wilbur McKenzie, Kenneth Molino, Harry Nelson, Edward Nylund, Elizabeth Park, Harry Payne, Oleg Reoutt, Barbara Rosenthal, James Sehon, Wallace Sellman, George Stewart, William Svabek, Louis Vasquez, Vivian Ward, John Wilczek, and Lawrence Wong.

The only graduate now on the administration staff is Hillsman, dean of men.

When Hillsman was attending the college in 1935-1936, he was the captain of the Rams' first championship basketball team, coached by Louis Conlan, now president of the college.

In August, 1955, Hillsman was appointed to the position of assistant dean of student activities, and then he was named dean of men.

Among the other 32 former students, more than a dozen fields are represented. Baffico and Kaar, both graduates of University of California, are two of the college's geology instructors; and Nelson and Mrs. Jacks are horticulture instructors here.

In the field of physics, Reoutt is back at the college to help others who wish to go into the field.

Schon and Sellman are teaching engineering in an area where "opportunities are expected to be good for quite some time."

The field of mathematics is represented by McKenzie.

More of the college's former students are with the business department than with any other particular field. Frustuck and Stewart, for instanee, are graduates of the University of California; Ward and Delongh hail from Stanford University and Berston comes from San Francisco State.

Next to business, English is the most popular subject to teach among the former students. Cunningham and Jordan are two of the more than 20 English instructors teaching here. Fisher and Lasley are also in this department, currently as substitutes.

Hotel and restaurant instructors Hammerich, Nylund, Nelson and Payne are all graduates of the college. Wong, H&R personnel director, was graduated from San Francisco State. Payne is here on a part-time basis.

Domecus, Mrs. Dunn and Vasquez are back at the college directing the physical education classes and sports.

Svabek, a graduate of San Francisco State is the major force in the graphic arts program.

Another former student, top in her field, is Miss Hernried who teaches French. She has a Bacheior's degree from the University of California, a Master's from Mills College, and a Ph. D. from the University of Paris.

The remaining courses of life science, photography, public relations, art, and social science are represented by Carpenter, Molino, Mrs. Rosenthal, Kovacic and Wilczek respectively.

A Thing To Behold — Everyone Wins In AS Elections Here

THE STUDENT ELECTIONS at City College this semester were indeed a thing to behold! Nobody lost, no feelings were hurt, and anybody who wanted an office got one with a minimum of effort.

Last week the students who took the time to stop by the polls were greeted by a ballot that looked like a refugee from the fascist elections of Europe in the 1930's. One name, one office. However, at least the fascists could fill up the ballot with enough candidates to go around for all of the elective offices.

An organized political party took part in last week's elections, and, from the quantity and quality of posters they put up around campus, it can be assumed that they spent quite a lot of money. The money spent on campaigning this semester was wasted. There was no need for campaigning.

Time was another wasted commodity in the election. Many students donated much of their spare time to man the ballot boxes, check the eligibility of the candidates, and take an active part in the promotion of the affair.

Except for the amendments to the Associated Student Constitution, there was no need even to hold the elections.

In a Guardsman interview last week, the two candidates for AS President (AND LAST WEEK THERE WERE TWO) agreed that student apathy towards the college and its activities was the root of most campus problems. They wanted more persons to take an interest in the Associated Students.

Well, they were right. Student government at City College reached its lowest ebb in history last week.

Where we once thought the major problem was to get students out to vote, we now find another — that of getting students to run for office.

Up to a day before the election, the office of AS President was contested. However, at the last minute, one of the candidates was disqualified because of attendance AFTER the second midterm period. Article VI, section 2, of the AS Constitution states that a candidate for the AS Presidency must have a 2.3 grade average in a minimum of 12 units AT the second midterm.

The "disqualified" candidate was eligible to run for and hold office as of the second midterm.

Others thought differently, and the voters had NO CHOICE come election time.

That's 30 For The Semester

WITH A SIGH OF RELIEF, and perhaps a twinge of regret, we now publish the last issue of The Guardsman for the Spring, 1964, semester.

We hope that the majority of students believe that we have fulfilled our obligation as the major organ of communication at City College. We have presented a well-rounded coverage of campus news events, and our columns and feature stories have been considered both enlightening and amusing.

The problems of the present semester are almost over. That time of fantasy known as summer vacation is rapidly approaching, and the only thing that stands in the way are minor harrassments, final examinations, and they will disappear in short order.

Except for those attending summer session, the responsibilities and obligations to academic life can be forgotten for a while.

The end of a semester means many things to many persons. For some it will be the end of their formal education, and they will be venturing into the world to make their fortunes. Others will be transferring to four-year colleges or universities, and still others will return here for more lower division education.

Whatever students plan to do, The Guardsman wishes them luck and success. The future holds new ideas, new problems and new friends, but wherever you go, there will always be the old ideas, old problems and old friends to make you feel at home.

Fan Mail For Buffie Browne

Admirers Ask About Popular 18-Year-Old

By Herm Kilgerman

Bags of fan mail and scores of personal inquiries spell success for any person.

And such is the case with Buffie Browne, who has recently left the hallowed halls of City College to live in Los Gatos.

"Students come into my office every day to ask about her," Muriel Furlong, secretary to the deans of men and women, and formerly self-appointed private secretary to Buffie, stated. "I even get fan mail addressed to her," she added.

"One day a former Associated Student President of the college came back for a visit," Miss Furlong said, "and the first thing he asked me was, 'how's Buffie?' I was even more amazed when a student who was graduated from here ten years ago visited us and asked the same question."

Buffie, "assistant" to now retired Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, made a big hit at the college—and not only with the male population; coeds and most of the faculty were also among her admirers.

Buffie, while here, never neglected her chores. Each morning, she trotted through Science Hall with Dean Browne, firmly grasping the day's copy of the sporting green of the San Francisco Chronicle and, on Wednesday's, The Guardsman, of course.

She was also appointed unofficial postman for Science Hall, because on numerous occasions she would be assigned to deliver important messages or records to offices on the first floor.

The popularity of Buffie didn't stop at the college level, however. In 1955, Herb Caen, serving his second hitch with the San Francisco Chronicle, gave space to Buffie in his column, and she became known throughout the Bay Area.

Sharing the billing in Caen's column with her was Lee Ann Meriwether, City College student and Miss America, 1955, who boasts that she sent 'love-letters' to Buffie.

In 1959, when Dean Browne retired to his Los Gatos home, so did Buffie, although she was barely in her teens. It wasn't complete retirement for her, obviously, for she continued her work here for some time.

When Buffie wants to relax, she can go to her own special corner of the house where she finds privacy and the necessary comforts.

Does Miss Furlong miss Buffie? "Of course, but she often comes back to college to visit us. She stayed with me during Easter vacation, and last year the Brownes gave her permission to accompany me on a tour of Europe," Miss Furlong said.

Despite Buffie's enthusiasm, energy and apparent success, she does have one handicap. Buffie can neither read, write nor converse with other people in the usual manner.

But, then, what 18-year-old copper-colored, brown-eyed toy cocker spaniel can?

Colleges And Little Theaters Offer Road To The Big Time

By Jacqui Hannaford

Almost as dramatic as drama itself is the continuing rise of theatrical interest in the American college.

According to the American Educational Theatre Journal, there are approximately 100 persons working for doctoral degrees in 28 categories from colleges in the United States alone.

Kenneth Macgowan, student producer at Harvard, producer at Hollywood and theater critic and writer, stated at a convention in 1956, "The educational theater of tomorrow is ...shaping the future of a theater that must be creative as well as re-creative."

At this college the drama department provides beginning and advanced acting. It also offers one class in make-up and a class in stage lighting.

...Along with these sometimes comedire predictions for anyone interested in attempting the theater. Rarely is encouragement given; there is often discouragement.

Though leaders in the movie industry agree that the need for new young talent is always pressing, one of the most difficult things for an unknown to do is break into the business. Solutions suggested by insiders include "forget it" and "come back with experience."

John D. Lawrence, a Screen Extras Guild executive, has offered more than stormy platitudes. He claims that the three main requirements for a career of this type are "talent, experience and exposure" — in that order.

He readily admits that few persons can judge their own talent, and thus, they should work as much as possible to gain experience. "If you show your nervousness at an important audition, you're through." But he is adamant about foolish dedication.

"Learn and be seen ... set yourself a time limit; if no one is interested after you've reached the end of your time ... get out and do something else," is his advice.

Lawrence began his own career as an actor in a touring passion play when organization was an unknown word in the industry. He worked as an adagio dancer and later as a free lance bit player for various movie studios.

On this past and continuing experience he bases his counsel to the newcomer. "The best way to gain experience is in a little theater group... utilize the college facilities to learn the basics, and then begin in a little theater."

A Merchant Marine veteran of World War II and two major Philippine invasions, Lawrence pursues his smaller wars as policeman and mediator between the extras and the studios.

The most pressing disturbances are "money," but the most heartbreaking is the misguided extra who thinks the extra's pay of $25 a day is the first step toward the grandeur of stardom. Major studios seldom see any point in paying the actor's wages of $100 a day and up to a person who has accepted the lesser extra's money.

With approximately 3000 persons holding SEG cards, there is little room for argument.

Automation

Hoffer Urges Utilization Of Inner Resources

By Charlotte Wong

He never loses sleep over nuclear bombs or Latin America crises, but he cannot keep from "shooting his mouth off" on the topic of automation.

Speaking to Paul Schmidt's political science class here recently, author Eric Hoffer warned students against the erosion of their natural resources through disuse as brought about by automation.

In a passionate plea for an efficient society, not one that knows how to use its natural but its human resources, Hoffer emphasized the need for man to "finish God's work" by realizing the resources within himself.

A longshoreman for 20 years, Hoffer is the author of the critically acclaimed, The True Believer, which discusses the psychology behind mass movements and fanatics.

A former migratory field laborer and a gold miner, he is a self-educated man who is now a social science consultant to the faculty and students at the University of California at Berkeley.

Deeply concerned over the loss of 40,000 jobs per week, Hoffer commented that it would be worse for a majority of the American mass, one of the most skilled and competent in the world, to be made superfluous by automation than to have it incinerated by the bomb.

As a solution to this cybernetic problem, Hoffer suggested the establishment of a new society consisting of two social orders, one in Oregon for the employed, the other in California for the unemployed as run by the University of California, with freedom of movement between the two.

On a more personal level, Hoffer spoke of his own education. He began writing after acquiring a "taste for a good sentence." This "taste" was acquired on one occasion when, suspecting he might be snowbound, Hoffer bought a thick book, title unseen, with small print and no pictures.

The book contained essays by Montaigne, and when the expected snowstorm came, Hoffer had time to read the book three times. By the end of his San Bernardino stay, Hoffer couldn't speak without quoting Montaigne.

It seems obvious to the observer that Hoffer is doing his utmost to "finish God's work."

Election Head Resigns At Council In Furor Over Dean's Decision On Voting Results

Argument over the results of last week's Associated Student elections here and the official resignation of Election Commissioner Paul Coke overshadowed the passage of Fall, 1964, budgets at last Thursday's Student Council meeting.

In his report on the elections, Coke protested Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman's decision that although seven candidates for council seats had not won a majority of the votes cast they be seated on Student Council next semester.

(The decision does follow precedent that plurality vote equals election.)

Coke and his assistant, Arnie Kamrin, voiced immediate disagreement with this administrative decision.

"A lot of work has gone into making up election rules, arranging precincts and seeking volunters, and now it seems that all our work has been for nothing," Coke stated.

Council members joined Coke and Kamrin in their contention. AS Vice President Lynn Goodrich moved that council go on record as objecting to the administrative decision as to the election of the seven council members in question. The motion passed 10-0-1.

AS President Bob Roddick then appointed a four-student committee to investigate the situation further and confer with Dean Hillsman.

Later, Coke apologized for his "outburst" and tendered his resignation from the post of Election Commissioner. Roddick accepted the resignation.

Student Council also found time last week to pass several organizational budgets.

A few requests were still to be approved, including the Pep Band budget, vetoed by Roddick on May 14 after approval from council the previous Tuesday.

Among recent council allocations was $812 to the Rally Committee, $330 to Recreation Association fencing, $2317.20 to varsity basketball, $546 to J.V. basketball, $765 to the physical education department, and $867 to the Freshman Class.

Council also passed the Campus Police budget of $2836.50.

After listening to a defense of the football budget by coach Art "Dutch" Elston, council then allocated $5335.-21 to the fall football team.

Soccer received an allocation of $1311 by a vote of 10-0-1, and Cross Country was allocated $662 by a vote of 11-0-0.

In discussing the administrative budget, council member Loralee Lando, apparently in a generous mood, moved to amend the original request to allocate $759 to the administration by inserting $760 "to make it an even number."

As a body, counell was not in a generous frame of mind and passed a budget for the original "uneven" $759 by a 9-2-0 vote.

The last request to be acted upon last week was that of the controller. Council approved $2588 in a 10-2-0 vote.

Off Guard

By P.H.D.

ACCORDING to the calendar, those lazy, hazy, crazy days of summer officially begin on June 21. However, according to the administration, students of this college will officially begin the merry mayhem of their summer activities after completion of finals on June 12.

Besides being the warmest and the most wonderful time of the year, exactly what does this season called summer really mean?

For those students interested in balaneing their budgets, summer means work, work, and more hard work. Then there is always the student's student. Attached and dedicated to his books, summer vacation is a thing called summer school and that usually means plenty of study, study and more study.

Summer for the travel-minded students means joining the jet-set for a trip to the New York World's Fair. This type of student boasts he is able to make such a trip because of his fine planning and his excellent foresight.

(The fact that his parents financed him with the lean green is of course completely incidental.)

Students just planning to loaf around their homes for their entire summer vacation and indulge in nothing except eating and sleeping are in for a great shock. The mothers of these individuals have other ideas in their minds, and before long these students will be drafted into the DMS and DTDB.

If by a slim, lucky chance there happen to be a few students left who claim they haven't as yet been called to serve in this great organization, DMS and DTDB means simply—Dusting, Mopping, Scrubbing and Do The Dishes Brigade!

And if you're smart, don't let your mother hear you say, "It could never happen to me." Many complaining members of the organization swore it couldn't be done but lived to find out it could.

The mere mention of the word draft strikes a note of horror in the minds of all men students—especially so if they plan to terminate their education and the friendship of their favorite gal! Who knows, the basic moment of truth may be nearer than they think. (And don't say it can never happen; just take one long look at some of your friends in the DMS and DTDB!)

Students lucky enough to have their service hitch behind them, as well as rich parents or girl friends will undoubtedly be making the scene at Russian River, Santa Cruz, Muscle Beach, and if their benefactors are very rich, they could even see how the other half lives in Atlantic City, Cape Cod and Miami Beach!

And yes, summertime means something very special to parents. If they are normal, they will probably be stocking up on their tranquilizers, aspirin, ear-plugs and food! (It almost sounds from this statement that parents aren't planning to enjoy their summer.)

Perhaps, as a gesture of appreciation to one's parents, students could scrape together enough money to send the folks on a little trip — say a cruise that lasts for three months. Actually there is no problem as far as money goes. Any student could always start paying now and let the folks finish paying later. (If there is a chance his parents don't especially have a fantastic sense of humor, he might be wise to disregard this suggestion.)

At any rate, whatever students are planning to do with their vacations is an individual matter. Whether your summer is spent in the Westlake area of California or on the shore in Wildwood, New Jersey — Summertime means fun time for all.

Fred Wales To Head Fall Guardsman Staff

Fred Wales was unanimously elected Editor In Chief of the Fall, 1964, semester Guardsman by the newspaper's editorial board in a meeting held last week. He will succeed Boyd Burtnett.

Wales was this semester's Sports Editor.

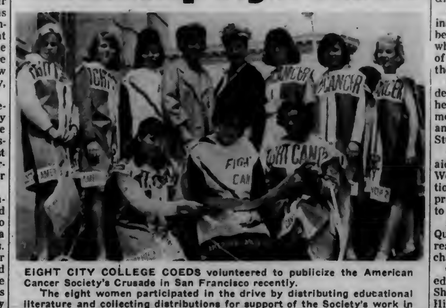
The editorial board also elected Pat Dutter, this semester's Staff Editor, to the position of Managing Editor. Mike Smith will be Sports Editor and Ann Weill News Editor.

Bea Takeuchi, this semester's Feature Editor, will hold the position of Staff Writer.

Members of this semester's editorial staff who are not returning are Burtnett, present Editor in Chief, Michel Janicot, present Managing Editor and Charlotte Wong, present News Editor.

Campus Police Enforce New Law

The new city ordinance which makes it unlawful to leave keys in unlocked cars will be enforced in the future by the Campus Police in student parking areas.



Campus Policemen have been ordered to issue a citation to anyone who leaves the ignition keys in the ignition or in plain sight in an unlocked car.

The boys in blue will also begin a strict clampdown on jaywalkers.

Although both of the new restrictions are expected to be met by loud and "vicious" criticism from students, "all is for their own good," a Campus Police officer declared.

The new laws to be enforced on campus are considered justified because San Francisco police statistics indicate that almost half of the cars stolen had an unlocked ignition or had the keys in the ignition.

Coeds Help Fight Cancer

EIGHT CITY COLLEGE COEDS volunteered to publicize the American Cancer Society's Crusade in San Francisco recently.

The eight women participated in the drive by distributing educational literature and collecting distributions for support of the Society's work in cooperation with the Clement Street Merchants' Association.

The eight women, (from left in front row), Ilene Winick, Linda Guthertz, Rose Thomas; (from left, second row) Kathy Smith, Cynthia Colt, Ciara Silva, Barbara Fiahavan, Pat Fiahavan and Diana Weinkamp flank Mrs. Elizabeth Bernheimer, educational director of the San Francisco Branch of the American Cancer Society, and Mrs. Vesta Gray, member of the society.

The group of women distributed pamphlets on two succeeding Saturday mornings preceding the drive in the Irving and Clement Street areas.

All eight coeds were asked by the society for their help through Dean of Women Mary Golding and Patricia McCarthy, life science instructor.

Six Faculty Members Retire

Mayo Leaves Teaching After 27 Years Of Service

DEAN WILLIAM MAYO, retiring dean of instruction after 27 years of teaching here, plans to pursue his boating hobby.

By Herm Kilgerman

Six faculty members, each with at least 17 years of service here, will retire from their professional teaching careers at the end of this semester.

In alphabetical order, they are John Fawcett, French instructor; William Marsh, business instructor; William Mayo, dean of instruction; Alva McMillan, counselor; Ruth Patterson, business instructor, and Albert Peterson, chemistry instructor.

Fawcett came to the college in 1946 as a French instructor and retires in that capacity. However, during his tenure here, Fawcett also taught sociology and political science.

In 1961, he was asked by Coordinator of Instruction Lloyd Luckmann to operate the college's newly installed language laboratory, located in Cloud Hall. He accepted this appointment, along with teaching several advanced French courses.

"It has been a very rewarding experience working with the students in the lab," Fawcett stated, "and I hope to be able to continue a similar type program after my retirement."

Twenty-five years ago, when he first came to the college, Marsh developed the first insurance courses within the business department.

Now, a quarter-century later, Marsh is retiring with plans to relax or "possibly work on a part-time basis somewhere-else."

Beginning as an engineering instructor, Mayo became a member of the college's Division of Instruction seven years ago. The college, as a whole, has benefited from his services since 1937.

Mayo helped develop the university parallel and engineering technology curriculum here with the assistance of Cecil Aggeler, who is now head of the engineering department. Mayo also organized the engineering liaison committee of the state.

"This is an official body which directs and coordinates engineering curricula among the state colleges and universities," he explained.

As Dean of Instruction, Mayo supervised the chemistry, physics, mathematics, geology, geography, architecture and engineering departments.

As for plans after retirement, Mayo intends to pursue his hobby of small boating.

"I have been doing something which has been personally helpful to the students and also very gratifying to me," McMillan commented in summing up his 18 years of counseling here. During seven of these years he was head of the counseling department.

McMilan has also served on the legislative and retirement committees of the Faculty Association. An around-the-world tour is in his plans after residing for a year in a retirement community in Sonoma County.

Noted in the second edition of Who's Who Of Living American Women, Mrs. Patterson will end 24 years of service in the college's business department next month. She was chosen as an entry in the book because of her numerous business and professional associations, both on a state and national level.

Here, she introduced the office-machine training curriculum. "I've been teaching the same thing ever since," Mrs. Patterson remarked.

Although she came to the college in 1940, Mrs. Patterson has taught since she was 21. During the war years, she trained recruits at the Presidio in office procedures and taught Civil Service employees to type up to 30 words a minute.

Mrs. Patterson has also been of assistance to The Guardsman in preparing addressograph sets of mail wrappers so that the paper could send its weekly issues to 100 outside interests.

What does she plan to do after retirement? "Everything that I've wanted to do but couldn't while I was an instructor," she replied. For Mrs. Patterson this will include a probable trip around the world via freighter.

Known to colleagues and friends as "Little Pete," Albert Peterson will conclude 17 years of personal service in the chemistry department here at the end of the semester. He is particularly noted for his vast collection of snapshots from vacation spots he has visited over the years.

Upon retiring, Peterson plans to spend his time enjoying his new home in Grants Pass, Oregon.

A colleague of Peterson's recently wrote a brief tribute to the retiring chemistry instructor which was published in the Faculty Association's Faculty Focus. Although meant for Peterson, it could apply to the other retiring instructors.

It reads, in part, "We all feel poorer because we are losing (him) but also much richer because (he) has been here."

Student Government Honors John O'Brien And Ann Weill

The Outstanding Faculty and Student Awards for service to student government were presented last night to John O'Brien and Ann Weill, respectivey, while Finance Chairman George Quick received a special surprise award for outstanding endeavor.

The presentations were made at the semiannual Student Council dinner in Smith Hall.

O'Brien and Miss Weill were nominated and selected by vote of members of Student Council. Only those who are not presidents or chairmen of organizations may be selected for the student award.

Miss Weill is a fourth semester student who has served the college as head of the drama make-up department, as an actress in various plays and as The Guardsman reporter on Student Council meetings.

An art instructor, O'Brien has aided Student Council, the Associated Women Students and other organizations by making banners, poster and program covers. He has also helped to print certificates and AS cards.

A special trophy was presented to Quick. As Finance Chairman, he has read all the reports of past finance chairmen here.

Gifts of appreciation were presented by Student Council to AS Adviser Sherm Elworthy, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman and, by the AWS to Dean of Women Mary Golding.

Executive officers, appointive cabinet, honorary appointive cabinet, freshman and sophomore members of Student Council received certificates, pins and guards.

A certificate was also awarded to Terry Ellis for her work as Concert-Lecture Series and Student-Faculty Relations comm.ttee chairman.

Amori Predicts Scarcity Of Jobs

College students will experience extreme difficulty in obtaining jobs during the coming summer vacation, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

Surveys conducted in the five San Francisco Bay Area counties indicate that about 20,000 students will compete for summer jobs, but only about two out of eight will get them.

The general economic outlook is excellent, Amori said, but there are too many students for the number of jobs available. The picture is expected to be worse, according to Amori, before it shows improvement.

Men students, 21 years of age and up, are needed for full time summer jobs with a national security organization, to work during the Republican National Convention and other summer programs, both in the city and out. Amori listed the pay as $1.75 per hour plus time and one-half for overtime.

The college placement center will remain open during the summer session. Hours of operation will range from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Ram Relay 2nd In State

Volume 58, No. 12 WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1964 Page 4

Five Tracksters Score In State Championships

By Fred Wales

Breaking their own record, the Ram 440-yard relay team placed a stunning second to lead San Francisco to the fourteenth spot in the State Track Championships last Saturday at Modesto.

Oliver Mitchell, Paul Richard, Tom Gardner, and Vern Bradford ran the 440 distance in 41.9 seconds to break their own mark of 42.3 set last week in the NorCal meet at Santa Rosa.

Despite their record breaking performance the Rams were edged by Oakland as the T-Birds posted a new State Meet mark of 41.6 seconds.

Gardner supplemented his relay score with a fifth place in the 220-yard dash. His time of 21.9 was off from last week's Ram mark of 21.7.

Pat Lewis was the fifth Ram to score as he placed in both the shot put and discus events.

His season's best of 52-5½ in the shot was good enough for a fifth place followed by his discus toss of 162 feet for a fourth.

Out of the 34 teams that scored these were the top 20: Santa Ana 48, San Bernardino 42½, Fresno 36, Oakland 31½, College of Sequoias 25¾, Reedley 23, Contra Costa 22, Pierce 22, LA Valley 21, Chaffey 18, Cerritos 18, San Mateo 18, LA City 16, Modesto 14, San Francisco 14, Glendale 14, Hartnell 14, American River 13, Long Beach 12, and Orange Coast 10.

The meet capped a late surge by the Rams that started with the Conference Meet three weeks ago.

Injuries were the plague of the San Franciscans this season. Coach Lou Vasquez stated that this year more men were injured than in all his other years put together.

He cited Mitchell as an example. Mitchell injured his angle early in the season and didn't even run until the Conference meet. Although he set the All-City record in the high hurdles he never did get to run the hurdles this year.

In the field events it was like an epidemic as triple jump star Charles Gibson pulled a muscle, Leroy Woods the Rams' highjumper broke his jaw and Paul Dunson vacated the pole vault.

At the end of the season we were conceding 27 points in the field events as Pat Lewis was the sole competitor, Vasquez lamented.

The 440 relay was this year's surprise for Vasquez and he forsees a strong team again next year as three of its members will return and All-City sprint champ Bob Prince is expected to enroll here next year.

Gone from next year's team will be Ram stars Gardner, Lewis, Ozzie Norris and Gene Plotkin. All but Lewis hold Ram marks.

Then There Were Two

FORTUNATELY, THERE WILL BE THREE HOURS for the Associated Men Students' Sports Night tonight. The above caricature shows what would perhaps happen if only one hour were available for all the action. Basketball and boxing will be the live action offered as The Divine Ones will meet Zeta Phi Sigma for the intramural cage championship, and aspiring pugilists will vie for the fightingest fighter award.

Boxers Get Their Dukes Up For Tonight's Sports Night

Main evented by boxing matches, the semiannual Associated Men Student Sports Night, scheduled for 7:15 o'clock tonight in the men's gymnasium, will also feature film highlights of the 1963 World's Series and the intramural basketball championship playoff.

Participating in the manly art of self defense, lightweight division, are four 127-pounders, Ken Turner against William Logman and Mike Jay against Willie Hulme. Also fighting lightweight will be Artie Howard against Tuese Akiong, both weighing in at 140 pounds.

Tom Fox will be pitted against Mike Buhrz, both weighing 142, and 147-pound John Pagliaro and Jordan Rackerby will square away.

Four 155-pounders are scheduled to box in the middleweight division. Paul Fua will meet Tom Faison, and William Huebch will battle Paul Fatooh. In the same division, Tom Panetto will fight either Alex Tilds or Gerd Thomas in the 165-pound class.

Only one match is scheduled in the heavyweight division, the boxers weighing over 170 pounds. "Wild Red" Girerd will meet Ray Lynch.

The rounds will be three, one and one-half minute clashes for all matches.

In addition to the demonstrations of fisticuffs, there will be the playoff game for the AMS intramural basketball championship between The Divine Ones of the Independent league and Zeta Phi Sigma of the Fraternity league.

After the basketball match, a motion picture featuring the Highlights of the 1963 World Series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees will be shown.

Between activities there will be a 15-minute intermission in which free refreshments will be served and AMS President Roger Kaufman will present the awards of high scorer in each division of intramurals, individual trophies to the championship team players and a team trophy to the championship five.

Awards to the winner of each boxing match will be presented at the time of the bout as soon as the judges have compiled their decisions.

Activities are expected to end shortly after 10 p.m., and Kaufman urged all interested students to attend.

Bussanick, Kunkle Sign Major League Baseball Contracts

John "Butch" Bussanick and Russ Kunkie, both two-year Ram players, signed major league baseball contracts early this month.

Bussanick, slugging first sacker for the Rams in the 1963 and 1964 seasons, was rewarded for his diamond efforts with a contract by the St. Louis Cardinals. Kunkle's contract is with the Chicago White Sox.

Coach Ernie Domecus said they have the potential to make good.

Kunkle moved from his 1963 shortstop position to center field for the Rams in 1963, where he shared the San Francisco batting title with outfielder Mike Dunne with a mark of .333.

Bussanick, who termed his bonus contract, "substantial," will report to the rookie league in Sarasota, Florida, at the same time as Kunkle. Both are expected to leave California shortly following the end of the semester.

Bussanick batted .295 and .273 in his two-year stint with the Rams and just last week was elected to the Golden Gate All-Conference second team.

Kunkle came to City College from Balboa High School two years ago after being selected as All-City for the Buccaneers. Bussanick was also a member of the All-City team while playing for the Galileo High School Lions.

Kunkle, in addition to leading the team in hitting had 14 runs batted in and 13 walks while Bussanick led the team in triples with three.

Alex Darnes, Cleo Cofield Join College's 'Greats' As 1964 Hall Of Fame Members

Last week's balloting placed Cleo Cofield and Alex Darnes as 1964 members of the City College of San Francisco Sports Hall of Fame.

Cofield led the balloting with seven points. He was selected for his performance on the 1958-60 basketball teams as a starting forward. He was selected as All-Conference both years and led the Rams in scoring.

In 1960 he was voted Most-Valuable-Player and chosen a member of the All-Santa Maria Tournament team.

Darnes was a two-sport athlete but was selected for his efforts in track.

As a discus thrower on the 1961 and '62 track teams he set a Ram and national mark of 173 feet.

He won the Conference, NorCal and State titles to become the first Ram trackster to ever hold a national record.

His marks stood until last year when Les Mills of Foothill set a new conference and nation record of 187-5 in the discus.

Darnes was also on the football team both years and was second string All-Conference at the tackle position. Prior to his entrance here, Darnes was All-City in track and football at Polytechnic High School.

Judges for the selections were Ralph Hillsman, dean of men; Jack Gaddy, athletic director; Tom Wilson, health department, and Bill Fischer, counselor.

ALEX DARNES, newest member of the Ram Sports Hall of Fame, is shown in action on the field in 1961.

Foothill Plagues Successful Year Of Ram Netters

For the third year running, the City College netters captured the tennis title of the Golden Gate Conference, and although they did not win any of the three May tournaments, they did place second twice and third.

Each time, when victory was within reach, Rodney Kop and Dale MacGowan of the Foothill Owls squashed their hopes.

In the Golden Gate Conference tournament, played May 1-2 at the College of San Mateo, Ben Levy and Fred Suessmann went into the semifinals with Kop and MacGowan, but the Owls' stars won. The two Owls then went into the finals and met two more Rams, Vince Chinn and Lou Englestein. Foothill won this match too, and with it, the meet.

Then came the Northern California Tennis Championships played at Foothill on May 9. Suessmann upset MacGowan and went into the finals. Meanwhile, Chinn climbed all the way to the semifinals where he fell to Kop.

Here again was another chance for an all-Ram finals. Instead, Kop went into the finals and pushed over Suessmann. Again it was almost for City College, but not quite.

It was the same story in the state meet. Although the Rams finished in a respectable third place, they were only three points away from the big prize which was won by the Owls. In this meet Chinn and Englestein went to the doubles semifinals. Once again they met their old foes, Kop and MacGowan, and once again the Owls came out on top.

Possibly the most surprising highlight of this year's successful tennis season was Suessmann's 6-1, 2-6, 6-3 upset over the Foothill star, MacGowan.

Suessmann did not stop there, but went on to establish himself as the fourth best netter in the state.

1964 conference season statistics:

SINGLES: Brambila 5-0, Chinn 5-2, Englestein 6-0, Levy 4-1, Mike Price 3-0, and Suessmann 5-0.

DOUBLES: Chinn-Brambila 4-1, Suessmann-Englestein 1-1, and Suessman-Levy 4-0.
